200 PWA WORKS IN STATE OKAYED; COST $11,885,942

415 COMMUNITIES REQUEST U. S. AID

Georgia Ranks Third in Receipt of Federal Assistance in the South.

Public Works Administration announced yesterday that to date 200 Georgia projects have been approved by Administrator Harold L. Ickes and President Roosevelt. Scattered throughout the state, the projects will be built at an estimated cost of $11,855,942.

Regional Director H. T. Cole made the announcement, and said that outright grants of $5,335,173 have been made, and $382,665 of federal funds loaned to the applicants. Included in the figure were allottments made to 76 projects that were approved, but received no funds under the 1937 program.

To meet PWA requirements, work on the jobs must begin by January 1, and be finished within 18 months.

A tally, made after the deadline for receiving applications, midnight Friday, showed that 415 Georgia communities have applied for federal aid from the PWA since the beginning of the 1938 program. The latest applications are now being checked and filed, Cole said, and will be forwarded to Washington for approval or disapproval as soon as possible. The state as a whole has asked for federal grants of $27,086,515 and loans of $14,589,002 to finance a construction program of $60,213,278.

The administration was allotted approximately $960,000,000 by congress to distribute over the nation in grants and loans to stimulate industry and employment. The allotment is expected to start a nation-wide building program estimated at a billion and a half dollars.

The nine southern states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia filed a total of 2,062 applications with the regional office here for construction programs to cost $487,490,394. PWA grants of $218,433,218 and loans amounting

What Next in Europe? Answer From 5 Capitals

Men Who Reported Tremendous Events Of September's Heart-Stilling Days Cast Experienced Eyes Ahead

What next, after Munich? That is the question everyone is asking. But five experienced Associated Press chiefs of bureaus in the key centers of Europe and the continent—men who have covered the dramatic developments of recent weeks—present the picture.

Copyright, 1938, by The Associated Press.

Czechoslovakia, the "mosaic state" created in the World War, must find a new design for living.

Germany today is in Sudetenland with her goose-stepping army.

Within a week she will have a rim of Sudeten districts extending more than halfway around the war-born republic. Plebiscites shortly may give her a total of one-fifth of the population and land of the "mosaic state."

Poland strikes while the iron is hot for her piece of the shrinking state.

Before 2 p. m. (7 a. m. Atlanta time) today she is to get the part of the city of Teschen on the Czechoslovak side of the border and within ten days the remainder of the Teschen district and the entire district of Friestadt.

Hungary also has claims on Czechoslovakia for the Hungarians living there. Her problems remain to be settled.

Does the carving of Czechoslovakia set a precedent for more dickerings in troubled Europe?

Or has the idea of a New Deal with peace triumphant been inaugurated?

What about Hitler's pledge that Sudetenland constitutes his last demand for territory in Europe?

In all this:

Germany sees the way flung open to an eventual understanding with France, to the return of her colonies, to great economic gains. Some former German regions in Europe may fall into her lap like ripe plums—without Hitler violating his pledge.

Great Britain sees, despite the Hitler-Chamberlain declaration for peaceful consultation, she will have a big bill to pay to make peace last.

France sees Soviet Russia excluded from Europe's councils and the possibility she herself will be

MARCH ON MACON! TALMADGE URGES HIS SUPPORTERS

'Plenty of Room Even If You Aren't a Delegate,' Ex-Governor Says in Rallying for Conclave.

STATE CONVENTION OPENS WEDNESDAY

Delegates Named; Many Chosen by Howell Are Favorable to Talmadge.

Eugene Talmadge marshalled his forces yesterday for a march to Macon where Wednesday the state Democratic convention is scheduled to renominate Governor Rivers and Senator George, name a new chairman for the state Democratic executive committee and set up machinery to guide the destinies of the party during the next two years.

"I will be there and I am calling on my friends to be there," the ex-Governor said yesterday. "Whether my friends are delegates or not, they will find room in the Macon auditorium. The balconies will be opened to the public."

Talmadge himself has been invited to sit on the platform with the other former governors of the state. But he indicated yesterday that he will sit in the balcony "with my friends."

The ex-Governor is contesting the renomination of Senator George. He filed contests in 32 counties. The contests were dismissed by the county committees of the 32 counties and the actions of the various committees have been upheld by the retiring state Democratic executive committee.

There are numerous ways in which the Talmadge fight may be brought to the floor, the most certain of which would be the placing of the ex-Governor in nomination for the senate post.

Rivers leaders let it be known that they were adopting a hands-off policy on the Talmadge contest but the list of delegates from the counties carried by Hugh Howell in his governorship race showed a large number of Talmadge supporters and a Talmadge rally appeared certain.

The 820 delegates and alternates to the convention were named yesterday by Governor Rivers, Howell and J. J. Mangham, of Bremen.

The Governor, who carried 101

Gray-clad German legions began a bloodless conquest of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland yesterday (Saturday).

(A copyrighted United Press story said that German troops marched across the frontier of Czechoslovakia in a barrage of flowers instead of bullets.

(Peasants in wooden shoes cheered and tossed flowers at the steel-helmeted soldiers.

(Nazi flags — long hidden — flapped over the village of Kuschward as troops goose-stepped smartly beneath a crude and hastily erected arch of triumph.

(Bands played. Armored cars, artillery caissons, machine-gun units and anti-tank guns rumbled ahead of lines of refugees on foot, on bicycles, in ox carts and in automobiles as Sudeten Germans came home rejoicing.)

Poland made ready to take over her slice of the dwindling republic.

In Washington two Democratic senators proposed that President Roosevelt call an international peace conference—

And in troubled Europe, calculating the enormous cost of its latest war scare, wondered what the future held.

Out of the upheaval of the past few weeks Germany, who came through with most of her demands met, foresees an eventual understanding with France, the return of colonies, fulfillment of her long cherished dream of economic penetration of the Balkans.

Britain, despite the double-barrelled fruits of the Munich conference—partition of Czechoslovakia and the Hitler-Chamberlain declaration for peace—figures she will have to pay dearly for lasting peace.

It already has cost her a cabinet resignation — Alfred Duff Cooper, first lord of the admiralty,

'NO' TO COTTON AID AROUSES SOLONS

George Declines To Comment on F.D.R.'s Refusal To See Lawmakers.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—In answer to refusal of President Roosevelt to see a committee of senators, representatives and growers from 14 cotton states yesterday or today, in regard to their demand for an increase in loans on the staple, Senator George, of Georgia, one of the committee, said he did not contact the White House and did not ask for a conference with the President.

"However," he explained today before leaving for Atlanta, "I did expect Mr. Roosevelt to see the committee selected by our conference upon a matter of such vital importance to the south."

Other than this, Senator George, one of three senators President Roosevelt sought to "purge" in recent state primaries for renomination to the congress, would not comment on Mr. Roosevelt's flat denial of an audience with the cotton representatives.

The full cotton conference committee, of which another attempted "purgee," Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, is chairman, was thoroughly aroused over the President's tart "no" to their appeal for a talk with Mr. Roosevelt on the desired loan, even in the face of a belated statement of Presidential Secretary Early this

Husband Tells How Wife Met 'Mercy' Death

Man Confesses That Mate Begged for End to Her Sufferings.

HEWLETT, N. Y., Oct. 1.—(AP)—In mumbled phrases, Harry Johnson, 65, a retired oyster dealer, tonight told Nassau county authorities the story of a "mercy death" that ended the suffering of his cancer-afflicted wife.

Even as District Attorney Edward Neary moved to bring first degree murder charges against him, the husband poured out details of the soul-trying ordeal:

"... Getting rapidly worse ... unbearable agony for weeks and months ... she begged me to do it ... begged me over and over again. ... She knew what I was doing. ... Her eyes were happy at the last, and she smiled ..."

So Detective Inspector Harold King quoted Johnson as saying in statements after his voluntary surrender.

The victim, Mrs. Jennie A. Johnson, 67, was found dead in a blanket-sealed bedroom of their home. A 150-foot length of garden hose attached to a gas main had carried lethal fumes to the improvised death chamber.

Johnson had said a New York cancer specialist had told him the case was incurable.

King said Johnson insisted his wife watched him from her bed of pain while he brought the hose into the room, sealed the windows and doors then kissed her goodbye and went to the cellar to turn on the gas.

The detective said Johnson told him it took him two weeks to make the decision and to prepare the hose. They had been married 40 years.

PRAGUE GIVES IN TO POLISH CLAIMS

(Copyright, 1938, by United Press.)

TESCHEN, Czech-Polish Frontier, Oct. 1.—Leaders of Czech and Polish military forces on the border met tonight to work out details of Poland's occupation of the Teschen minority areas ceded grudingly at the eleventh hour today by Czechoslovakia.

The Czechoslovak government, moving fast after its capitulation to Warsaw's demands for return of her former Silesian lands, sent its border commander to Krakau, 10 miles from Teschen, to meet the Polish military chief.

Troops to March.

Reliable observers believed the conference was but a formality, and predicted that on a basis of friendly understanding the Polish troops might cross the frontier tonight.

The time limit for Poland's occupation of the territory taken from her in 1919 expires at 2 p. m. Sunday (7 a. m. Atlanta time).

Word of the Czech surrender reached this border area as the main body of Poland's 500,000 troops awaited an order to march into Silesia. Marching orders had been expected by noon (5 a. m. Atlanta time), the zero hour for cession set by Warsaw last night.

Under the terms of the accepted ultimatum, the Czechs were obliged to make a token withdrawal of their troops from Teschen as soon as possible. The Poles thereupon will occupy the territory by progressive stages beginning Sunday and ending October 10.

An international commission will draw up a new frontier later,

Atlanta Business Leaders See Prosperity Returning

Officials Believe New Peace Pacts in Europe Will Prove Beneficial.

By LUKE GREENE.

As Europe put its house in order yesterday in preparation for an era of peace, many Atlanta leaders scanned the business horizon and saw a promising picture of returning prosperity.

Men who keep their fingers on the pulse of the nation were asked to give their views on the outlook for business following the recent developments in Europe. Their opinions were requested on these questions:

(1) What effect do you believe the four-power pact, the Anglo-German alliance and other peace accomplishments of the past week in Europe will have on business? and

(2) Do you believe that world peace will stimulate commerce?

Considerably relieved that the worst crisis since 1914 had passed the businessmen were practically unanimous in their belief that the negotiations for peace would result in a general business upswing throughout the world, especially in Europe and the United States.

And as for Atlanta and its immediate trade area, they are of the opinion it faces the brightest

SUDDEN SHAKEUP HITS U.S. TREASURY

Morgenthau Forces First Deputy Diggs, Deputy Oppergard to Quit Office

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP) Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. in a dramatically sudden shakeup of the comptroller of currency's office, forced the resignation of two top-ranking officials and appointed his special assistants to one of the vacancies, it became known today.

Differences over banking policies, subject of bitter behind-the-scenes conflict in the treasury, were understood to be the cause of Morgenthau's action.

The secretary Friday afternoon demanded the resignation of Marshall R. Diggs, first deputy comptroller who has been acting comptroller since April, and G. J. Oppegard, deputy comptroller. He gave them 24 hours to quit. They presented their resignations yesterday and today Morgenthau appointed his special assistant, Cyril B Upham, as first deputy comptroller.

Appointment Announced.

In announcing Upham's appointment, Morgenthau emphasized he was doing so only at the request of the incoming Comptroller, Preston Delano. Delano recently was named by President Roosevelt to fill the vacancy cre-

200,000 Expected To See Panorama of Events at Lakewood Park.

Atlanta's greatest annual event, the Southeastern fair, will open its gates at 1 o'clock this afternoon for an eight-day showing at Lakewood park. More than 200,000 spectators are expected to witness a panorama of the south's livestock, agriculture and industrial development, during the eight days and nights.

The National Livestock Show, an open competition affair and bringing more than $100,000 worth of purebred livestock here, is being featured in the 24th edition of the Southeastern fair.

The livestock show will be housed in one of the $150,000 permanent fireproof structures which has been made into the most modern cattle barn in the United States. The new quarters replace the former dilapidated "fire trap" barns which have been torn down.

Another big feature of this year's fair is the mammoth parking area which can care for some 6,000 automobiles at one time. The new area takes in the former space of the cattle and swine barns and adjacent grounds and all the for-

COUNCIL TAKES UP DR. REED'S REPORT, SAFETY TOMORROW

Survey May Be Filed for 'Future Reference and Information.'

Action on the Reed report will be one of the principal issues facing city council at its session tomorrow afternoon.

Council will have before it the recommendation of the ordinance and legislative committee that the report, made after a six-month survey by Dr. Thomas H. Reed, nationally known municipal expert, be "filed for future reference and information."

The committee's action Thursday drew protest from Mayor Hartsfield and the citizens' survey committee of the Chamber of Commerce. City department heads criticized severely the majority of recommendations Dr. Reed made regarding changes in their departments.

Safety Ordinance.

Safety ordinances, designed to eliminate fire and elevator hazards, are also scheduled to be considered by council. Three proposed measures, calling for installation of automatic fire alarms and sprinkler systems in buildings which are hazardous, and for bringing elevator construction up to the levels of the American Standards Association, all have the approval of the ordinance committee.

The proposals for fire safety were drawn by a special committee following the disaster of the Terminal hotel, where 35 persons lost their lives when the building burned.

Council members said these measures were assured of passage.

Peachtree Widening.

Among other matters to be considered are:

Appointment of Paul Chipman, city investigator, to negotiate for rights of way for widening of Peachtree street from North avenue to Fifteenth street, as proposed by Councilman John A. White.

A change in the milk ordinance to allow dairymen outside the city to pasterurize their milk for sale within the city.

A resolution by Councilman J. Allen Couch to abandon daylight saving time each fall on the first Sunday of September instead of the last Sunday. Under the present ordinance Atlanta goes off daylight saving time on the same date as do all other cities in the country using the time-saving system.

Two resolutions requesting annexation of a small plot in West End and the power to call elections on annexations. Authority must be granted by the legislature.

A resolution by White to authorize rewriting of the city's outmoded charter.

HALL OF HEALTH FEATURED AT FAIR

Outstanding Attraction To Be 'Transparent Woman.'

The Camp "Transparent Woman," made in Dresden, Germany, at a cost of $20,000 will be an outstanding feature of the exhibits in the Hall of Health during the Southeastern Fair.

The figure is constructed entirely of a transparent plastic known as "cellhorn" and makes every organ of the body clearly visible. It is illuminated by 20 sets of lamps which are turned on during the demonstrations and explanatory talks.

It is estimated that more than 4,000,000 persons have seen the figure since it was brought to this country in 1936. Dr. C. C. Aven, president of the Fulton County Medical Society, states that the purpose of the exhibit is to promote a better knowledge and understanding of the human body and how it functions.

RECALL OF FOREIGNERS WILL START IN SPAIN

HENDAYE, France.—(At the Spanish Frontier.)—Oct. 1.—(AP) Spanish government spokesmen said today that machinery for evacuation of foreign volunteers from Barcelona's army probably would start running next week when a League of Nations supervisory committee is expected to arrive.

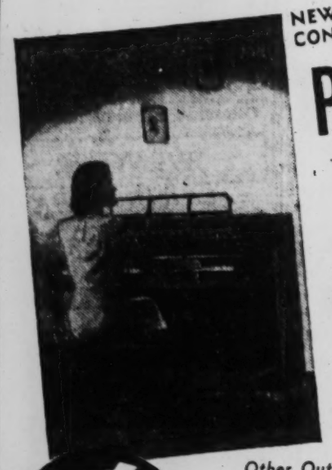

There were reports of only intermittent air raids today by both sides of the civil war as parliament met at Barcelona and approved Premier Juan Negrin's decision to evacuate foreign warriors. In Geneva, a special League committee met to appoint a board of neutral supervisors.

SOUTHEASTERN FAIR WILL OPEN TODAY

200,000 Expected To See Panorama of Events at Lakewood Park.

mer "wastes" near the creek at the South Pryor street entrance.

New fences and new turnstiles have been provided much nearer and exhibit buildings for the convenience of the spectators. There will be two big automobile entrances on South Pryor road and the turnstile entrances are on the two walkways leading to the three exhibit buildings, for the automobile patrons and at the two old places for streetcar and bus patrons.

Harry Brown, a native Georgian and assistant secretary of agriculture for the United States, will be a visitor in Atlanta next week and will be guest of Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern fair, Monday and Tuesday.

Recognizing the importance of the fair and National Livestock Show, the National Farm and Home Hour will be broadcast at noon Monday from the Livestock building at the fair, through WSB. Everett Mitchell will be in charge of the program.

Othens on Program.

Others on the Farm and Home Hour will be Dean Chapman, of the State College of Agriculture, Athens; Lambdin Kay, Ernest Rogers, Mike Benton, Governor Rivers and Tap Bennett, superintendent of the cattle and swine departments at the fair.

Mickey Martin, "King of the Daredevil" drivers and his "gang" will be featured in today's amusement program at 2:30 o'clock on the race track. Martin will drive a regular stock automobile through a burning wall, jump over two trucks, jump over several automobiles and many other daredevil stunts. He also will perform on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday again.

New Innovation.

A new innovation in fireworks—a three-ring circus, featuring all the regular stunts, all in animated fireworks—will be featured every night at 9 o'clock. The fireworks circus will take place on the race track in front of the grandstand and will be augmented by the fireworks statues across the lake.

Vernon Gyer, well-known recording electric organ artist, has been signed for three performances each day except Sunday. He will play from 10 to 11, 3 to 4 and 8 to 9, each day in the Liberal Arts building. His programs will be broadcast daily over the radio.

Georgia Pressmen will have their annual general get-together next Saturday in Georgia Press Day. A big barbecue dinner will be served in the log cabin across the lake from the park. G. M. A's band, under the direction of Colonel Woodward, will give two special concerts, honoring Georgia's newspaper editors and employes.

S. H. ARCHER GIVEN MOREHOUSE HONOR

Retiring College Head Is Appointed President Emeritus.

Appointment of Samuel Howard Archer as president emeritus of Morehouse College was announced yesterday by Kendall Weisiger, chairman of the board of trustees.

President Archer has been on leave of absence for nearly two years on account of ill health and retired from office yesterday. The retirement marks the end of 33 years of service during which time he has been professor of mathematics, football coach, secretary of the faculty, director of the summer school, purchasing agent, dean, acting president and president.

A native of Petersburg, Va., President Archer attended public schools there and continued his education at Wayland Academy in Washington, D. C. Later he attended Colgate University, graduating in 1902 with an A. B. degree. In 1923 he received the honorary degree of master of arts from Morehouse College and in 1932 he was awarded the degree of doctor of divinity by Colgate.

DRUGGIST'S WIFE MAKES DISCOVERY

Speaks Up and Tells What She Found Out While Helping Husband.

"My husband manages May's Cut-Rate Drug Store, at No. 114 Whitehall street, here in Atlanta," said Mrs. Harry Lefkoff recently, "and so you can understand that I see and hear about a great many different medicines. I sometimes help out at the store during rush hours, and in this way have an opportunity to hear what people say about various medicines they buy.

"Last winter I saw so many people buying your medicine, Mentho-Mulsion, and speaking so highly of it, that I finally took a bottle home to see if it would relieve me of a bad cough which I had following a cold. After taking a few doses of it I could understand why everyone spoke so highly of it. The large amount of menthol you use in Mentho-Mulsion opened up my head and bronchial tubes almost immediately, and I felt better at once. My cough entirely disappeared after a day or so. We now keep Mentho-Mulsion on hand at all times, and start taking it at the first sign of a cough or cold. I am writing you this because I think everyone should know about this splendid medicine."—(adv.)

Newly Organized Emory Student Groups Study Needs of Family, Home

These Co-Eds, Six Male Members, Insist Idea Not Frivolous.

Two unusual organizations have sprung to life on the campus of Emory University—"Future Mothers of America" and "Future Fathers of America."

And the present members, three co-eds and six male students, insist that the "idea is not frivolity."

"Family and home is serious business," explained Walter Cottingham, of Greenville, S. C., president of Fathers, "and demands serious study and attention. That's what our program will be built around."

Ninette Carter, founder and president of the Mothers, was equally serious, saying:

"Our purpose is to preserve the family circle, and to perpetuate the patriotic traditions of young manhood and young womanhood."

Miss Carter also revealed that the idea was her own "brain child." She immediately signed to membership Genevieve Woodward and Lucille Dennison. Others are expected to follow within a short time.

Cottingham said that when he heard of formation of the "Future Mothers," it struck him that "Future Fathers" were a necessary complement.

Thus his group was organized, with the present membership consisting of Dick Garrett, of Montgomery, Ala.; Glen Summerlin, of Gainesville, Fla.; Charles Milwaine and Lew Gordon, both of Atlanta, and Guy Whitenton, of Macon.

Colors of the twin organizations are pink and blue. The password is "Ga." Active members wear silver safety pins, while pledges wear small gold safety pins.

Miss Carter said membership in both groups "probably will grow rapidly," and that pledge training will include taking a course in sociology.

"That," she explained, "is so we all may be better prepared to see our problems and to do our duty."

Constitution Staff Photo.—Wilson.

The family and home demand serious study, according to these Emory University students, who have formed two unusual organizations—"Future Mothers of America" and "Future Fathers of America." The purpose of the organizations is to "preserve the family circle." Members of the newly-organized groups who were photographed as they read a book called, "The Family," are, left to right, Walter Cottingham, Vinette Carter, Dick Garrett, Genevieve Woodward and Glen Summerlin.

WATERWORKS GRANT IS SOUGHT BY DEKALB

A $2,000,000 waterworks addition for DeKalb county was included yesterday in a new application for PWA funds filed by Charles A. Matthews, DeKalb county commissioner.

Matthews asked for a $900,000 grant for the project, which he said would be guaranteed through certificates issued against proceeds from the completed undertaking and would not entail any increase in county taxes.

Primarily, the project is designed to supply water for the northern section of the county, but it was pointed out that it also will be utilized to supplement the Decatur waterworks.

"The project will be self-liquidating," Matthews said, "and will be a source of convenience and comfort to a large number of potential water users in DeKalb county."

Annual Forget-Me-Not Sale Day For Veterans Set for Thursday

Proceeds From Drive Will Be Used To Aid Disabled World War Soldiers and Their Families; Governor Rivers Indorses Program.

Atlanta will come across Thursday for those who went across 20 years ago by wearing a forget-me-not in the annual sale to aid the disabled veterans of the World War.

Proceeds from the sale of the flowers will be used for relief of the disabled and their families and is under the sponsorship of the D. A. V., a congressionally chartered organization of veterans formed in 1920, which includes veterans who were wounded, gassed, injured or disabled as a result of honorable service in 1917-18.

The drive was given the personal indorsement yesterday of Governor Rivers, who urged every Atlantan to buy a flower to aid. The Governor declared:

"Next Thursday Atlanta will observe Forget-Me-Not Day. These little blue flowers which will be sold to the public by the women of Atlanta as our remembrance of 'hose mens' service to us, will help them now. We cannot truly honor the dead unless we serve the living, and we revere the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice.

"The D. A. V. renders humanitarian service in this drive, and I, in turn, urge the people of Atlanta to be generous in their donations next Thursday for the support of the cause by wearing a forget-me-not."

Members of the Betty Harrison Jones and Morton Turnbull Nicholes chapters are sponsoring the campaign, which has had the annual indorsement of every president since Woodrow Wilson.

Hundreds of volunteer workers will sell flowers Thursday under the direction of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general chairman, and Mrs. Homer Carmichael, co-chairman. Various women's organizations are co-operating in the sale as well as the Alonzo Richardson Bible Class.

SWEDISH MODERN

This Autumn a new style takes the stage! Straight lines give way to graceful curves! And Davison's is proud to be the first in Atlanta to bring you "Swedish Modern"! A new, graceful, livable Modern with the warm friendliness of Early American designs, plus the gracious dignity of 18th century English. Inspired by designs, colors and textures so important in Sweden, it has borrowed freely from other periods and other nations. Now it emerges—a star in its own right. From this moment on you will hear "Swedish Modern" on every side. It will take its rightful place among other established styles which Americans have taken to their hearts and made their own!

SWEDISH MODERN takes its place at the luncheon table. This luncheon set of decided character is of pure linen, with picturesque peasant scenes and framed with wide borders of blue, deep coral or burgundy. Linens, Second Floor. Napkins, 6 for 1.19. Mats, 29c ea. Runner, 59c

POTTERY PIG bearing a pert little plant to add an amusing note to your Swedish Modern coffee table. Round, fat and sleek he'll stand rooted to his erstwhile burden. (The plants, of course, come separately priced). White, green or brown. Garden Service, Fourth Floor. 69c

A SHINING LIGHT for your Swedish Modern decorative scheme. Fashioned of great, thick crystal blocks. Topped with pure silk hand-sewn shade it makes a perfect lamp for use on an end table beside a large chair. Stands 19½" tall from base to round crystal ball finial. Lamps. Fifth Floor. 14.95

REFLECTED GLORY will greet your eye in this classically plain and modern mirror when it adorns the wall of a Swedish Modern setting. Perfectly plain, and perfectly round with neat triple-beveled edge carrying out the flow of lines so evident in the present-day trend. Fifth Floor. 19.95

"THE WHITE CLOWN," by the famous Renow. The boy clown wearing a soft coral-pink ruff collar poses against a mottled blue background. Beautifully framed in natural finish wood. Only one of many Swedish Modern pictures in our extensive collection. Fourth Floor. 1.98

QUAINT CHARM similar to that found in our beloved Early American pieces is the keynote of this Swedish modern wing chair. As comfortable in use as it is pleasing to behold. Covered in the decidedly textured fabric and the soft pastel coloring so important in the trend. Fifth Floor. 59.95

FERN LEAF, a new Mohawk pattern, and one that forms a perfect background for Swedish Modern. A two-toned effect combining dark and light blue; brown and taupe; deep dark green and light green to blend harmoniously with Swedish Modern. Shown a 9x12 ft. Rugs, Fifth Floor. 59.95

SWEDISH MODERN LAMP reflecting the trend of color and texture. Massive in proportion is the soft turquoise pottery base studded with white which smacks of a similar charm as found in our beloved Early American hobnail glassware. The large stretched shade is of rough, homespun texture, bound at top and bottom with thick cut-chenille. The turquoise repeated in the finial. Lamps, Fourth Floor. 22.50

DECIDED TEXTURE and soft color harmony are the keynotes in Swedish Modern draperies! The drapery shown is a rich nubby weave with an air of homespun . . . the deftly woven plaid combines soft shades of blues, light grey. white and coral . . . the whole in perfect complement to the light woods of Swedish Modern. ## EXHIBIT OF DAHLIAS PLANNED THURSDAY

Garden Clubs Throughout State Are Expected To Enter Flowers.

The annual dahlia show sponsored by the Dahlia Society of Georgia will be held Thursday at the Biltmore hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Garden clubs throughout the state are planning to enter exhibits at the show, which officials say will be the best in the society's history. As the clubs usually have many exhibits, a large space has been reserved for their flowers.

All entries are to be made before 11:30 o'clock Thursday, as entry lists will close at that hour and the judging will begin immediately.

The dahlia exhibits will be open to the public, after the judging, between 2 and 10 o'clock. Hundreds of Atlantans and Georgia lovers of flowers attend the show.

Dahlia growers were said by officials to be much encouraged after the recent and much-needed rainfall, and many gardens which had taken on a drab and parched appearance are now showing a freshness and an abundance of prospective blooms, lending promise to a plentiful supply for the dahlia show.

MONAGAHAN QUITS BOARD OF REGENTS

Had Only Recently Been Reinstated by Court.

John Monagahan, of Pelham, yesterday resigned as a member of the board of regents of the University system and Governor Rivers named J. D. Gardner, of Camilla, to the post.

Monagahan was one of those removed from the board by a legislative act early this year only to be restored when the supreme court invalidated the act.

Governor Rivers accepted his resignation yesterday without comment. Gardner had held the post while the Pelham man was off the board during the litigation growing out of the invalidated act.

Clear blue eyes twinkling, the general said he would not give his grandchildren advice on how to live a long life. "I can't because I never expected to live this long myself," he laughed.

General Driver is living with his daughter at present, but intends to move back to the Old Soldiers' Home by November 1.

"I can do more as I please out there and the folks are mighty fine to me," he declared.

presents a revolutionary contribution to products of RUBBER

HEALTH-GARD
TRADE MARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

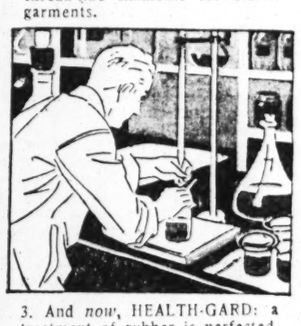

In the history of rubber and its service to mankind, three important discoveries have been made:

1. A famous scientist accidentally dropped some sulphur and some rubber on a hot stove, discovered that rubber could be vulcanized and used in a wide number of wear-resistant articles.

2. Scientific research within the last generation disclosed how to transport liquid rubber — and how to draw rubber into fine thread-like filaments for elastic garments.

3. And now, HEALTH-GARD: a treatment of rubber is perfected, endowing it with antiseptic, non-irritating, deodorizing and anti-acid properties.

The introduction of HEALTH-GARD RUBBER FABRIC PRODUCTS is an announcement of vital scientific and practical interest to everyone—because HEALTH-GARD brings new sanitary properties, new protection to you and your children. HEALTH-GARD RUBBER is:

1. ANTISEPTIC combats the growth of germs and bacteria.

2. NON-IRRITATING worn in contact with the body, does not irritate normal skins.

3. DEODORIZING worn in contact with the body, combats unpleasant body odors.

4. ANTI-ACID worn in contact with the body, tends to neutralize acid body wastes.

Seven years of scientific research has resulted in this revolutionary discovery.

There is only one HEALTH-GARD RUBBER and only one HEALTH-GARD RUBBERIZING process. You'll find HEALTH-GARD PRODUCTS in Atlanta only at Davison's. They contain, so far as we know, the only rubber known which has antiseptic, non-irritating, deodorizing and anti-acid properties.

The application of these sanitary properties in rubber to the service of the consumer kindles the imagination. HEALTH-GARD promises to be actively helpful and useful in scores of ways.

One of the first self-evident fields of great usefulness, as well as one of the most urgent, is for garments and articles which are to be used in contact with the sensitive skin of babies. ALL HEALTH-GARD products are developed by scientists, designed by specialists . . . to combine safety and serviceability.

MARCH ON MACON! TALMADGE URGES

counties and obtained 282 unit votes, named 564 delegates and alternates. Howell, who carried 57 counties with 126 unit votes, named 252 delegates and alternates, and Mangham, who carried one county, Haralson, named four delegates and alternates.

Chief among the delegates in the Howell ranks is the group from Fayette county, headed by ex-Senator Charles D. Redwine, whom Talmadge supported for Governor in 1936. In this delegation also will be the veteran legislative leader, John Wesley Culpepper, who yesterday was said to have been named the Talmadge floor leader at Macon.

Even from Senator George's home county of Dooly the delegation is made up of men known for their sympathy to the Talmadge cause.

On the other hand the list of delegates named by Governor Rivers includes a few well-known George supporters, including Judge A. B. Lovett, of Savannah, a George lawyer during the recent contests, and John Wesley Weekes, of Decatur, a leader of the George campaign in DeKalb county.

The retiring committee chairman, Charles S. Reid, is listed as a Rivers delegate from Fulton county and is expected to place the Governor in renomination. Senator George has not announced who will renominate him.

Judge Ben Gaillard, of Gainesville, is to be temporary chairman and keynoter of the convention.

The permanent chairman of the convention, who by custom becomes chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee for the next two years, has not been chosen. Reid has announced his retirement only informally. Most of the talk regarding the new chairman revolves around Jim L. Gillis, of Soperton, at present a member of the highway board, and Zack Arnold, of Fort Gaines, state auditor, and now a committee vice chairman.

Should Gillis be elected permanent chairman, the naming of Arnold as vice chairman appears a certainty.

Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, of Eatonton, prominent state civic leader, is slated to be named vice chairman.

Vice Chairman George L. Googe, of Savannah, American Federation of Labor executive, is to be re-elected as is Mrs. Fred A. Stowe, of Toccoa, committee secretary. John L. Greer Jr., of Lakeland, will be named assistant secretary and reading clerk to succeed Lon Sullivan, who is retiring because he holds a state office.

Retiring Chairman Reid heads the Fulton delegation which also contains the following delegates:

Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution; Chairman Hughes Spalding, of the Fulton County Democratic committee; Ivan Allen Sr., chairman of the Fulton County Re-Elect Rivers Club; County Commissioner George Longino and H. E. Ivey, labor leader.

The Fulton alternates include Rufus Johns, secretary of the Georgia Federation of Labor; Mrs. Max E. Land, H. C. Fabian, County Attorney Walter C. Hendrix, D. B. Blalock and County School Superintendent Jere A. Wells.

From DeKalb county, the following will represent the Governor:

Delegates: W. L. Cobb, G. W. Glausier, H. H. Howard, Scott Candler, County Commissioner C. A. Mathews and John Wesley Weekes.

Alternates: B. H. Burgess, Senator Paul Lindsay, John P. Tuggle, William Hopkins, W. C. Shepherd and D. B. Scott.

Mangham Names His Two Delegates

John J. Mangham, defeated candidate for governor in the Georgia primary, yesterday named his delegates to the state convention.

Mangham carried one county and is entitled under regulations to name the delegates from this county. They follow:

HARALSON—G. F. Dodson, Buchanan; J. J. Mangham Jr., Bremen. Alternates: D. B. Howe, Tallapoosa; W. O. Strickland, Buchanan.

36 More Counties Name Judges In Plant-to-Prosper Competition

More than one-third of Georgia's 159 counties yesterday were ready for the judging in The Atlanta Constitution's Plant-to-Prosper program as 36 additional counties named their judging committees, pushing the total already reported to 49.

The Constitution will give 33 cash awards, totaling $4,000; eight silver trophies and 577 other recognitions to the state's outstanding farmers. In addition, planters in 19 of the counties will vie for cash and other awards amounting to another $4,000.

BLAZE DESTROYS $150,000 CHURCH

Paint Spreads Fire Over Little Rock Edifice.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Fire of undetermined origin early today destroyed with a $150,000 loss Little Rock's historic Christ church, mother church of the Arkansas Episcopal diocese.

Fresh paint and varnish with which the church interior had just been refinished at a cost of $4,000, helped spread the flames through the handsome Gothic structure in the heart of downtown Little Rock.

Workmen labored late today to raze the blackened brick walls of the 150-foot belfry, regarded as a menace to traffic after the fire.

The Christ Church centennial celebration, set for next spring, was ordered postponed until a new building is completed.

FORD MAY PURCHASE 50,000 TONS OF STEEL

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The Cleveland News says the Ford Motor Company is asking for prices on 50,000 tons of steel bars, strip and plate for use in 1939 automobiles soon to roll from assembly lines.

It is the largest inquiry for automotive steel reaching the steel trades so far this season, the newspaper said, pointing out large orders have come from the Plymouth division of Chrysler Corporation and from the Buick division of General Motors Corporation.

ated by the resignation last April of J. F. T. O'Connor.

Upham is one of the country's outstanding banking and credit authorities. He has a wide circle of friends on Capitol Hill, where he served as Morgenthau's liaison with congress and the treasury.

Both Diggs and Oppegard will continue in government service as members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation legal staff. Diggs intends to remain with the FDIC until the end of the year and then return to private law practice. Both were appointed to the comptroller's office on recommendation of O'Connor.

Letter to Morgenthau.

Although Diggs declined to discuss the shakeup, it was learned that he bitterly resented the manner in which his resignation was demanded. In a letter to Morgenthau, dated September 30, he wrote:

"In compliance with your request delivered verbally yesterday afternoon by your special assistant, Mr. Cyril B. Upham, I hereby tender to you my resignation as first deputy comptroller of the currency, effective October 1, 1938.

"It was my intention to hand in my resignation to the incoming comptroller when and as he took his oath of office, since it was my feeling that a comptroller should recommend and name his deputies."

Upham was sworn in this afternoon. Delano did not take the oath because, he said, he wanted to clean up his work at the Federal Home Loan Bank board, of which he is a governor.

morning that Mr. Roosevelt could not see them because of an important cabinet meeting and other prearranged appointments.

Smith Statement.

In a lengthy statement dictated just prior to his leaving for South Carolina this evening, Senator Smith said:

"What Secretary Wallace and those around him seem to fail to appreciate is that cotton is the currency of the south, and when the price is pegged by the federal government at 8 cents a pound, it means economic disaster. We have heard much in recent months about 'the nation's economic problem No. 1.' Those who show so much apparent concern for the south can now by a nod of the head or a stroke of the pen bring real relief to the southern states by exercising the power which congress has given them. My promise to the cotton farmers is that if the administration does not do this before congress meets, then, as chairman of the senate committee on agriculture, I will do everything in my power to pass mandatory legislation at the next session to relieve the cotton south from the disaster that now confronts it. We are now confronted with a desperate situation and I believe in calling a spade a spade, and not a damn shovel."

Although turned down by both the White House and the Department of Agriculture in their endeavors to save cotton growers of Georgia and the southeast from "threatened bankruptcy," Senator George left Washington just as determined that his appeal for an increased loan was a justifiable one as when he first approached the administration with his plea last July.

"For Two Reasons."

"I came to Washington this time for two reasons," the senator declared. "First, to urge a three-cents-per-pound subsidy payment on the 1938 cotton crop to be made immediately and without condition so far as future years are concerned or in lieu of subsidy, an increase in our 8.30 cents cotton loan so that it would approximately 75 per cent of parity price, or 11.75 cents a pound; secondly, to call upon Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry L. Brown and Jesse W. Tapp, of the AAA, and insist upon the waiver of all penalties against farmers of Jenkins, Burke and other Georgia counties, who, it is alleged, have overplanted corn acreage during 1938. Waiver of such penalties to farmers in many counties in Georgia means a great deal in benefit payments.

"I apparently failed in my first errand, for the time being, at least, but I was assured by Mr. Brown and Mr. Tapp that they would go carefully and fully into the matter of penalties, especially in the light of new information I brought to them. I am now convinced the department will conclude Georgia farmers have not planted an excess acreage in corn and other feed crops, and that penalties will not be assessed."

No Increase.

In answer to a direct question by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, as to whether the department would grant an increased loan, Assistant Secretary Brown frankly said that the department would not.

"I don't see any possibility of increasing the 8.30 cents loan," Brown declared. "The department has already exercised its discretion in granting the 8.30 loan, and it still thinks that is all it can lend."

In face of this refusal, Senator Harrison read a telegram from Oscar Johnston, former head of the government's cotton pool and now managing plantations in Mississippi, which read:

"At Senator Smith's conference I suggest consideration be given to urging Secretary Wallace to increase the quota allocated to cotton of the $212,000,000 appropriated for cotton adjustment payments with respect to 1938 crop to the extent of 30 or 40 million dollars to be taken from next year's customs collections. This will require no legislation and will permit adjustment payments of approximately 3 cents on same basis as adjustment payments now being made with respect to 1937 crop. This would require no legislative enactment."

Before adjourning, the conference went into executive session and unanimously adopted the following resolution, a copy of which was forwarded to Secretary Wallace:

"The farmers and allied lines have met throughout the south and sent representatives to this gathering. After giving consideration to all the facts, it is the sense of this conference that unless a subsidy payment of 3 cents a pound on cotton produced in 1938 is made to the farmers, or a loan payment approximating 75 per cent of the parity price is made to the farmers, the entire farm program will be seriously jeopardized. The financial condition of the cotton farmers is in as desperate plight as it has been at any time during the depression.

"This resolution was unanimously adopted by senators and congressmen and cotton growers from 14 cotton-growing states. As prompt action as possible on this is absolutely essential."

After Messrs. Brown and Tapp had finished their explanation of why the department could not grant an increased loan, Senator George said he thought too much emphasis was being placed by the government on the export situation and too little on the intent of the congress which had in view the obtaining of a fair price for cotton farmers.

"I voted for the 1938 act," he asserted, "to get a parity price on cotton. I still believe that an increased loan is the only way out for the farmer."

Senator George said he would remain over in Atlanta tomorrow and part of Monday before proceeding to his home in Vienna.

'Cotton Ed' Embittered by Roosevelt Rebuff

"Cotton Ed" Smith, South Carolina's fiery senator, roared an outburst at Secretary Wallace's assistants when southern senators failed to obtain an increase in the loan rate for farmers on the 1938 cotton crop. He warned the secretary of agriculture of the peril which jeopardized the administration's farm program.

CRASH HURTS FATAL TO MRS. J. E. KINNEY

Husband Is in 'Very Serious' Condition in Hospital Here.

Mrs. J. E. Kinney, of Cornelia, Ga., wife of the lessee of the Terminal hotel, which burned in May with heavy loss of life, died at a private hospital here last night of injuries received Thursday in a head-on collision with a whisky-running truck on the new Buford highway near the Gwinnett county line.

Mrs. Kinney had been in a coma for more than 24 hours and no hope had been held for her recovery since late Friday night.

Mr. Kinney, who was driving their car at the time of the crash, remained in a "very serious" condition yesterday, hospital attaches said. He suffered a fractured thigh and internal injuries.

The truck was driven by Preston Shaddix, 22, of Atlanta, who died a short time after the accident. Gwinnett county police said the truck contained 200 gallons of bootleg whisky and was traveling at a high rate of speed.

Shaddix's brother, Delvis, 18, who was riding with him, escaped with minor injuries and was arrested by Sheriff J. P. Mason, of Gwinnett county, on a charge of transporting illegal liquor.

Holbrook Funeral Home, of Cornelia, will announce arrangements for Mrs. Kinney.

Services for Preston Shaddix will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Flint Hill Baptist church, near Douglasville. Burial will be in the churchyard under the direction of Awtry & Lowndes.

Many Atlanta Business Leaders Foresee Return of Prosperity

fall trading season it has encountered in many years.

Although still a bit skeptical of Adolf Hitler, the Atlanta leaders think the Munich conference and the Anglo-German alliance are more indicative of permanent peace than any steps that have been taken since the eventful days of the World War.

Following are the opinions as expressed by the Atlanta businessmen:

E. S. GRANT, Stock Broker:

"The outlook for permanent peace should have a favorable effect on world economic and domestic conditions. It relieves the tension between the various countries and releases a tremendous amount of money used in war preparations.

"And with respect to domestic affairs, anything that affects any part of the world affects us. Business was already beginning to improve before the war scare started, and now I look for a substantial improvement in business this fall.

"The peace treaties will mean an increase in world trade, and that is what we must get back to. Furthermore, the negotiations will probably lead to further agreements that will cut down trade barriers."

W. F. BROADWELL, of Courts & Company:

"European affairs have been overshadowing everything else for the past few weeks. Perhaps now we can take our minds off Europe and put them to work in our businesses. I saw a definite indication that business was on the upturn before things got serious in Europe. It probably will pick up and go ahead now.

"The steps taken to preserve the peace have removed fear of what the consequences would have been had there been war. I believe we will now have several years of peaceful times throughout the world. The fact that peace exists will enable the nations of the world to devote their time and energies to commerce."

RAYMOND A. Kline, president and general manager of Davison-Paxon Company: "I certainly think the mental attitudes of people should be better now that we are not going to have war. The treaties will have a good effect in that we can now start thinking about Thanksgiving and Santa Claus instead of Mr. Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain.

"I'd like to say further that there's no reason for anybody in or around Atlanta not being pleased and satisfied with our present situation. We are singularly free from storms and hurricanes that are spreading devastation in other parts of the country. Also we have no labor troubles. The people don't know just how well off they really are. I think we ought to get happy about it."

CHARLES F. PALMER, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce:

"The four-power pact and the Anglo-German alliance will be beneficial because the economic monstrosities set up by the Treaty of Versailles probably will be corrected through a series of trade agreements by the powers involved. Such a correction will permit the free flow of goods and in turn will release capital, all of which will mean better business all over the world.

"Of course, it will take time for all of this to take place, but during the interim period, the United States should be able to go forward before the other nations because of the federal funds made available for housing and work relief through the progressive policies of President Roosevelt."

"A three-day crisis is too short to affect business adversely a great deal. But I do think the general outlook for the fall is good. In fact, we have seen a continued improvement over the past three months. Now that the crisis is over everybody is very much relieved, but it will not have any big influence on our economic structure."

GEORGE J. YUNDT, vice president of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company:

"As a result of the peace negotiations in Europe the limitation incurred by the troubled conditions will disappear and business will continue to improve in the southeast."

A. ROBERT DORSEN, president and general manager of J. M. High Company:

"My opinion is that the Munich conference will go a long way toward establishing permanent peace. For the last six years we have been hearing about war, but it seems that these agreements will eliminate war talk for a while. That is bound to have a favorable effect, because people will concentrate on what's happening today instead of what might happen tomorrow.

"I personally feel much easier now and I imagine everybody else will. There is no question that peace will stimulate commerce. If we get in the mood to be friendly with the European countries they are bound to reciprocate."

JAMES D. ROBINSON, president of the First National Bank:

"I think peace as it has been outlined will be helpful to the world in every way. Permanent peace is bound to stimulate world commerce. War would be extremely disturbing and would make the traders of the various nations timid about anything."

P. D. MacQUISTON, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association:

"I think it is axiomatic that general commerce will be stimulated as a result of the peace pacts. They will relieve tension and result in spending that previously was being held up. I believe we ought to have good business through the fall season."

ROBERT F. MADDOX, chairman of the finance committee of the First National Bank:

"The four-power conference is the most encouraging sign that business has had in many years. I think we can be assured of definite progress, for the billions of dollars that have been spent in preparations for war can now go into business. Our own expenditures for our army and navy have been greatly increased because of the European situation. I believe we can now look for taxes to be reduced and a general improvement in business conditions."

J. A. MILLER, president of the Exposition Cotton Mills:

"The effect of the pacts should be beneficial, although it seems to me the war will have to be fought sooner or later. However, if the war had occurred, it would have depended on how our neutrality act functioned as to whether or not we got much business. Nevertheless, for the long run peace is much better for business.

"Naturally, the treaties will stimulate commerce because the money which was formerly spent for armaments can now go into peaceful pursuits."

J. H. EWING, real estate executive:

"Businessmen can prepare to go ahead now. Until now they did not know what to do or where to turn. The treaties should have a very stimulating effect. There has been much foolishness, but we can get down to business now. The pacts will necessarily be obliged to stimulate commerce because we can now go ahead with our trade agreements."

PROFESSOR H. E. DENNISON, head of the economic and social science department at Georgia Tech:

"Generally speaking, the peace negotiations will be good for business. However, we must say that some businesses would benefit more by peace, while others would benefit more by war. In the long run the advantages to business and society can't be calculated. It seems that the four-power pact will be the most lasting step for peace since the Versailles treaty and it should do much in stimulating commerce."

VANGUARD OF AFL ARRIVE IN HOUSTON

Group To Determine Future Labor Policies.

HOUSTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Officers and spokesmen for upwards of 3,000,000 organized craft workers arrived here tonight to determine the American Federation of Labor's future policies on labor legislation and closer co-operation with business.

On the eve of the federation's 58th annual convention, which opens Monday, there were strong indications that the trend of opinion in the AFL leadership was increasingly critical of government control of industrial relations and in favor of more voluntary co-operation with employers.

William Green, the AFL president, declared in a pre-convention speech that the federation was "willing that government shall supplement our efforts, but we are opposed to control of any governmental agency over the economic life of the workers of the nation."

PRAGUE GIVES IN TO POLISH CLAIMS

after ceding to Poland the areas in which Poles predominate among the approximately 300,000 inhabitants of the disputed district.

In addition to Teschen, which straddles the border, the ceded area includes the cities of Prynec and Karwin.

With confirmation of the Czech surrender, tension eased at the border. Troops remained in position on either side of the border, but in Teschen, center of the 600-square-mile area to be returned to Poland, wild celebrations broke out.

With Polish celebrants dancing and marching in the streets, houses beflagged and loudspeakers blaring the Polish national anthem, Czech authorities found it expedient to cordon off a passageway through the streets for their military leaders.

Poland likewise moved speedily to bring its territorial recovery to swift and peaceful termination. The government announced the appointment of General W. Bortnowski, commander-in-chief of the army, as military governor of the occupied districts, and Dr. Kawzo-Siedlewski, former counsellor to the Polish legations at Prague and Moscow, as political adviser.

Fulton To Act On Liquor Plea In Arid Sections

Commissioners Wednesday will face an old problem anew—whether they will authorize establishment of liquor oases in arid sections of Fulton county or adhere to their present policy of turning thumbs down on all such applications.

The matter will be presented in a petition filed by Grover Thomas to establish four stores in the Buckhead section of the county. Whatever action is taken on the Thomas petition will be regarded as a precedent for other applications which it is expected will follow in the event the Thomas petition is sanctioned.

Anent the Thomas application is a petition bearing the signatures of 217 persons in the Buckhead area who aver they are too dry and favor granting of the petition. On the other side, however, rests several letters of protest from citizens, who contend there is liquor enough and that it is easily enough available and who insist there is "no public convenience or necessity to be served in having stores in their neighborhood."

Thomas says he wants to locate liquor dispensaries at 1843 Peachtree road, 2289 Peachtree road, 2831 Peachtree road and 2 Roswell road.

A rehearing on a petition to restrict a large portion of Cascade road frontage for residential use also is slated for consideration of commissioners at the meeting slated to begin at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Just Before Hitler's Legions Crossed Border — Disheartened Czech Troops Move Back

An historic moment—Sudetens to the left exchange warm greetings with German soldiers on the right, separated by the Czech-German border. Soon after the picture was snapped, photographers were cleared from the region and the German army marched across the border. Notice rifles stacked The Germans marched into Czech towns, streets strewn with flowers and lined with weeping women.

A week ago keyed for battle with German troops, these disheartened Czech troops yesterday packed and evacuated the "Zone 1" Sudeten area—one of the areas Czechoslovakia had recently proclaimed she would shed her last drop of blood defending from German aggression. Then came Munich, and in the words of President Benes "We are all alone." And so the Czech warriors retreat.

entirely at the mercy of Great the masses buried and warns that Poland may be "the next victim" of partition.

Italy sees as the next problem the question of Spain which would open the way for the Anglo-Italian Easter accord and resumption of good relations with France. But Fascists approach the future cautiously.

In the following five dispatches the chiefs of the Associated Press bureaus in Berlin, London, Paris, Moscow and Rome analyze the question:

What next after Munich?

In London—

By J. C. STARK.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Great Britain is celebrating peace at the expense of Czchoslovakia, but she knows her own empire still will have a bill to pay to make it last.

In the dying echoes of acclaim for Prime Minister Chamberlain as a peacemaker, qustioning minds began to ask "What next?"

They found some comfort in the two-power document Chamberlain brought back from Munich bearing his own and Hitler's signatures and symbolizing the desires of their two peoples never to go to war with one another again.

Skeptical of Promise.

But they knew that all of Hitler's territorial gains of the past had come through force or threats of force and many were less hopeful than Chamberlain that the Fuehrer would change his ways now.

Britons knew, too, that with Czechoslovakia removed as a barrier to German economic expansion toward the vast storehouse of southeast Europe, a much stronger Germany would emerge.

Britain and France thus would be in an even weaker position to resist Hitler's claims in the "consultation" to which Chamberlain and Hitler pledged themselves for adjustment of remaining differences.

The next German claim, after the Sudeten regions of Czechoslovakia are digested, generally is expected to be for colonies. That will be at least part of the bill the British empire is to pay to keep peace with Germany.

France has a similar one to meet.

Duce, Too, May Have Bill.

Premier Mussolini also may have a bill against the British empire for his aid in bringing four major Eropean powers together to carve up Czechoslovakia peacefully.

His position apparently has been greatly fortified at home by his success in this and there are no indications that in doing so he lost any prestige with Hitler.

That an actual military alliance exists between them is no longer doubted here.

Chamberlain himself virtually said so in announcing Mussolini's intervention in the German-Czechoslovak dispute. He said Mussolini told Hitler he was ready to fulfill completely his pledges in event of conflict, but hoped a peaceful settlement could be arranged.

An Insurgent victory in the Spanish civil war is one of the first requisites to satisfying Mussolini. His friendship pact with Chamberlain still is held in abeyance awaiting this.

Chamberlain's political critics long have accused him of having worked and hoped for such an ending to the civil war.

Some believe that in their first personal encounter at Munich, Chamberlain and Mussolini discussed the "Spanish settlement" that would enable the Anglo-Italian pact to be brought into force quickly.

May Go to Rome.

British newspapers say Chamberlain's next step in his four-power appeasement policy may be a trip to Rome.

Out of the crisis which only two days ago was on the verge of plunging Britain into war on the side of France and Soviet Russia against Germany and Italy, Chamberlain sees fulfillment of one of his first objectives toward a European appeasement.

The four major powers upon whom he has said the peace of Europe depends came together around a conference table. And the result, he believes, is "peace for our time."

Some asked today, however, whether he meant peace in his time—he is 69—or peace in the time of the young men called up to the colors in the last few days when war seemed imminent.

The answer to that question may come soon from steps contemplated by the prime minister to carry forward the appeasement achieved at Munich.

What these are and what they promise to accomplish Chamberlain may tell parliament Monday in an effort to silence criticism of the sacrifices he demanded of Czechoslovakia.

Chamberlain's place in history and the future of the British empire may depend upon the result.

In Berlin—

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—(AP)—An eventual German understanding with France, colonies from whoever can be persuaded to cede them, a commercial treaty with the United States, economic penetration of the Balkans—

All these are the next objectives of German foreign policy unless all signs mislead.

With these objectives reached the world would be dominated by five major groups:

1. The Rome-Berlin axis.
2. The Anglo-French alliance.
3. The Soviet Union.
4. Japan.
5. The United States, with her Latin American sisters.

The Hitler-Chamberlain declaration of peace yesterday resolving on consultation "to deal with any other questions that may concern our two countries" caused just as great joy in Germany as did the four-power agreement for cutting off Sudetenland from Czechoslovakia.

Elevate Chamberlain.

Prime Minister Chamberlain now is rated here as in a class with Premier Mussolini as a friend of Germany.

With the Hitler-Chamberlain declaration as a precedent, official hopes ran high for achievement of a similar understanding at an early date with Premier Daladier.

The French premier made a deep impression on German statesmen.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler from the beginning of his regime left no doubt of his dominant desire to come to an amicable arrangement with the British government.

He also began to make advances to France.

In his speech September 12 closing the Nazi party congress at Nurenberg he once more held out an olive branch to the French by reiterating Germany's renunciation of all claims upon Alsace-Lorraine.

He followed this bid with his solemn assurance in his Berlin Sportspalast speech September 26 that Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland constituted Germany's last territorial demand in Europe.

Even as the results of the four-power conference in Munich were being awaited, a foreign office spokesman told this correspondent:

"With this assurance we have offered Daladier something better than the system of alliances concluded by his predecessors."

Next Quest?

Just how soon the next quest—for reacquisition of Germany's war-lost colonies—will be launched is regarded as immaterial now.

Germany, after the World War, lost colonies totaling more than 1,125,000 square miles—more than five times the area of the new, greater Germany.

The matter is under discussion and, from certain signs, in a fair way toward a solution satisfactory to Germany.

Germany's pride was badly hurt because the treaty of Versailles in effect declared Germany unfit to be a colonial power.

The first step towards the redemption of this injustice, as the Germans call it, must be an acknowledgment by Germany's former adversaries that she is fit to be a colonial power.

From the satisfaction with which a foreign office spokesman at Munich told this correspondent that the colonial problem was discussed at the first session of the "big four" statesmen, it seemed Germany's claim to be a colonial power must have been recognized.

German correspondents went even further in their discussions.

Several German editors asserted they believed that the colonial problem was being "solved in a manner satisfactory to Germany."

99-Year Colonial Lease.

One plan they said was being discussed was for Germany to obtain a 99-year colonial lease.

They said they believed that by waiting patiently until the question was understood fully in the world Hitler would finally get a full title assigned to him.

Meanwhile, there is plenty of work to do in Europe.

Germany has not fully digested Austria as yet and now, less than seven months later, Sudetenland begins joining her. The new Germany is larger than Germany proper before the World War.

It is not only the administration that must be taken over—the new population must be made over ideologically.

For Naziism is not only a political regime: It is first and foremost a philosophy of life.

That philosophy includes unquestioning acceptance of the point of view that the nation is everything, the individual nothing; that all power is vested in the leader and his appointees; that every manifestation of public and private life must be subordinated to the state; that racial purity is the inexorable pre-condition for national greatness.

It will take some time for these ideas to become the creed of every Austrian and every Sudeten German.

Brings in "Valuta."

Economically the acquisition of Sudetenland should prove an asset to Germany, especially from one point of view—that of bringing foreign exchange into the country.

The world-famed spas like Karlsbad, Marienbad, Franzensbad, Joachimsthal and Terplitz-Schoenau annually attract patients from all over the world—men and women who bring foreign exchange.

One rub, among others, in the development of German-American commercial relations since the Nazi accession to power has been Germany's dearth of foreign exchange with which to pay for American raw materials.

There is a feeling that situation will be eased quickly when the spas Germany is getting from Czechoslovakia take up full activity again.

But there are other signs of an earnest desire by Germany to conclude a commercial treaty with the United States.

State Secretary Brinkmann, of the economic ministry, speaking August 17 before the American Chamber of Commerce in Berlin, clearly indicated Germany's desire for a commercial accord with America.

When Hitler in his Sportspalast address renounced all further territorial claims in Europe, everyone naturally asked:

What about Danzig? Memel? The Polish Corridor? South Tyrol?

Or to put it differently:

What about the Germans in those areas and Hitler's self-proclaimed mission as the protector of all Germans?

Hitler at a state banquet May 7 in Rome declared the Brenner pass the boundary for all time between Germany and Italy.

That meant he renounced territorial claims to the South Tyrol, which Italy got from Austria after the World War.

Tyrolese Migrate.

Since then there have been frequent rumors that the German element there soon would be given the option of settling in German Austria.

The Munich four-power accord provided for optional transfers of racial groups on the "wrong side" of the Czechoslovak-German border as it will be drawn.

This principle might be applied not only in Czechoslovakia, but wherever else interchanges might prove desirable. Belgium, for instance, has Eupen and Malmedy, which she gained under the Versailles treaty, and a part of Schleswig went to Denmark, both with German peoples.

Danzig constitutes no problem in German eyes because it already is under Nazi domination. It was believed that at any time Poland might see fit to declare herself disinterested in Danzig, the Danzigers could determine their own fate and go over to Hitler without him making any territorial claims.

Memel went to the League of Nations and was annexed in 1923 by Lithuania.

Memel Issue Dead.

Whether Memel becomes a part of Germany appears relatively immaterial now that Germany has become so great a power that Lithuania cannot do otherwise than grant autonomous rights as wide as possible to the Memelites.

Should Memel, acting on the principle of self-determination, demand and be granted by Lithuania the privilege of a plebiscite, the little German enclave would decide to become a part of Greater Germany, it was expected, without Hitler lifting a finger or violating his word that Sudetenland constituted his last territorial claim in Europe.

Germany's growth from a nation of 63,000,000 to one of about 78,000,000, through the acquisition of the Saar valley, Austria, and Sudetenland, and the enormous improvement of her geographical position on the Danube, has made her an economic factor in Europe which almost automatically draws a series of countries into her orbit.

Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and Hungary for some time have been considered virtual economic satellites of Germany.

Czechoslovakia, it is felt, cannot do otherwise than also become an economic satellite. Rumania, too, may decide to come within the German orbit.

Economics Minister Funk presently is engaged in a good-will tour of the Balkans, with Turkey as his special objective.

Drang Nach Osten.

Thus, step by step, Germany's "drang nach osten" (march to the east) has been—or is being—satisfied.

This does not mean that Germany wishes to conquer any of these states in a physical way nor rule over the populations there.

Hitler wants no racial irredenta — he wants homogeneous rights of Teutons.

But he wants all of his people to have plenty to eat and enough work to keep everybody employed.

Economic penetration of the Balkans would give him access to many riches.

Acquisition of colonies would make him master of more economic riches—besides offering the opportunity to take care of the German population which is growing constantly.

In Paris—

By JOHN LLOYD.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Prospects of a future four-power rule of Europe, long resisted by France, now stare her in the face as a result of the Munich accord.

The four-power plan, originally put forth by Premier Mussolini, of Italy, would exclude Soviet Russia and make France dependent upon British support to offset the Rome-Berlin axis.

While France has made much of British support in the current crisis, the Chamberlain-Hitler agreement announced after the Munich accord filled many Frenchmen with forebodings.

Britain in four-power dealings would hold the deciding vote against France if she cared to make use of it. And against Rome and Berlin she could do nothing more than tie the votes.

In other words, while Rome and Berlin would be protected, France would be entirely at the mercy of England.

A Bitter Pill.

Chamberlain's promise to settle differences with Germany by consultations, coupled with Mussolini's leanings to such consultations when limited to four, leaves France the choice of swallowing the bitter pill and accepting the four-power arrangement, or of remaining a weak outsider.

Although the French people gave spontaneous favorable response to the Munich accord, an under-current or discontent soon became noticeable.

After the people got through celebrating the fact that there would be no war—at least no immediate war—many began asking "where are we?"

First, the commentators began pointing out, Hitler, despite concessions he made at Munich, won a considerable portion of Czechoslovak territory, including intact Czechoslovak fortifications.

Hitler came out the victor, they said, after ample evidence that his military machine had inspired fear. His position was believed strengthened at home and his international prestige enhanced, and yet the only general promise he made was that this—the Sudetenland demand—would be his last territorial demand in Europe.

Doubt Hitler Promise.

If there is one point on which Frenchmen in all walks of life seem to agree in commenting on the situation, it was refusal to take this promise seriously.

Since no general agreement was reached other woes afflicting Europe may persist, commentators pointed out. Therefore, they said, the Munich accord, while dispelling immediate war danger, leaves the possibility of a new crisis may arise at any time.

In the face of this uncertain future, France must take stock of the following facts:

1. Her Russian ally is definitely angry with her. Soviet Foreign Commissar Litvinoff, who was excluded from the Munich conference, made this clear in his speeches at Geneva when he said the international atmosphere was "filled with hypocrisy and lies."

2. Britain, if she makes an agreement with Italy similar to that she made with Germany, will force France to follow suit or remain a lone outsider, excepting Russia, which might refuse to back her up.

May Weaken France.

3. Hitler's success may attract new satellites into the German orbit at France's expense. To smaller countries which have regarded France as a big friend she may now appear weaker and therefore less attractive.

While France technically did not fail in her promise to go to Czechoslovakia's support in case of unprovoked aggression, she allowed Germany to take an important part of Czechoslovak territory and even, according to the critics, aided her to do so by bringing pressure to bear upon Czechoslovakia.

In Moscow—

By WADE WERNER.

MOSCOW, Oct. 1.—(AP)—What next after Munich?

Moscow, steeped in pessimism, looks on the seamy side of the garment of peace fabricated by Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

The Soviet press predicted from the very first that Prime Minister Chamberlain's talks with Reichsfuehrer Hitler could end in only one way: In sweeping concessions to Germany at the expense of a third party—in this case, Czechoslovakia.

Looking into the future, Russia believes that Poland likely will be "the victim" the next time there is a friendly conference of the four powers.

Pravda, organ of the central committee of the Communist party, declared in reporting the clamor in the Polish press for annexation of Teschen, Czechoslovakia:

"The time is not far distant when Germany, intoxicated with her ability to get away with anything, will raise the question of partitioning Poland.

"It is well known that Poland comprises territories long coveted by German Fascism."

Premier Mussolini's pre-Munich demand for an "integral solution of the Czechoslovak problem" is regarded here as paving the way for a similar solution of the Polish problem.

Soviet circles believed that Il Duce in contemptuously describing Czechoslovakia as a "Mosaic state," consciously or unconsciously placing dynamite under the foundations of Poland.

Poland, in addition to her German minority, contains millions of Ukrainians, White Russians and others.

(Poland is made up of territories which, after the partitions of 1772, 1793 and 1795, belonged to Russia, Prussia and Austria.)

Pravda said that Poles demanding immediate annexation of Teschen "are digging with their own hands the grave of Polish independence."

In the Soviet view, the end of "Fascist aggression" and establishment of real peace in Europe is unlikely as long as the western democracies are led by statesmen who, it is charged, place bourgeois class interests above the interests of the broad masses of their peoples.

The Geneva correspondent of Izvestia, organ of the central executive committee of the U. S. S. R., wrote in this connection:

"It must be remembered that the social and political class of the regime is essentially the same in both the aggressor and capitulating countries."

In Rome—

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK.

ROME, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Spain's civil war is the next problem to be settled, according to the Italian Fascist view, before Europe can rest easily.

Italy is not wholly optimistic over the future. Without mentioning the Spanish war, Virginio Gayda, a newspaper editor who often echoes the opinions of Premier Mussolini, wrote today in Il Giornale D'Italia:

"There still are too many open and significant problems, too many still obscure currents, too many residues of political and moral injustice, both ancient and recent, which counsel Italy as well as Germany to exercise the greatest reserve in appraising the present European situation."

At another point Gayda's editorial, commenting on optimism elsewhere in Europe, said Italy "does not share in this optimism or in its airy construction."

Several persons in position to know the feeling in official circles cautioned this writer against expecting an early settlement of the Spanish war and problems depending more or less closely on its outcome.

For Italians these problems are, first, to put into effect the agreement between Italy and Britain for maintenance of the statu quo in the Mediterranean, and second, to restore good relations between Italy and France.

Mussolini has been represented as looking askance at any deal between London and Berlin. The agreement between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Prime Minister Chamberlain to settle questions between Germany and Britain without resort to war therefore was regarded with a certain coolness by some Italians.

As for friction between France and Italy, the contention in both French and Italian diplomatic quarters was that relations between the two countries could become normal only after liquidation of the Spanish question.

Unofficial suggestions that France might make some move soon to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia and send an ambassador to Rome accredited to Vittorio Emanuele as King-Emperor were received with some skepticism in diplomatic quarters.

quit yesterday in "distrust" of Prime Minister Chamberlain's new foreign policy.

France sees Soviet Russia on the outside looking in on Europe's councils and the possibility she herself might be dominated by Britain in a future four-power rule—by Britain, France, Italy and Germany.

Soviet Russia sees the will of the masses trodden and Poland the "next victim" of partition.

Italy Looks to Spain.

To Fascist Italy, the continent's next problem child is Spain and her war upon which hangs the question of making operative the Anglo-Italian Easter accord and resumption of friendly relations with France.

These glances into the future, however, were overshadowed for the moment by the actual accomplishments of the Munich four-power accord and Czechoslovakia's capitulation to Poland.

While his troops launched the progressive occupation of Sudetenland provided in the Munich agreement, Adolf Hitler returned to a conquerer's welcome in Berlin.

(The United Press said that Hitler will make a triumphal entry into the Sudetenland Monday.)

One-third of the first zone of Sudeten areas ceded to Germany by Czechoslovakia last night had been brought within the widening frontiers of Greater Germany. Three zones were left for occupation by German troops before October 8.

Further areas are to be occupied by Germany by October 10, their boundaries to be fixed by the five-power international commission supervising the cession.

Czechs Evacuate.

Czechoslovak troops, meanwhile, began evacuating Teschen after the government reached a "painful" decision to yield to Poland's ultimatum for cession of that boundary zone populated by most of Czechoslovakia's 100,000 Polish minority.

Popular demonstrations broke loose in Warsaw when the government announced Czechoslovakia's action. The announcement said Polish troops would take over Teschen at 2 p. m. (7 a. m., Atlanta time) today. Remaining sections of Teschen and Freistadt districts are to be taken over by Poland by October 10.

In Washington, Democratic Senators Burke, of Nebraska, and Lewis, of Illinois, proposed that President Roosevelt summon international conferences to effect a lasting European peace.

Burke, just returned from a European trip, said Mr. Roosevelt was the logical man to call a badly needed world economic conference.

Lewis asserted the time was at hand when the President should summon all parties to the Versailles treaty to meet in this country and survey what the pact had produced "in discontent, revolt and war."

The "Morning After."

Most European governments faced the "morning after" fact that the crisis had cost millions of dollars. Placing millions of men under arms and other defensive measures had put a severe strain on treasuries, already burdened by armaments. Demobilization progressed rapidly.

Conservative Duff Cooper's resignation sounded a discordant note in Britain's jubilation over settlement of the war crisis.

His action was preceded by a speech by Harold Nicolson, national labor member of parliament, attacking the Chamberlain policy. "I still am not aware his (Chamberlain's) final surrender had the approval of his own cabinet," Nicolson said.

Duff Cooper's stepping down was expected to give the lead to a growing number of rebellious government supporters who share his "distrust."

British Assure French.

France received assurances of British fidelity to the Anglo-French front in spite of the Hitler - Chamberlain friendship declaration. A spokesman said Britain maintained all her engagements to aid France in the event of a conflict.

First announcement of the agreement between the British prime minister and the German fuehrer had surprised the French government.

Moscow accepted calmly Czechoslovakia's capitulation to Poland's territorial demands. Authoritative quarters expressed belief the action did not involve the Russian-Czechoslovak mutual assistance pact since it involved no "unprovoked aggression."

The danger of an immediate European conflict past, thousands of foreigners began leaving Switzerland. Many Americans were among those who had gone there hoping the little confederation's neutrality would be respected in the event of a war.

At Hendaye, France, Spanish government spokesmen reported that evacuation of foreign fighters from the government army would begin next week with the arrival of a League of Nations supervisory committee.

Only intermittent air raids were reported from the fronts in Spain's civil war.

HITLER TO STAGE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

Will Cross Former Czech Border Monday; Konrad Henlein Rewarded.

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—(Sunday)—(UP)—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler will ride in triumph across the former frontier of Czechoslovakia on Monday, it was stated here early today.

Hitler will personally proclaim the adherence of 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans to the Greater Reich.

His entry into former Czech territory at the Sudeten stronghold of Eger was expected to equal the fanfare which marked his ride down the Danube to Vienna after the Austrian anschluss.

Hitler last night appointed Konrad Henlein, Sudeten leader, as reich commissioner of Sudeten land which German troops began to occupy on Saturday as provided in the Munich agreement. Henlein will be personally responsible to Hitler. His position will be similar to that of Josef Buerckel, Reich commissioner in Austria.

Hitler returned from Munich on Saturday and was given one of the greatest popular ovations in his career.

It was understood that he was preparing momentous measures to consolidate peace at home and abroad.

Duke of Windsor Lauds Success Of Chamberlain

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—The Sunday Dispatch invited the Duke of Windsor to send a message, through its columns, to the British people regarding the European crisis.

Today the newspaper received this reply from the Duke's equerry:

"His Royal Highness does not feel inclined to make a statement but you can well imagine how relieved he feels. You may be sure he has been following the course of events with the closest possible attention and anxiety.

"His Royal Highness never lost hope as he had unqualified confidence in the prime minister although there seemed but slender hope of success. His Royal Highness is convinced that Mr. Chamberlain's personality will prevail and that his policy of peace will succeed."

MOSCOW, Oct. 1.—(UP)—The Communist party organ Pravda predicted today that Germany's next move in central Europe would be the partitioning of Poland.

Poland's international policy, stimulated by pro-Hitler Polish landlords, the newspaper said, will strengthen Fascist "aggression" in central Europe, "thereby digging the grave for Polish independence."

"The time is nearing," Pravda said, "when Fascist Germany, drunk with unpunished bulldozing, will raise the question of partitioning Poland."

Alfred Duff Cooper's Resignation, The Reply of Neville Chamberlain

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Alfred Duff Cooper's letter in which he resigned as first lord of the admiralty and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's reply, follow:

"It is extremely painful for me in the moment of your great triumph to be obliged to strike a discordant note.

"For reasons with which you are acquainted and which I propose to explain in the house of commons in due course I profoundly distrust the foreign policy which the present government is pursuing and seems likely to continue to pursue.

"Feeling as I do I have considered that honor and loyalty demand that I should offer you my resignation.

"I do so with profound regret because I have been so proud to hold my present office, one I envied beyond all others in the state, and I have been so grateful to you for having placed such confidence in me and for having shown me such invariable kindness and patience.

"Yours very truly,
"DUFF COOPER."

Chamberlain's reply:

"I have received your letter in which you tender your resignation from the government with great personal regret.

"But knowing you are sincerely convinced the foreign policy of the present government is mistaken, I agree with you in thinking it would not be proper for you to remain a member of the government.

"Before submitting your resignation for approval of His Majesty, the King, I should like to thank you for your work in the great office which you are now giving up and to express the conviction that differences over public policy will make no breach in our personal relations.

"Yours sincerely,
"N. CHAMBERLAIN."

Could America Stay Out of War? Public Divided, Gallup Poll Shows

Present Sympathies Found Overwhelmingly With Great Britain and France; Large Majority Favors Referendum on Whether U. S. Should Fight.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—As Europe faced this week the one thing dreaded above almost everything else for the past 20 years—a new world war—the people of the United States were divided on the question of whether America could stay out if war came. That is indicated today in a new nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

In recent weeks, as the shadow of a general war grew blacker in Europe—and, in fact, for the past three years—the Institute of Public Opinion has questioned hundreds of thousands of American men and women on questions of war and peace, of neutrality and foreign sympathies.

First—they would declare—we want to stay out of war. If staying out means giving up a part of our foreign trade, we are willing to give it up.

We are inclined to think that it was a mistake for America to go to war in 1917, and we don't want to make the same mistake again.

At the same time, we remember what happened back in 1917, and we are sufficiently realistic to know that the United States may be swept into a general war, in spite of our wishes at this time.

Second—Our sympathies are far from neutral. If Great Britain and France had gone to war with Germany and Italy, about two-thirds of us would range ourselves on the side of England and France.

A third of us would declare no sympathy with either side, leaving only a handful who will sympathize with Hitler and Mussolini.

Finally—If war had come, we believe it is likely to be the fault of Germany and Italy, just as we still believe that the World War of 1914 was chiefly the fault of the Kaiser's Germany.

In its newest survey, since the development of the Czech crisis, the Institute asked a carefully selected cross-section of American voters:

"If England and France go to war against Germany, do you think the United States can stay out?"

The answers of the national cross-section are:

|---|---|
| U. S. Could Stay Out | 57% |
| U. S. Could not | 43% |

Sentiment for an amendment authorizing a war referendum has decreased slightly over the past three years. When the Institute asked voters the same question in November, 1935, 75 per cent of those interviewed were in favor of it.

Including the vote in today's survey, the trend has been:

| | For Referendum | Against Referendum |
|---|---|---|
| November, 1935 | 75% | 25% |
| September, 1936 | 71 | 29 |
| October, 1937 | 73 | 27 |
| TODAY | 68 | 32 |

In today's survey, women voters are more sharply in favor of the war referendum than men. A breakdown of the vote by sexes shows that men favor the proposal by a vote of 64 to 36, while women favor it by 72 to 28.

MURPHY INDUCTS SCHOOL OFFICERS

Students Conduct Program Inaugurating President on September 23.

An assembly was held on September 22 in the school auditorium for the inauguration of the new officers of the Murphy student body. The meeting opened with a short devotional led by Christine Mathews. Boyd McGraw gave a talk on the theme "Progress."

Mrs. Peterson introduced the guest speaker, Congressman Robert Ramspeck, who administered the oath of office to the new president of Murphy, Ralph Murphy, and the vice president, Albert Hembree. Both boys gave responses, which were followed by a pledge of allegiance and loyalty from the student participation council.

Boyd McGraw then presented the Murphy yardstick, of which the following points were emphasized: Scholarship, Theodore Banks; courtesy, Benny Reed; appearance, Carol Turner; care of property, Carolyn King; obedience, Boyce Yarbrough, and co-operation, Betty Matthews. Ralph Murphy, the new president, led the students in the Murphy creed, in which is embodied the true Murphy spirit. The singing of "America" closed the assembly.

CHRISTINE MATHEWS.

KINGSBURY PUPILS MAKE SCRAPBOOKS

School Head Suggests That Books Be Preserved.

Mr. Sutton and Miss Charlotte Smith came out to our school to see the very fine scrapbooks kept by some of our pupils last summer. He told Jerry and Jean Gowder and LeRoy Biggler that they should keep the ones they made all their lives, and he had them to write their names for him to put in his scrapbook.

Mr. Sutton was shown some Sea Island cotton raised in one garden. The differences between the leaves and bolls of Sea Island and upland cotton were pointed out to him. We plant cotton every year because we have so many requests for it from schools in other sections.

OPPORTUNITY HAS COURSE IN SALES

Co-operative Retail Selling Course Given for High School Graduates.

Plans have been completed by six local department stores and the Opportunity school for a co-operative retail selling course for girls. High school graduates may work in these stores for two weeks with pay, and attend school on the alternate two weeks to study related store subjects. The students who enroll in this plan must first be approved by the stores, and must register for a period of nine months. Their school course will include salesmanship, oral English, store arithmetic, merchandise information, color, hygeine, and business conduct. Girls interested in this line of work may register with Mrs. T. A. Kitchens, Room 312, at any time.

Major P. S. Woodward was interviewed by T. W. Clift, business manager of the board of education and former principal of the Opportunity school, at WSB on Wednesday evening at 6:15 o'clock. Mr. Morris, another one of our teachers, sings tenor. Mr. Summer, the school principal, plays his saxophone with Marvin Williams while the rest of the school sing alto, soprano, tenor and bass. We have some good harmony.

Merril Weldon's baseball team won the championship from David Starnes' team last week by taking three out of five games.

The race was an enthusiastic one and the candidates all made good speeches. The children of the upper grades were the voters.

Each room in our school represents some part of a village, such as the village store, church, theater, newspaper, cafeteria, recreation center and others. Our halls are to be our streets and we have a committee to mark them with the correct names.

PISGAH'S BIG HUNT BEGINS NOVEMBER 7

Only 1,600 Will Be Allowed To Take Part.

The fifth annual big game hunt will be held in Pisgah National Forest of western North Carolina from November 7 to December 3, Joseph Kircher, regional United States forester, announced yesterday.

The hunt will be limited to 1,600 sportsmen, each of whom will be entitled to three days' sport on a check-in, check-out basis. Applications to participate must be filed with the forest supervisor of Pisgah National Forest, Arcade Building, Asheville, N. C.

Kircher explained the hunt was staged to reduce the annual increase in deer and bear to prevent damage to timber growth and starvation in the excessively large game herd which would result from unchecked multiplication.

ATLANTANS ASKED FOR STORM FUNDS

Red Cross Seeks $10,000 in City for Sufferers in Charleston.

Atlantans yesterday were asked to contribute $10,000 as the city's quota for relief of Charleston tornado victims as General James H. Reeves, executive director, and Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the board of the Atlanta chapter, American Red Cross, responded to an appeal by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Governor Rivers and Mayor Hartsfield, apprised of the urgent need for additional funds to meet the emergency, made even more acute because of Red Cross activities in the New England states, issued proclamations calling on citizens to respond to the appeal "for our neighbor city."

General Reeves stressed the need for immediate relief in the wind-torn portions of Charleston and said workers will remain at headquarters, 86 1-2 Luckie street, until the Atlanta quota has been raised.

To Co-operate.

"We propose to co-operate fully in this most worthy undertaking," he said. "Persons wishing to subscribe to the fund may do so by calling at our office, mailing their contributions or by calling us on the telephone, WAlnut 3201.

"It is impossible to overstress the need for immediate action. We have arranged for radio appeals and other facilities made available to us through the splendid co-operation of various publicity agencies.

"Atlanta must respond in this crisis. We have never failed before, and Charleston is our neighbor. That $10,000 must be raised within as short a time as is possible.

"Dr. Boland and other leaders and workers in the Atlanta chapter are laboring tirelessly in this effort to assist those who have been victims of one of the most disastrous visitations in recent years. We know that Atlanta will not fail."

27 Lose Lives.

A total of 27 persons lost their lives and more than 200 were injured when a tornado struck Charleston from three different angles Thursday.

Governor Rivers and Mayor Hartsfield "earnestly requested that each and every citizen donate to this worthy cause."

Text of the telegram from Davis, setting Atlanta's quota at $10,000 and which was directed to General Reeves, follows:

"Red Cross is now faced with care victims of Charleston's tornado in addition to heavy burdens already existing on account of New England hurricane-flood. We are asking your chapter to accept quota of $10,000. We are sure your community will want to aid in the care of these latest victims who are your neighbors. In addition to usual needs following disasters, relief in Charleston involves many cases of death and injury of bread winners leaving destitute families who must look to the Red Cross for aid in their great distress. Please wire us earliest possible moment the response to this appeal sending contributions to Washington."

USE OF WPA LABOR ON HOMES FOUGHT BY DEWEY JOHNSON

HOLC Plan for Electrical Work Sharply Criticized in Letter.

A plan of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to modernize repossesed homes with WPA labor drew sharp criticism and a threat yesterday from Dewey L. Johnson, city electrician, and president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

Johnson said the HOLC will inaugurate its proposal for using WPA labor for renovation of reposesed houses in Atlanta, but that he would oppose the use of WPA labor for any work of rewiring the electrical equipment of these homes.

Writes Samuel Nimmo.

Pointing out that he had supervised some electrical work on public projects done by the WPA, the federation president wrote Samuel R. Nimmo, of the HOLC:

"I cannot by any stretch of the imagination construe electrical work in residences repossessed by by the HOLC to be a public project, so I am informing you now that if WPA labor attempts to do the electrical work in these homes they will be subject to the penalties provided in the electrical ordinance."

The electrical ordinance poohibits any but licensed electricians from doing work on electrical wiring and equipment in the city.

No HOLC Comment.

HOLC officials refused to comment on the protest and the plan for using WPA labor on this type of project.

Johnson said he was informed that the corporation plans to "test out" the plan in Atlanta and use it in other cities and states if it proves successful here.

He asserted he was advised by City Attorney Jack C. Savage that the property repossessed by tht HOLC is subject to the city's ordinances regulating electrical work. "I will enforce this ordinance if they attempt to re-vire houses with WPA labor," he declared.

SLAYER WILL HEAR SENTENCE 5TH TIME

Crap Game Argument Over Nickel Resulted in Killing.

Ralph Benton, negro convict, who murdered a fellow negro convict at Sandy Springs camp in January, 1937, in a crap game argument over a nickel, will face a Fulton county superior court judge this week for his fifth death sentence—one for every cent involved in the altercation.

Four times previously Benton has heard a judge of the court sentence him to death for stabbing his fellow convict to death with a pair of scissors on the night of January 2, 1937.

He appealed for a new trial from his original conviction. This was refused and he was sentenced a second time. He had two respites, and each time they failed to develop additional favorable action in his behalf and he was sentenced again when they failed.

During the time he was awaiting the judgment of the court, the electric chair was moved from Milledgeville to Tattnall county. When he was sentenced the fourth time, it was to die at Tattnall county instead of at Milledgeville to which he was originally sentenced.

This offered another ray of hope. An extraordinary motion to stay the sentence was filed, Benton contending it would be illegal to electrocute him at Tattnall county when he was supposed to be electrocuted at Milledgeville.

This hung in the courts for several months, but yesterday a remittitur was received carrying a supreme court opinion that it made no difference whether the execution took place at Milledgeville or Tattnall so long as the warden pulled the switch.

Benton will face one of the superior court judges during the week for a fifth time, at which he is to hear the words of doom pronounced once again.

'Dwarfs' Shown At Art Museum In 300 Paintings

"Heigh-ho, heigh-ho, to the High Museum we go—

For it's there, at the High Museum of Art on Peachtree street, that Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs are making an unusual personal appearance.

Three hundred paintings—originals that were photographed for the popular Walt Disney film—are on display in the museum galleries, and will remain until October 15.

Views that went fleeting past in the motion picture may be "still" enjoyed at the museum—Grumpy looking at himself in the mirror; Snow White being comforted by the wood creatures; the Prince, the evil witch, and many other characters and scenes are on display.

Each painting is on celluloid, six by seven inches, and the original characters are seen as they were drawn, in ink painted with opaque water colors.

The museum is open from 9 o'clock to 5 o'clock weekdays, and from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock on Sundays.

SECURITY BOARD STOPS OHIO FUNDS

Agency Issues General Warning for States to Follow Regulations.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP) The Social Security Board, formally cutting off further funds from Ohio's old-age pension system, served notice on all states tonight that it expects rigid observance of its regulations.

The board notified Governor Martin L. Davey, of Ohio, that the Ohio pension system will receive no further funds until state administrators show that regulations for disbursement of federal funds are being complied with.

Following similar suspensions of assistance in Oklahoma and Illinois, the Ohio situation reflected insistence of board members on meticulous observance of their rules. Board officials, however, said that no investigations of administrations in other states are in progress.

SSB officials pointed out that Davey had dismissed Henry J. Berrodin, chief of the Ohio division of aid, for attempting to meet the 12 specifications under which the board offered to continue its share of funds for the state's 110,000 recipients.

Davey was advised formally that Ohio's September check was the last "until a showing has been made."

The board had no indication of what action, if any, Ohio will take to meet its requirements before a new Governor takes office in January.

159 VETERANS PLAN ONE MORE REUNION

Aged Confederates To Gather at Home Here October 13-14.

One hundred and fifty-nine aged soldiers, last of the 100,000 men and boys of this state who joined the Confederate army in the 1860's, will gather at the Confederate Soldiers' Home here October 13 and 14 for what may be their last annual reunion.

Announcement of plans for the gathering was made yesterday by L. T. (Pat) Gillen, director of the Confederate division of the state of Georgia, acting on behalf of Major General A. G. Harris, of McDonough, commander of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans.

Average Age 92.

Gillen estimates that the average age of the 159 survivors is 92 years. Arrangements now are being worked out with the 128 Georgia chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to guarantee the attendance of every member of the group who is able to travel.

While here the veterans will be quartered at the Soldiers' Home where nurses, doctors and members of the Daughters and Children of the Confederacy will be on duty at all hours to see that they get every necessary attention.

Direct Appeal Made.

A direct appeal has been sent out to all the veterans' chapters in the state for assistance in making the reunion a success and favorable replies already have been received from Atlanta, Decatur and Marietta. Gillen said yesterday that replies from the remaining chapters are expected this week.

Other groups invited to attend include the Daughters of the Confederacy, Sons of Confederate Veterans, Children of the Confederacy, the Ladies' Memorial Association, Daughters of the American Revolution, Spanish-American War Veterans, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and their auxiliaries.

RAILWAYS TERMED FOE OF RECOVERY

Proposed Wage Cut Declared Part of Conspiracy Against Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A labor lawyer's charge that the proposed railway wage cut is part of a conspiracy to check recovery and discredit the administration was countered today by carrier testimony that the roads face a financial crisis threatening their very existence.

Both contentions were advanced before the special fact-finding board appointed by President Roosevelt in an effort to avert a nation-wide rail strike.

Tom Davis, counsel for the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said the 15 per cent wage reduction proposed by rail managements was only the beginning of a drive to "slash wages in every industry in the nation."

"The effort of the railroads to force a cut in wages is directed and controlled by Wall Street and the railroad bankers," declared the attorney.

"We will show the devious trail of banker control of the railroads of this nation and will show you the looting of the American railroad systems by the financial houses of Morgan & Company, Kuhn, Loeb & Company and other investment bankers."

Davis was followed by Dr. J. H. Parmelee, director of the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads.

He said the railways' predicament was due to "the continued severeness of the 1938 depression," following seven lean years of reduced traffic and inadequate earnings.

"During the first eight months of 1938, total operating revenues were smaller by 20 per cent than in the same period of 1937, while net railway operating income decreased 62 per cent. The carriers this year, during those same eight months, failed to earn their interest and other fixed charges by $182,000,000."

MORRIS PLAN BANKS' CONVENTION DATE SET

Va., October 10-12. George Winship, president; Joseph E. Birnie, vice president, and C. T. Greer, vice president and cashier of the Atlanta bank, are planning to attend.

Tech Celebration Will Show Latest Wonders of Scientists

Tennis balls will float on a jet of air which won't blow them away; iron will melt in cold water; light will carry human voice waves, and staid old laws of gravity will be flagrantly defied on the Georgia Tech campus Friday afternoon.

The strange events will take place when Professor J. H. Howey, head of the department of physics, will present a spectacular show of scientific magic for the public in the physics lecture room.

The presentation of magical effects of discoveries of modern science will be without charge, as part of the two-day celebration of Tech's fiftieth birthday anniversary.

The show is part of a general scientific and technical display contributed by national and local industries in combination with Tech's facilities, and one of many displays to be seen in various points on the campus, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tickets Not Required.

Visitors to the campus will be admitted to the exhibitions without tickets.

Heaviest concentration of technical and scientific displays will be in the Naval armory, third street and Techwood drive, where numerous exhibitions will demonstrate 50 years of partnership between industry and education. Included in the exhibits will be one to be shown at the San Francisco World's Fair next year.

The army will be represented at the ceremonies by Major General Stanley D. Embick, and the navy by Rear Admiral W. H. Allen. Both branches of the service will contribute exhibitions. The naval exhibition includes the vannah, together with other naval $5,000 model of the U. S. S. Sadisplays. The army will exhibit one of its modern tanks, large guns and other equipment.

Other technical and scientific developments on exhibition in the naval armory will include a scale model of the first campus and one of the present campus, prepared by the department of architecture; a talking light beam, a telephone exhibit, a blast furnace in operation, the Georgia products exhibit, a Georgia textiles exhibit; and others designed to show the relationship between the farm and industry, the uses of natural gas, the 50 years of engineering development, and the uses of electric power.

Others Will Exhibt.

Various departments on the campus likewise will present exhibits in their respective fields. In the Mechanical Engineer building may be seen a cooling tower, Diesel engines, and the purification of air. In the architecture department will be shown drawings by students, faculty, and alumni, most of which have been awarded national and sectional prizes. A magnetic peg and the melting of iron in water are to be seen in the Electrical building.

Recording of the voice and its amplification will be demonstrated by the department of public speaking in the Academic building. The Guggenheim School of Aeronautics will show its large nine-foot wind tunnel, together with other aeronautical apparatus. In the Ceramics building on Third street may be seen the making of pottery and the uses of Georgia kaolin.

Manufacture of rayon, on which much research has been done at Tech, especially in the uses of pine pulp, will be shown in the Chemistry building. The military exhibit is to be in the Militry building.

All exhibits will be demonstrated and explained by members of the Tech faculty trained in the particular field of their discussion. For the benefit of those unable to see the exhibits, they will be opened immediately after the football game Saturday afternoon, and again on Sunday afternoon. At several of them, souvenirs will be given to visitors.

ATLANTA, GA., OCTOBER 2, 1938.

50 YEARS OF SERVICE

If cold fact were to be spoken instead of words from the heart, one would say that Atlanta and Georgia invested less than $100,000 in 1888 for the physical equipment of an institution now valued at $3,000,000. But the heart will not be satisfied with cold fact, knowing that through 50 years that institution, the Georgia School of Technology, has grown beyond valuation in terms of money. Next week end, Tech will observe a half-century of progress and immeasureable service to the people of Atlanta, of Georgia and of the south.

In 1888, Atlanta also was comparatively small. The two have grown together and today it is not possible to walk through the streets of the city without seeing tangible evidence of the mark that Georgia Tech has indelibly written in the progress of the capital of Georgia. The spirit of Atlanta is much the same as that of Georgia Tech, just as the school has absorbed much of the spirit that has made a great city. It might well be said that from this school of engineering has come the skyline of Atlanta, for scarcely a building has been erected in the downtown area that was not born in the conception of a Tech graduate.

So it is with keen pleasure that the city will join with the school in celebration of 50 years in the teaching of men. Teaching that has not been only of engineering, but a teaching that is best exemplified in that kindly man who is the president of the school, Dr. M. L. Brittain. Teaching of character, of manliness, of humanity. Teaching that molds men in the cast that marks the Tech man wherever he may journey. Teaching that makes it pleasant for The Constitution to recall that the immortal Henry Grady was the man most responsible for location of the school in Atlanta.

Thoughts of the years past are happy ones. Of an institution steadily growing in influence and in character. Of students who left an Alma Mater only to add lustre to her name. Of men who have become leaders in every field not only in Atlanta, but in Georgia, in the south and in the nation. Of men who now head other schools and mold still others in the tradition that is indubitably Tech's.

And then yet again of those great elevens that have formed golden blobs of color on the sward at Grant field. Of Coach Alexander, molder of great football teams and greater men, who has taught sportsmanship whether the game be win, lose or draw.

These things all come to mind as Georgia Tech prepares to celebrate a glorious 50 years of service. No "Ramblin' Wreck," but a growing, living, part of southern and national progress.

GEORGIA MARBLE

Georgia marble now houses the greatest library in the world, destined over the years to have on its shelves a mere 10,000,000 volumes plus a few odd millions in assorted maps, documents and manuscripts. By way of contrast, the Carnegie library in Atlanta houses but 190,000 volumes. The library referred to is known as the annex to the Library of Congress, which itself contains 5,000,000 more volumes.

The annex, which was only recently completed, is the most modern structure of its kind in the world, in addition to being the most spacious. Four floors of the two-acre building have a 35-foot band of offices and workspace. The core of the building, and a set-back fifth floor, is composed entirely of bookstacks. Three basements provide still other space for the printing office and bindery, for photographic departments and the other technicians necessary in the operation of a great library.

The library will provide more than three times the capacity of the British Museum, the national library of the empire, of France's national library. The Vatican library, one of the finest in the world, houses but 600,000 volumes.

Georgia thus furnishes beauty to one of the greatest edifices in the present-day world, and a new beauty to the capital of the United States.

PEACE ON ANOTHER FRONT.

When the federal government's proposed 10-year public health program was first announced, officials of the American Medical Association objected bitterly to the possibility of "centralization of control of medical service by federal authority." They still do. They insist, and rightfully so, that the practice of medicine should be left entirely in the hands of the doctors.

Last week, however, the house of delegates of the association, meeting in Chicago, assigned the whole question to a committee to analyze each phase of the program. Contrary to general expectations, this committee rendered a report so conciliatory, so co-operative in spirit, it should go a long way toward easing the tension, as well as solving the vexatious problem of how best to utilize the agency of government in medical care.

The doctors, of course, have never been in disagreement as to the desirability of enlarging medical and hospital services. They, above all others, have always strived to that end. The difference of opinion arose over how best it could be done with the aid of the federal government. As an indication of their willingness to do their part in broadening these services to the people, in co-operation with the government, the report was sufficiently specific.

The health of impoverished persons, it was agreed, should be protected by use of federal and state funds when necessary; a department of health should be established with a physician as a cabinet member; public health, maternal and child welfare service should be expanded, although it was urged that better use should be made of existing hospital facilities. New buildings should be constructed only when necessary. Compulsory health insurance was opposed. It would lead straight to "political control and manipulation," it was contended, a condition no reputable physician would tolerate. On the other hand, hospital service insurance and cash indemnity insurance policies for persons suffering from prolonged illness, as well as some form of compensation insurance for workers while disabled, were considered highly desirable.

These recommendations were unanimously approved by the house of delegates. A committee of seven was appointed to confer with federal authorities with the report as a basis for negotiation. Local medical authorities were urged not to hestitate in co-operating with the government in organizing community service agencies for taking care of the sick with the aid of federal funds.

It should occasion no surprise that the doctors acted in a spirit of co-operation. When the program was first announced, it seemed so vast, so far-reaching, so lacking in co-ordination, so wasteful in the light of their experience in getting a dollar's worth of service out of each dollar spent, so fraught with the danger of placing American medicine under the control of the quacks and the politicians, that the first impulse was to oppose it in toto with all the power at their command. Or did threats of prosecution in alleged violation of anti-trust laws contribute anything to a solution of a difficult problem?

With a better understanding by the authorities in Washington of the difficulties to be overcome; with a determination to repress a too hasty execution of the plan; with a willingness on the part of the doctors to guide, to suggest, to co-operate, there is no reason to doubt that a worthwhile program of enlarged medical services will emerge. One important point, however, should not be forgotten: The practice of medicine should be left exclusively in the hands of the doctors.

A LOGICAL DECISION

Work of improving the cyclorama depicting the Battle of Atlanta may now be completed without legal block under a decision by Superior Court Judge Virlyn Moore. Since the work has been approved by experts, including Wilbur Kurtz, the people of Atlanta may feel assured that the work now in progress will not harm, but only enhance, the $1,000,000 painting and its striking setting.

The cyclorama is classed as a great work of art, and its value to the people of the city cannot be estimated in terms of monetary worth. The work being accomplished will cost slightly more than $35,000 and may be expected to so add to the attraction of the painting that the expenditure will be quickly returned in increased admissions.

Mr. Kurtz has been closely associated with the work at the Grant Park Museum during the last several years, and probably is more familiar with the huge canvas than any living man. His assertion that the painting will not be damaged in any way therefore carries more than usual weight.

The lighting effects are not gaudy and will not impart a side-show atmosphere to the cyclorama, but on the contrary will enhance the striking beauty of the action depicted. The work may be expected to attract an even greater number of tourists to Atlanta, and when other historical memorials have been completed, will make this city a mecca for those interested in the rich past of the south. Coming to view the mementoes of the past, they may be expected to be impressed by the present and the prospects of the future. Nothing should be stinted to deepen that impression.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

GERMAN STRENGTH WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It would be foolish to ignore the English-French-German aviation ratio's intimate possible effect on American neutrality. The vast preponderance of German strength in the air, revealed in this space in the last two days, means we may have to look forward not to one Lusitania only, but to scores and hundreds.

Thus far, the President has been careful to steer a course satisfactory to the isolationists. Ninety-nine Americans in a hundred have been aroused to the liveliest hatred of the Fascist powers and the warmest sympathy for the democracies, yet the isolationist spirit has been maintained. For the moment, the world's prayers have been answered; peace seems to have been preserved. But think what war may mean, if it should come before the French and English can build up their air strength to meet the Germans'.

Think that, by the most conservative military estimates, the great and splendid cities of London and Paris will then be subjected almost daily to death and devastation from on high. Think that, whatever the German talk of "military objectives," tens of thousands of innocent women and children will be killed, and half the stored-up beauty of 2,000 years will be destroyed. Think that many American nationals are all but certain to be casualties. Think that, if there is truth in the loudest claims for aircraft's effectiveness, these two great cities, source places of our culture, will be reduced to smoking ruins within a few months.

COLD REALISM And then try to make a realistic estimate of the American reaction. No doubt the vast majority of Americans adhere today to isolation. Yet, could their isolationist beliefs withstand the emotions stirred by spectacles of such horror? Could they stop short at mere sympathy for the French and English? They could not, if the nature of public opinion has not utterly changed.

The chances clearly are that, before long, the United States would place at the disposition of the democracies all this continent's immense resources of raw materials and manufacture. The neutrality act would be torn to bits, and perhaps the surge of emotion would carry us much further than that. The prediction is not made because the course is thought wise. The prediction is made simply because cold realism dictates it.

HITLER'S GAMBLE Nor is there any reason to expect that, in case of war, Germany will be gentle with her air strength. It has already been disclosed, in Italy, that the German plan for an attack on Czechoslovakia involved sending over a mighty bombing fleet of 3,000 planes. And whatever Hitler may care for the opinion of the outside world, he cannot take the risk of gentleness in the air.

His air strength is his only weapon. He has gambled his all on the air arm, leaving his fleet weak, and building an army which even now cannot compete with that of France. His hope is for a short war, a brief and brutal demoralization of his enemies—and then a triumph. Military experts say that, however frightful the devastation, he will be deceived in his hope. But, if war comes, he must use his only weapon to the full.

DOWN THE DANUBE Furthermore, whatever the language of the communiques from Munich, there is no reason to expect an end of crisis. At the Munich conference, Hitler will attain most of his territorial and part of his political objectives in Czechoslovakia. He will then be free to pursue his objectives to the eastward, down the Danubian valley to the Ukraine. He may announce that he desires no more territory in Europe, but there is not a sensible authority in Washington who credits his announcement.

Some believe that Czechoslovakia was the democracies' last possible stand. Authorities here do not accept this view. They state that, as Hitler drives onward down the Danube, his efforts to dominate Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia and the other nations in his way will meet with opposition, and not only from the Soviet Union, but from Italy as well. They point out that Mussolini had already gone far to detach himself from Hitler. They prophecy that, when Hitler is attempting to crowd Mussolini along the Danube, the allies will become open enemies. Then there will be another front against Hitler, and then, it is hoped, he can safely be told either to fight or go home.

Probably by then England and France will have repaired their deficiencies in the air. The immediate danger to American neutrality will have been removed. Yet the clear existence of the danger proves that laws cannot be too much relied on to keep this country on this side of the Atlantic.

SILHOUETTES

By OSCAR A. DOOB, Publicity Director, Loew's Jest-Columnist.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—As the debris of the recent hurricane was cleared away along Broadway, Ralph T. Jones, Atlanta's Silhouetter, was found peering through a window of the Taft hotel. He was identified by a due-bill pinned under his vest.

Your correspondent led the searchers who unearthed this one Jones among New York's many Joneses. Being a movie publicity man and having suffered long years of torture at the hands of movie editors and columnists, this invitation to guest-write "Silhouettes" presented possibilities!

Why not subject Mr. Jones to the same kind of interview he would needle into a visiting movie star? Man bites dog! Press agent bites columnist!

Mister Jones Under Shower!

Despite all the recent rain, Mr. Jones was discovered by this interviewer taking a shower bath. Just like an upstart movie star, Mr. Jones refused to be interviewed while under the shower. Made some absurd excuse about a man being entitled to privacy. Unreasonable chap!

Finally, after keeping the interviewer waiting at least 45 seconds, Mr. Jones emerged swathed in a dressing gown of lavender and pink, or was it brown and red? Anyway, he looked ducky!

How do you like our city, Mr. Jones?" we began, just to make the southern stranger feel at home.

"It is grand; it is terrifying; it does things to me; it is wonderful to visit here, but I'd hate to live here," replied the columnist with startling lack of originality.

"Mr. Jones, that is a pretty dressing gown . . . tell me, Mr. Jones, do you have hair on your chest?"

Jones leaped to his feet, clutching his robe. His eyes shot fire (not blood-shot—just indignation).

"Cut that out! You can make Robert Taylor look silly with questions like that, but you can't pull that stuff on me; I'll throw you out of the window!" roared the Atlanta scribe.

"But, Mr. Jones, you'd ask Mr. Taylor that question if he came to Atlanta, wouldn't you? And if he threatened to throw a reporter out the window, the press would scalp both his head and his chest," we apologized meekly.

"That's different. Let's get on with the interview."

Ah! Mr. Jones Gone With the—

"How do you like our weather, Mr. Jones?"

"Well, I just escaped that hurricane, driving up from Atlanta. I—"

"Ah, hurricane," we interrupted. "That reminds me, have you folks in Atlanta heard anything about a picture called 'Gone With the Wind?'"

"Heard about it? We've practically taken charge of it in Atlanta. We've told the studio there must be no southern accents used by Clark Gable or by Katharine Hepburn, Norma Shearer, Bettie Davis, Joan Crawford, who will play 'Scarlett.'"

"Don't get excited, Mr. Jones. It's a southern story, so Hollywood probably wouldn't think of giving you ALL a southern accent."

Wow! Rumor Starts; Rumor Denied . . .

"Mr. Jones, did you bring Mrs. Jones with you?"

"No, I drove up alone."

"What? Alone! Left Mrs. Jones in Atlanta! Wow! That confirms those rumors . . ."

"What rumors?" he blazes.

"Well," we replied. "Not exactly rumors, except I just started one. Isn't it columnist-license to start a rumor so they can report so and so has pf-t-t-t? Of course, if you want to deny this rumor and explain why you didn't bring Mrs. Jones with you, I'll give you space for your denial in your own column!"

"Cut out the funny stuff. What's a good show to see?"

"Have you seen 'Too Hot to Handle?'"

"I don't mean a movie. I mean a real show." (Ouch!)

So we sent Mr. Jones to see "I Married an Angel."

And from that moment to this we haven't heard or seen of Mr. Jones. The Taft hotel says he checked out and has probably returned to the angel he married.

To an Old Confederate Cavalry Saber Disposed of by 'Old Hoss' Sale

Rusty of scabbard, tarnished of hilt,
We have only surmise, who held it in tilt:
And followed Jeb Stuart, or Pickett, or Lee,
Or held against Sherman's mad march to the sea.

Did it follow bold Morgan's wild raids through the land,
Borne steadily onward, keen thrust by strong hand;
or perchance it glittered in some trysting place,
As gallant made love in a moment of grace,
From the thundering sweep of a cavalry charge,
O'er ramparts of bayonets in wild battle surge;
Or it lay in repose as a mark for the bier,
Of some gallant soul free from sorrow and tear.

Has it memoirs appaling of a nation on fire,
As brother 'gainst brother by blood quenched their ire?
Is its story a preachment to a land now in union,
Of the fight that it waged and through blood we've communion?

In peace it has slumbered, forlorn, like its cause,
Forgotten, discarded, engulfed, let us pause,
And give to the stalwarts, who, in battle it bore,
A mede to their courage, though their cause is no more.

To low state it has fallen, strange company it keeps,
Paraphernalia of gamblers in a storehouse that reeks,
Of the backwash of cities that gathers like moss,
And bartered by Sheriff, in a sale called "Old Hoss."

—JOEL CARLYLE WHITLOCK.

There Is an Answer.

She's only six—but oh, how all
Her questions baffle me!
And it's been going on since—well,
I think—since she was three.

She asked: "Why can't I see God?"—as
She turned her gaze aloft;
Then—"Why can't we fly high—like birds?"—
And—"Are clouds hard—or soft?"

I've answered whys, and wheres, and whens—
And tried hard to be truthful;
But it's so difficult sometimes,
When waiting ears are youthful.

And now she's raised her trusting face,—
And pauses in her play;
"Do storks bring babies—honestly?"—
I don't know what to say!

—LYLA MYERS.

One Word More

By RALPH McGILL.

Mr. Roosevelt And His 'Piece' Start Talk I have been getting about the state a bit in the past few days and everywhere people are talking about Mr. Roosevelt and his message to Adolf Hitler.

The American people believe peace came about in Europe because of Mr. Roosevelt's message. I don't think anyone wanted war. Not even the German people wanted war. Nor the people of Italy. Both had been whipped into emotional frenzy by their masters.

But, I do think they had gone so far there was no out. Mr. Roosevelt supplied the "out," for the dictator nations. Whether he did or not, the fact remains the people of his own country think so. Even the Roosevelt haters reluctantly admit he did a fine job.

Most people like, admire, and respect the President. That is as it should be. But in every small town, at every meeting of a small town civic club, there is never a conversation which does not turn to the advisors about the President. They don't like them and they wish the President didn't.

Be that as it may, the one fact is that people everywhere liked that message. Especially did mothers like it. It bound them to the President with an affection that will last a long time.

It may even have political implications, that message which went winging across the dark seas to where the nervous Hitler, driven by some quirk of the mind, sat ready to begin a slaughter of his own people and those of the rest of the world. It was a message which penetrated that hysterical mind and gave it pause. It may have some bearing on the third term question. That it restored some of the President's lost prestige is an inescapable fact.

Peace has come to Europe for at least 10 years. By 1940 there should be a real advance in world prosperity and trade.

A very powerful message, that one which stopped a war.

They Say, That Sumner Welles Helped Write It They say that Sumner Welles helped prepare that message.

Come to think of it, it read like him. There were cold phrases in that message. There were statements which were hard and clear as ice and as real as steel. It placed the issues squarely in the hands of the master of the German people.

I saw Sumner Welles during the revolution as it grew in Cuba in 1933 and swept Gerardo Machado from office and sent him forth as a hunted man. He was ambassador to Cuba then, was Welles.

It was a very trying period. The soldiers were everywhere. The offices were protected with machine guns. The whole city baked in heat and fear.

Machado was being stubborn. Welles stood in there despite threats on his life, and was cold and firm as ice. I saw him the day he walked into the palace, past the machine guns and the small, dark little men, and on into the quarters where waited Machado.

Machado was a real dictator. He held the country in his grasp and had murdered hundreds who opposed him. I recall this one particular day as being ghastly hot. Sumner Welles was telling Machado that he, Machado, had best give up and get out. That was the solution. Welles had on a stiff collar and he was so cool there was no perspiration about him and no wilt to his collar. Mine, when I got an interview with Machado that day, was limp and wet.

When cold, cutting, crystal-clear words are needed, Welles can write them or speak them. I liked him then and thought if ever I was where things were popping, I'd like to have Welles around. Machado "got" a few days later. Well, whoever helped with it, it was a great state paper.

The People Cheer in Italy And Germany! I wonder if Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler noted the cheers and demonstrations of relief their people gave when peace was declared.

It seemed significant, somehow, that despite all the rattling of sabers, all the hysterical shrieking of Hitler, all the bellicose blusterings of Mussolini, all the chest-thumping of Hermann Goering—none of the people wanted war.

The people of Germany cheered him; they will follow him; but you can just know that in every German home which had sent a boy to the army there was some mother shaken with fear. They would go and die for the dictators, as our boys would die for their country. But, it seems to me, the dictators might have learned something from those cheers and the emotional relief at being spared a war.

Well, there will be peace now . . . on the surface. The little wars will go on. The "Czechs" left in the Sudeten territories will be persecuted. The Jews will be persecuted. In Poland the Czechs will be persecuted. In Spain and in Abyssinia there will be fighting and persecutions. In Arabia, intrigue will keep the Arabs fighting the British. Japan kills Chinese because they are Chinese and an economic barrier. The Russians and the Japanese glare one at the other.

The big powers are, for a while, at peace. Until "The Have Nots" feel the pinch again there will be peace—after a fashion.

LaFayette.

Marquis de Lafayette was made a major general in the United States army in 1777 at the age of 19. He was made to decide to volunteer his services to the colonies by the brother of Britain's King George III. Lafayette first heard of the war of independence from the Duke of Gloucester at a dinner. The account Gloucester gave had an effect on the young Frenchman entirely different from that intended and he was soon on his way to America.

CHINESE AMBASSADOR

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

I first met Hu Shih, the newly-appointed Chinese ambassador to the United States, in 1915 or 1916 at Columbia University. He had come to America to study agriculture at Cornell University. Somehow he had wandered off into philosophy and had ended up at Columbia.

I knew nothing about China, except that Uncle Charley Beard disliked Yuan Shih-kai who antedated Stalin and Hitler and Mussolini by two decades. Yuan wanted to be a dictator and Uncle Charley objected. Yuan became a dictator and lasted until he went mad and wanted to be an emperor. Then the Chinese people objected—and that was the end of Yuan Shih-kai.

Hu Shih and I did not discuss such questions then. We were opposed to war. We were members of the Collegiate Anti-Militarism League, which was a fighting organization. We believed in peace—not the peace that makes for more wars, more immediate wars, but for a peace that passeth understanding. That is, a peace without wars—a peace because men will not fight.

ALREADY KNOWN AS "YOUNG SAGE"

There were two Chinese among my acquaintances then: Hollington Tong who studied journalism and waited on tables, and Hu Shih, who studied everything and became a philosopher. When I arrived in China in 1918, Hollington Tong was what one might call a public relations counsel to the president of China, while Hu was immersed in philosophic and linguistic studies and was already known as the "young sage" to differentiate him from Confucius.

Still, when it came to ordering a dinner, Hu was the better man. He introduced me to the niceties of the Peking duck and the joys of 40-year-old Chinese rice wine. And I have this to say about Lucius Beebe, that until he has become a devotee of both, he has still to learn the art of eating and drinking. And when you add to a Peking dinner the witty and charming conversation of Hu Shih and his friends, then dining ceases to be a prelude to digestion and becomes the most perfect of arts.

Hu Shih was still a boy in 1917, when he returned to China from America, but he had already achieved such a position in his own country and among his own people that a friend could only stand by in wonderment. He and a colleague, Chen Tu-shu, had stirred the imaginations of the Chinese intellectuals by introducing into Chinese life, "The Literary Revolution." They asked: "Why should not the literature of the people be written in the language that they speak?"

Wycliffe, Dante, Luther—they and others in other lands, centuries ago, asked this same question when they overthrew Latin and Greek as the language of scholarship and wrote the vulgar tongue that men spoke. They took the mystery out of learning and freed men's minds from bondage to fixed forms. Hu and Chen did that for China.

LINGUISTIC FREEDOM GOAL FOR AUTHOR

Chen, in time, became a Communist and eventually a Trotskyist, and I have no idea what has become of him. But Hu continued to fight for linguistic freedom.

He started a movement for a single national language for the Chinese people, who are as split into dialectic groups as they are divided geographically by lack of communications. "Pei Hua," the northern dialect became the national tongue. Surprisingly swift was the popular response to this movement. Every village school became an incubator for the national tongue. I am convinced that were it not for this movement, which affected most significantly the generation that is now coming into maturity in China, the resistance to Japan would not have been more effective than the resistance to Great Britain and France was in the 1840's. People who cannot talk to each other will not long hold together in a common cause.

Hu wrote a "History of Chinese Philosophy," which became a best seller. He only wrote the first volume; the two additional projected volumes remain projected because Hu became too much the man of affairs to sit in his study reading Buddistic Sutras. I felt that it was a sad loss to China that Hu turned to politics and we used to argue about this often. China did not gain a great political leader in Hu; but the world lost the product of a penetrating mind.

FIGHT TO PRESERVE UNIVERSITY FREEDOM

Two influences made Hu political, however: One was that he sought to preserve the Peking national University as a seat of learning and that was a political task. For the politicians were ever seeking to grab the university and it took political cunning and acumen to save the university from them.

The other influence is Hu's inability to keep away from people. He is by nature and habit as much the mixer as the scholar. Those who do not admire his scholarship say that he prefers a social to a scholarly life. Whichever way you put it, Hu likes people. And he likes to give advice. He likes to put his oar in. He could no more keep out of things than Al Smith can keep off a public committee in New York City.

In spite of this pre-occupation with politics, Hu Shih wrote the "Development of the Logical Method in Ancient China," which was his doctor's thesis at Columbia. It is still the best introduction to ancient Chinese philosophy. This was written in English in 1917 when Hu was 26 years old. It has been translated into many languages, including the Japanese.

A collection of poems published in 1917 called "A Book of Experiments" became a best seller. When I last inquired, it had gone into 12 editions. This was the first conscious attempt to use the spoken language of the Chinese in formal poetry. Hu was uncertain about it himself. He said: "A woman whose feet have undergone long periods of cruel binding, can never walk naturally in later life." Yet, Hu's mind has never really been bound because he always rebelled against the binders. He not only strove to free others, but he actually accomplished the astonishing: He freed his own mind.

AUTHOR'S FIGHT ON CORRUPTION

I cannot here discuss all of Hu's literary work, but I must refer to his articles in the magazine, "The Crescent Moon," which appeared between 1928 and 1930. This was the most crucial period in China's history. All of China was seething with revolution. The Russians had appeared with their corruptive philosophy of life and their even more corruptive politics. European garrisons were stationed in China's principal cities. Chiang Kai-shek was seeking to establish a government in Nanking, but hopeless mandarinism had grafted itself upon the revolutionary cause and the liberal spirit was being snuffed out.

Hu and his group demanded that the rights of man be defined in a constitution. His articles in the "Crescent Moon" on this subject were sensational. He attacked corruption. He attacked despotism. He attacked graft. He said: "If there is a real desire to protect the rights of man and to have a true government by law, the first prerequisite should be a constitution of the Chinese republic." He further said: "We want some law to fix the proper limits of the government beyond which all acts become illegal. We ask for a convention that will define and safeguard man's person, liberty and property."

Chiang Kai-shek did not like Hu in those days. Hu was living in the International Settlement in Shanghai and the Kuomintang party men, who in those days were as nasty as Nazi are today, threatened Hu. They accused him of hiding behind British bayonets. Hu was then lecturing a Woosung which was indubitably in Chinese territory. He made an announcement in the Chinese press to the effect that he would be in Woosung at certain specific times and places and that if anyone wished to arrest or shoot him, he would be there for the purpose. They never dared.

EDITED LIBRARY OF CHINA'S FICTION

Another tremendous job that Hu did was to edit a library of China's fiction, standardizing the text and writing a historical introduction to each novel. Fiction and a certain type of folk drama were the only forms of literature written in the vulgar dialects of the people. Hu's accomplishment was to give these works literary and artistic form. And Hu knows his literature, for even he may have forgotten that at the age of 23 or 24, he won the Hiram Corson prize at Cornell for the best essay on Robert Browning.

In one of the most remarkable essays of our time, "My Credo and Its Evolution," first published in the "Forum" and then in a collection entitled, "Living Philosophies," Ru Shih wrote: "It is from Professor (John) Dewey that I have learned that the most sacred responsibility of a man's life is to endeavor to think well. To think sluggishly, to think without strict regard to the antecedents and consequences of thought, to accept ready-made and unanalyzed concepts as premises of thinking, to allow the personal factors unconsciously to influence one's thinking, or to fail to test one's ideas by working out their results—is to be intellectually irresponsible."

HE TRIES HARD TO THINK STRAIGHT

And I think that Hu has always lived up to that. He has tried hard to think straight. No group were more unpopular with the great Chinese mass in 1927 than the Christian missionaries. For two years, the Communists under Russian leadership, had been smearing the American and British missionary with foul propaganda. Yet it was in July, 1927, that Hu had the courage to write in the Forum: "The part played by the missionaries in the modernization of China will long be remembered by the Chinese, even though no Christian church be left there. They were the pioneers of the new China. . . They agitated against footbinding which eight centuries of esoteric philosophizing in native China had failed to recognize as an inhuman institution. . . ."

During the past few years, I have not seen as much of Hu as I should have liked. Even when he has been in this country, we suffered from a sharp difference of opinion. For I do not believe that the United States should go to war with Japan or any other country—and Hu is serving his country here and his country would benefit from American intervention.

Nevertheless, two decades of constant and loving friendship binds us and I rejoice that Americans will have an opportunity to know his wit and charm. We may even learn to imitate the gentle gestures of an old people rejuvenated.

BIG LOANS INSURED BY LAWYERS TITLE

FHA Financing Plan Proving Popular With Large Lending Agencies.

As an indication of the popularity of the FHA financing plan under sections 207 and 210 relating to large-scale housing projects, one needs only to refer to the number of such projects being insured by Lawyers Title Insurance Corporation, as reported by Pearce Matthews, Georgia state manager. The plan is attractive to some of the largest lending institutions of the country, such as the New York Life Insurance Company, National Life Insurance Company of Montpelier, Vt.; Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, and the Prudential Insurance Company of America, all of which have had loans protected by the Lawyers Title.

Of current interest in the field of FHA large-scale financing by such lending companies as those mentioned are such projects as these:

Limited Dividend Housing Corporation, Atlanta, loan of $640,000; Redmont Village, Birmingham, Ala., loan of $745,000; Fourth Buckingham Communities, near Washington, loan of $725,000; Linden Housing Corporation, Linden, N. ### CANDLER BUILDING STORE REMODELED

Work of remodeling and enlarging the DeFoor & Austin store at 121 Peachtree street, in the Candler building, has just been completed.

The new front, with eight individual windows, makes it possible to display merchandise in a more harmonious arrangement, and the interior is designed with the clothing on one side of the store and furnishings on the other, being more accessible to the patrons and at the same time leaving the center open, which affords more space and comfort. The stock of clothing, furnishings, hats and shoes is all located on one floor, a distinct advantage in new store arrangement and design.

The sergeant is not so happy because it was his desk.

$107,000 USED DAILY FOR IMPROVEMENTS

HOLC Is Spending That Much on Properties.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The Home Owners' Loan Corporation is spending $107,000 daily improving properties it has acquired—both as a sound investment policy and as a contribution to higher housing standards—Charles A. Jones, general manager of the corporation, announced today.

Declaring that August expenditures of $2,800,000 marked a new high point for repair and reconditioning since establishment of the corporation, Mr. Jones urged that private home-financing institutions study expansion of such activities as the best methood of making properties attractive for rental and sale. And to home owners in general, he asserted that proper maintenance provides the only safeguard against loss of property values and the threat of neighborhood deterioration.

The HOLC completed 12,339 reconditioning cases in August, Mr. Jones reported. The number was slightly lower than the 12,566 cases reported in July, but the amount of money expended was nearly $420,000 greater and the expenditure per property rose from $188 to $277.

Egypt's rice exports of 18,077 in the first five months of 1938 were about one-fifth of the previous year's.

Atlanta Family Well Pictured In Life Magazine

The Ramseys, of This City, Are Shown the Kind of Home They Desire.

An Atlanta couple—Mr. and Mrs. W. Alan Ramsey—are profusely and interestingly pictured in the September 26 issue of Life, national illustrated weekly.

Pictures of the couple, their two children, Nancy and Bobby, the house in which they live on Highland avenue (shown herewith), and several interior scenes of their home are shown. Then Life comments:

"If I ever have a home of my own," says W. Alan Ramsey. "I'm going to have a place to hang my coat and hat." In the two-family house on Atlanta's north side which they now rent, the Ramseys are so cramped that Mr. Ramsey has to hang his coat and hat on a lamp in the living room. Mr. Ramsey, 29, is secretary and auditor of Emery Stores, Inc. He earns around $2,000 a year. He pays $65 a month rent for the house, sublets half of it to another family. The Ramseys say they are too crowded and are saving their money for a home of their own, with two bedrooms and nursery, two baths, a game room (they like chess and bridge). Last winter they bought a lot in Columbia Acres, a new Atlanta suburb near Decatur.

Then follows in Life a nationally known architect's drawing of a "traditional" home for the Ramseys, and declares it could be built "if you earn $2,000 or $3,000 a year." The architect's drawing is also shown on this page, and is described as follows:

To be built of clapboards, the Ramsey house as Architect Koch sees it would be painted white with green shutters and green slate roof. For efficiency, he has grouped service quarters in one wing, sleeping quarters in another, with a living room between. The service wing contains garage, heating system, kitchen and dining nook. The kitchen is so arranged that while working Mrs. Ramsey can watch the children at play.

In the sleeping wing Mr. Koch has provided a bedroom for Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey, a bedroom each for Bobby and Nancy, plenty of closet space and a bathroom convenient to all three rooms. He would like to have given the Ramseys the second bath and the game room which they want, but could not do it within their price range. The living room is large enough to let one group gather by the fireplace while another plays chess or bridge by a window. And in Atlanta's mild weather, for much of the year the Ramseys could use their brick terrace as an extra living and dining room.

The magazine goes on with similar illustrations and proposes new homes for those earning $3,000 to $5,000, and $5,000 to $6,000, and up to $10,000 and $12,000. It pictures the present homes of various people earning approximately these salaries—one each in the south, east, midwest and far west—and then shows drawings of homes by nationally known architects, employed by the magazine, to suit the purse and desires of those mentioned. The Ramseys were selected from the south. The entire series is interesting and constructive. Life was co-operated with in this series by the Architectural Forum, its sister magazine. It is understood the drawings and blueprints will be furnished free to the families selected if they like the proposed houses.

The Ramseys will probably use the design of their proposed "traditional" home when they get ready to build. "We like it very much," they said.

ADAMS-CATES MADE MANAGING AGENTS

It was announced Saturday that the Adams-Cates Company, realtors, had been selected as managing agents for the new Peachtree Hills apartment, on Peachtree Hills avenue, about four blocks east of Peachtree road, just north of Peachtree creek.

These large apartments, now with a large percentage of them rented, were erected by the Limited Dividend Housing Corporation. They consist of 11 separate buildings, with three- and four-room apartments, with a total of 174 family units.

OFFICIALS TO PUSH FOR RATIFICATION OF BUILDING BONDS

Hartsfield Will Confer With Citizens' Group and Name Commission.

A concerted drive of city and county administration leaders and prominent citizens to obtain ratification on November 2 of the $6,550,000 in bonds the two governments must issue to finance a $15,000,000 co-operative improvement program for Atlanta and Fulton county is expected to get under way this week.

Mayor Hartsfield said yesterday he would confer with leaders of a citizens' group early this week with a view of naming a bond commission at the earliest possible moment to co-operate with a similar commission already designated by Fulton county commissioners.

The city will issue $4,000,000 in bonds and Fulton county $2,500,000, according to action already taken by the governments. Balloting will be concurrent on both issues, November 2, and it is the purpose of the city and county to have their bond commissions work together in recommending expenditure of the funds.

PWA and WPA already has been asked for supplementary funds in order to bring the total expenditure to at least $15,000,000.

The mayor is giving considerable study to the personnel of his group inasmuch as he can name only eight members under action taken by city council.

As soon as the city commissioners are announced, it is expected that a joint meeting will be called to launch the campaign for favorable action by the voters.

The county bond commission is composed of 14 members scattered throughout the county, some of whom are residents of Atlanta proper.

SOUTHERN STATES AGREE ON CARRIERS

Private and Commercial Vehicles Affected.

Consummation of reciprocal agreements between Georgia and six other southern states relative to operation of motor vehicles for hire over the highways was announced yesterday by Walter McDonald, chairman of the Public Service Commission.

The agreements cover operations both of private and commercial vehicles for hire. A proposal for such understandings was submitted early this year, but many of the states were previously without legislative authority to enter into the agreements.

ROOSEVELT APPROVES GRANT TO CHARLESTON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Stephen Early, White House secretary, announced tonight President Roosevelt had approved a $500,000 Works Progress Administration allotment for tornado rehabilitation work in Charleston, South Carolina.

Early said the President approved the allotment a short time before leaving the White House to board the train for his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

Starving Baby Chimp Is Rescued From Hairy Arms of Foster Mother

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A lasso around the arms of Mrs. Luizette, stubborn lady chimpanzee, today ended the "monkey business" troubling Audubon Park zoo.

Since Wednesday Mrs. Luizette had been holding in her hairy arms the brand-new baby of Mrs. Coco, another lady chimp.

Joe Margiotta, agent for the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and zoo keepers this morning finally roped Mrs. Luizette and took away the starving infant.

The bewildered little ape had had nothing to eat—and not a drop to drink—since Wednesday when, just as it was born, its roughneck papa, Pete, slammed its mother up against the cage, forcing her to drop the baby to the floor.

At that instant Mrs. Luizette, who three years ago gave birth to a baby that died, dashed in, snatched up the newborn, and marched off with it with a fierce grimace and growling the monkey words for "finders keepers."

Zoo men poked sticks at her, offered her nipple-topped bottles of water in the hope she would give them to the baby—but she drank them herself. Yesterday Detective Chief John Grosch tried to handcuff her hairy wrists.

The chief and the keepers tried a lasso but that failed, too, until Margiotta arrived today with an improved technique in rope swinging.

Frank Neelis, zoo superintendent, doubted he would ever give Mrs. Coco back her baby. He feared the smell of Mrs. Luizette was too strong on the infant to make it welcome.

The baby weighs four pounds. It will be fed on a bottle.

Atlantans Warned On Security Discs

Atlantans were warned yesterday against agents selling "official" social security disks by George H. Brodnax, agent in charge of secret service offices here.

The disks are metal, and bear an engraved eagle, United States flags, and the legend, "as registered with the United States government." Space is left for the worker's name and social security number.

Brodnax said that many legitimate concerns are apparently manufacturing similar devices and selling them in good faith. He added that in the opinion of federal attorneys, the use of the insignia of the United States constitutes a violation of federal statutes.

2 MEN ARRESTED IN THEFT OF AUTO

Atlantans Are Accused of Armed Robbery.

Two men who identified themselves as Oscar Poe, 18, and W. H. Hawkins, 35, both of Atlanta, were arrested last night by Sheriff James Hubbard at Louisville, Ga., on charges of automobile theft and armed robbery, according to state highway patrol officers.

Lon Sullivan, state public safety director, said the men fled after allegedly robbing a filling station near Baxley, Ga., went to Swainsboro, and then hired a taxicab to Wadley. There they were alleged to have stolen the car of a railroad detective.

Three women in a car, abandoned by the men during a chase by state troopers and county officers, said the men were "from Birmingham."

Pedestrian Hurt As Fire Pumper And Car Collide

A fire pumper, responding to an alarm, collided with an automobile at Fair and Chapel streets yesterday afternoon, damaging the pumper, a fireplug, the automobile and a truck, and slightly injuring a negro pedestrian. None of the five firemen on the pumper was hurt.

Police reports said the pumper, from Station No. 5, was traveling west on Fair street when a car driven by John H. Lowe, negro, of 470 Nelson street, S. W., moved out from Chapel street. The collision sent the Lowe car into a fire plug, and forced the pumper into a gas company truck. All vehicles were damaged.

Kemp Watts, negro, standing at the corner, was struck by the pumper. He was treated by a physician nearby. Lowe was charged with reckless driving and accident. The fire was in a mattress in the home of Addie Cooper, negro, 820 1-2 Beckwith street, S. W.

BAR HEARS LATEST IN U. S. COURT RULES

More Than 600 Leading Judges, Attorneys Attend Institute Here.

Attended by more than 600 leaders of the bar from over the southeast, the institute on new rules of civil procedure in United States district court closed yesterday afternoon.

Judges, practicing attorneys and law professors dropped their business and for two days went to school again. They received detailed instruction on the new simplified court procedure effective this month.

Lecturers at the institute were Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, of Houston, Texas, member of the United States circuit court of appeals; Judge E. Marvin Underwood, of the United States district court here; Dean Charles E. Clark, of Yale Law School, reporter to the supreme court advisory committee, and Monte M. Lemann, New Orleans attorney, member of the advisory committee that helped the supreme court to draw the new rules.

Banquet Attended.

Highlight of the institute was the banquet given Friday night at the Capital City Club by the Atlanta Bar Association and the Atlanta Lawyers' Club in honor of Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, president of the American Bar Association. Hogan, a former resident of Savannah, attended the session here, and is en route to the west, where other institutes will be held.

Addressing the assembled lawyers, judges and professors, Hogan refuted critics' charges that the profession had lost the confidence of the people and its former leadership. On the contrary, he stated, "indisputable, stubborn facts show that lawyers today hold more dominant positions than ever."

United Against Oppression.

He urged attorneys, as defenders of private rights, to stand united against oppression. He called it the job of lawyers, at the price of official and political denunciation, "to fight the whittling away from within of the bill of rights that has been observed in Washington for many years."

The institute drew unexpectedly heavy attendance. The program was sponsored by the Atlanta Bar Association and the Emory University Law School, in co-operation with the Georgia Bar Association, the Lawyers' Club of Atlanta and the law schools of the University of Georgia and Mercer University. E. Smythe Gambrell, of Atlanta, served as institute director.

Urban League

By JESSE O. THOMAS

The purpose of the Bulletin is to chronicle the worthwhile things done for, by, and with the Negro, as a basis of increasing inter-racial good-will and understanding.

We conclude the program for youth guidance, adult and parent education submitted by the education secretary recently added to the staff of the Pittsburgh Urban League.

The bringing about of a satisfactory relationship between the individual and the educational or vocational facility.

Youth will be reached for participation in the service through:

a. Schools—Counseling service will be known to school counselors primarily as a service for out-of-school youth. Referrals will be chiefly of dropouts and graduates, although the service is available for counselors' use in serving special problems of pupils in school.

b. Churches—The service will be known to church youth groups through orientation meetings of youth attending a church or the introduction of the service to youth organizations in churches.

A plan for a two or three-session institute; topic, "An Introduction to Vocational and Educational Guidance," might be conducted in some co-operating churches.

c. Social Agencies—The service could be known to agencies handling this age group and referrals would be made accordingly. In order to assure the co-operation of schools, churches and agencies a letter explaining the service will be sent to heads of organizations. This might be followed by meetings with counselors, agency heads or persons otherwise affected who might offer criticisms and suggestions for the development of the plan.

d. Special Projects—The annual high school graduates' reception is an example of the type of program that might be initiated to reach numbers of youth.

e. Relationship Between Counselor and Youth—Counselor will aid youth in obtaining and seeing clearly the facts on himself and the opportunities available. Decisions as to course, college, vocation and the like will be made by the youth with the co-operation of parents and advisors interested in his problem. In no instance will the counselor direct the applicant specifically into a plan without helping the youth to obtain facts upon which to build his own decision and make his own choice.

Parent Education.

Aims—To make parents of the community more conscious of the need for more careful study of their children, and their environment, whether at home, at play, at school, or elsewhere, in order to build up an opportunity for a more normal and healthy period of child development.

Program will include steps to determine: (1) Present community facilities in the field of parent education; (2) to what extent negro parents are participating; (3) how best the department can aid in the development of programs to meet the need. (a) Parents' mass meetings; (b) follow-up sessions with small groups of parents under discussion leaders.

Adult Education.

Parent education is one phase of the more general adult education program that aims to meet the needs of all adults through seeking to develop those interests, skills, and abilities resident within individuals that could lead to their enjoying a more useful and happy life.

The department will participate in the community's adult education program largely as a co-operative and co-ordinating agency. Its efforts will be concentrated upon the determining of needs, extent of participation in existing classes, and development of more extensive programs to meet the needs.

RUGGED JACKET LINE SMASHES MERCER FULLBACK FOR NO GAIN --- HOWARD ECTOR OFF FOR GEORGIA TECH TOUCHDOWN

Constitution Staff Photos—Wilson, Slayton

Photo on left gives you an idea just how rugged Georgia Tech's line is. Johnny Mattox, Mercer fullback, is the gentleman with the ball and Hawk Cavette, Tech sophomore quarterback, is the man who has him around the legs. The young man making the awful face (No. 39) is Shorty Brooks, diminutive Tech guard. Mattox made exactly no yards on the play. Picture on the right shows Tech's Howard Ector, No. 28, after he intercepted Spec Landrum's pass in the third quarter. Ector is on his way for a touchdown, although you wouldn't think so from the looks on Mattox's face as he comes in to try and make a tackle. Ector intercepted the pass on Mercer's 39-yard line and scored untouched.

Jackets Extended By Mercer Eleven

Fighting Bears From Macon Show 8,000 Fans Spirited Play at Grant Field.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Georgia Tech's 1938 edition of Yellow Jackets opened their season at Grant field yesterday by hammering out a hard-earned 19-to-0 victory over a fighting band of Mercer Bears before a crowd of nearly 10,000.

A 38-yard pass, an intercepted toss returned for a touchdown and a sustained drive starting at the Mercer 39 gave Coach Alexander's eleven their three touchdowns.

The Bears never threatened seriously and could make no headway through a veteran, hard-charging Golden line, which played heads-up ball all the way.

Play almost the entire game was confined to Mercer territory as the Jackets piled up a total of 341 yards to the Bears' 80. In fact, only once or twice did Lake Russell's team own the ball on Golden ground.

The rugged Jacket forewall smashed Mercer offensive thrusts and completely lived up to its reputation as one of the most formidable outfits in the south. Glenn Cushing, Walter Rimmer, Charlie Wood, tackles, were in on every play, while Captain Jack Chivington played his usual great game at center. The Jacket guards, Shorty Brooks and Allen Wilcox, were defensive demons.

SMITH, ISON.

However, most cheering note of the Tech's entire defense was the

Mercer's Neal Allen Was Yesterday's Hero

The real hero of Georgia Tech's game with Mercer yesterday was not on the winning side.

He was Neal Allen, brilliant end of Mercer, who was playing under one of the biggest handicaps imaginable—the knowledge his father had died the day before.

And even if Allen hadn't been playing with this knowledge, he still would have been one of the most outstanding players on the field. His play was always smart, he was always fighting and not once did he give up, even though the score was going against him.

He played a brilliant game, and he magnificently fulfilled his dad's last request—that he play in the Tech-Mercer game.

TULANE, AUBURN DRAW AGAIN, 0-0

Teams Fight Third Scoreless Draw in as Many Years.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A scoreless tie for the third straight year was the story of the annual renewal of football rivalry between the Auburn Plainsmen and Tulane Green Wave here today.

Only by presenting a line-up marvelously improved over its weak and unorganized play of the opening game last week, when Clemson won 13-10, was Tulane able to hold Auburn to the traditional tie. In four years Tulane has not scored on Auburn and Auburn has been equally kind since plastering the Wave with a 10-0 defeat three years ago.

For the most part today's game was an exchange of punts with the Auburn pair of Kelly and O'Gwynne having a bit of an edge over the Tulane booters.

SET-UPS.

There were several set-ups from which scores might have developed but there was only one which had the crowd of 18,000 standing in expectation.

Starting the third period, Bronco Brunner, native Orleanian left halfback, took the Auburn kickoff on his own goal line and fought his way 85 yards to Auburn's 15-yard line. He received excellent blocking on the first part of his thrilling jaunt but wriggled and squirmed from his guardsmen and made the last half of his journey unattended except by the lone Auburn man who finally dragged him down.

Gloden, sub fullback, drove

BILL BECKMAN CONQUERS ROWE

Peters Homers With Two Mates Aboard in Second Inning.

By JACK TROY.

STUART STADIUM, BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 1.—The Crackers went 10 innings today before they were able to win their third straight game of the Dixie series.

And for the second time in the series, they hung a defeat on the ample shoulders of Schoolboy Rowe, who relieved Ed Selway after the ninth. The score was 5 to 4.

Bill Beckman led off the winning rally in the 10th when he singled to right center. Ted Pritchett ran for him and finally scored on an outfield fly by Chatham.

BECKMAN WINNER.

So Beckman, although relieved by Bob Durham, the little round man with a heart the size of a whale, was the winning pitcher.

Home runs by Peters—in the second with two on—and by Oet-

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 1.—Paul Richards, who has had an unusual career in baseball anyway, is believed to be the only player who ever participated in the three blue ribbon series of the national pastime.

Richards, previously had played in the World Series with the New York Giants, and the little World Series with Minneapolis.

And now he is leading his own team in the Dixie series. Off hand, no one can recall any other player in baseball having played in all three.

Getting in the Dixie series meant a lot of satisfaction to Richards because he was born only 100 miles from here.

Waxahachie folks drove over to see Paul's team play today. There were a score or more of home town supporters on hand. They rooted for the Crackers. That is to say they rooted for the Crackers in an unobtrusive manner. They shoot fans for less in this state.

The boys are waiting for one of their chief supporters to arrive. He is Brother Randolph, the colored clubhouse boy. Randolph drove Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Pritchett through the country and will arrive tomorrow.

Brother Randolph, which is the boy's own designation, is bringing along his victory pants. Those are the white pants he wears with the stop and go signs sewed on the back pockets. He hopes to give them the go sign throughout tomorrow's game.

CRACKER TEAM A LOT LIKE YATES.

It was Charlie Yates who started the brother stuff on his trip to Scotland with the Walker cup team.

Everybody was brother. And it seems that the Crackers have had a similar fraternity for some time and no one has realized it.

They address each other as Brother Nig and Brother Marshall and so on. They call everybody brother except Manager Richards. He is just plain Slug.

This is the doggondest pro outfit I ever saw. You'd never know they are playing for money unless you happened to see them get their checks every month.

Brother Nig led the boys around town this morning on a sort of sightseeing tour. The good brothers who didn't sleep well on the train begged off and got their rest.

Slug and Brother Bill (Beckman), the latter a star for the Houston Buffs several years ago, went along and pointed out points of interest, such as Old Spindle Top, one of the most famous oil wells in the southwest.

This is a refining center, which led Slug to remark, "Well, we're refined, aren't we?"

REDS ELIMINATE BUCS FROM RACE

Charley Root Hurls Chicago To Win in Nightcap.

The Chicago Cubs clinched the 1938 National league pennant yesterday, climaxing the hottest and closest senior circuit flag fight in 30 years.

The Cubs split a double-header with the Cardinals, while second-place Pittsburgh lost a single start to Cincinnati, thereby making it mathematically impossible for the flying Cubs to be overhauled in the final day of the season today. Late-inning scoring rallies gave the Cubs the nightcap in St. Louis, 10 to 3, after the Cards took the opener, 4-3.

The Pittsburgh Pirates dropped out of the National league pennant race by losing a 9-to-6 decision to the come-backing Cincinnati Reds.

MAROONS DEFEAT FLORIDA, 22 TO 0

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Oct. 1. (UP)—The Mississippi State Maroons ran over a fighting Florida eleven today to score a 22-0 victory before a huge homecoming crowd.

The Maroon forward wall held the 'Gators at bay and allowed only three first downs. 'Gator ball-carriers were thrown for 52 yards' loss from scrimmage and never offered more than a mild threat.

State moved ahead in the first quarter when Jack Nix took a 35-yard pass from Sonny Bruce and crossed from the 3-yard line.

NORTH CAROLINA BEATS N. C. STATE

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 1.—(AP)—A powerful University of North Carolina football team pushed over three touchdowns, all by George Radman, today to turn back North Carolina State College, 21 to 0.

Radman did the scoring but Jim (Sweet) Lalanne, accurate sophomore passer, was the North Carolina sparkplug in the two second-quarter touchdowns and Jim Mallory, a sub end, ran 41 yards on an intercepted pass to set the stage for the last.

59-Yard Drive Nets Bulldog Touchdown

Gamecocks Score on Intercepted Pass; Miss Tries at Field Goals.

By RALPH McGILL.

MUNICIPAL STADIUM, COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 1.—Quinten Lumpkin's well-muscled chest won a football game for the University of Georgia this afternoon. The score was Georgia 7 and South Carolina 6, and the point which would have given the Carolina eleven a tie was headed straight for the goal when Lumpkin's big form crashed through the line.

The ball struck his chest and went bouncing backward to the turf. Twice more the chest was in the way when Carolina tried field goals. It was a very valuable chest and is rather sure to be Georgia's hope chest this fall.

EX-PEB LEADER TO LEAD PHILS

Nugent and Memphis Dentist Discuss Terms at World Series.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—(UP) Jimmy Wilson resigned today as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies and President Gerry Nugent immediately announced that James (Doc) Prothro would be named to succeed him "if we can come to an agreement."

Nugent said he would confer with Prothro during the World Series next week.

Wilson's action has been forecast since mid-season and reports that the Memphis dentist would be named to succeed him circulated, and were partly confirmed last week when Prothro was released from his contract to pilot the Little Rock club of the Southern association. Prothro announced at that time that he had been signed to manage a major league team in 1939.

Although Wilson refused to discuss his future plans, it was reported that he would confer with Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, during the World Series. His name has often been mentioned as a possible successor to Burleigh Grimes should MacPhail decide to change pilots.

Wilson, who had managed the Phillies since 1933, was the fifth major league pilot to be dropped this season. Technically, he was not ousted as were Mickey Cochrane, of Detroit; Charlie Grimm, of Chicago; Gabby Street, of the St.

Billy Mims, who used to have them cheering him at Boys' High in Atlanta, had them cheering and fearing him here today. He came striding forward to appear as one of the better passers in Dixie football as he pitched them to Marvin Gillespie in Georgia's one successful touchdown drive.

Mims handled the team well and kept South Carolina's defense befuddled and upset in that one rush when Georgia took the ball and scored. In the second half the defense came back from a conference with Head Coach Rex Enright and stopped the passes. But even so, Billy Mims took the team and drove the ball to the 3-yard line, where an aroused Carolina team stopped them and took away the ball.

FINE RECEIVER.

Gillespie appeared as one of the best pass receivers Georgia has had. He made some really spectacular catches in that one brief period when the Georgia offense became cohesive enough to score.

Neither team has found itself. Georgia patiently has improved since The Citadel game of last week. South Carolina's offense never found one period of cohesiveness. Once it drove to the 6-yard line and failed to score.

The one touchdown came when Alex Urban, a sophomore center from Toledo, Ohio, intercepted his third pass of the afternoon and went slogging a full 60 yards to the touchdown.

It was after this that Lumpkin's chest wrecked him.

While Rex Enright's team did not find its offense across any sustained period, it is the smartest looking team Carolina has had in some years and there was no great disappointment over the team's showing.

MIMS PASSES WELL.

But, back to Mims. He threw all types of passes today. He was throwing long ones, short ones

Minnesota Defeats Nebraska, 16-7; Tennessee Beats Clemson

GOPHERS SHOW SPEED, POWER FOR GREAT WIN

Dodd Scores Only Marker for Losers With 91-Yard Snatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 1. (UP)—Minnesota's burly Gophers, pointing for a national championship, crushed a fighting Nebraska team, 16 to 7, today beneath a barrage of speed and power far more devastating than the score.

Taking the offensive from the opening gun, Minnesota rolled up 15 first downs to four for the Huskers, compiled a net gain from rushing of 258 yards to a net of only 5 yards for Nebraska.

Twice the Gopher. scored touchdowns on sheer power. Four other times they were hammering at the Nebraska goal line, and only great Husker stands denied them additional scores.

ONLY SCORE.

On one of these goal line pushes, Jack Dodd, fast, alert Husker halfback, turned the tide singlehanded, and scored Nebraska's only touchdown.

He snatched the ball from the arms of Larry Buhler, giant Minnesota fullback, on the Nebraska 9-yard line and streaked 91 yards, untouched, for the score.

COPS TO BATTLE TUESDAY NIGHT

With the European situation settled, the coming battle of the south—Bob Anderson, popular DeKalb county policeman, vs. Glenn Cowan, southeastern police champion—is the main interest of wrestling fans here. The two grapple Tuesday night at the Atlanta theater in what promises to be one of the most exciting wrestling encounters ever taking place in a local arena.

The battle of the cops will be in the nature of a grudge affair. For three months Anderson has repeatedly challenged Cowan to a battle. The rough Atlanta copper has accepted the challenge with the agreement that the proposed wrestling contest be staged in a neutral arena.

NAVY SWAMPS CADETS, 26 TO 0

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 1.—(UP)—Striking through the air for two touchdowns in the opening four minutes of play, and adding touchdowns in the last two periods, a powerful Naval Academy football team smothered a fighting but outclassed Virginia Military Institute eleven, 26-0, today.

A capacity crowd of 20,793 saw the Middies score a spectacular touchdown on a 61-yard pass, Lem Cooke to Captain Pete Powell, on the first offensive play attempted, and another two minutes later as Cooke passed to Lou Burke, Navy's other end.

Idaho Eleven Holds Washington to Tie

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 1.—(AP)—With two smashing comebacks, the University of Idaho amazed 20,000 spectators by holding the University of Washington Huskies to a 12-to-12 tie in their annual non-conference football battle here today. Two minutes before the end of the game, Ray Smith scampered 17 yards on an end-around play to score the tying touchdown. Harold Roise missed the extra point.

Cornell Team Beats Colgate Eleven, 15-6

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Touchdown runs by Brud Holland, All-America end, and Ken Brown, reserve fullback, gave Cornell a 15-to-6 victory over Colgate on Schoellkopf field today. All the scoring came in the first period as Cornell gained a safety on a blocked kick, and Colgate scored on a pass from Hal Lube to Don Wemple.

MIMS PASSES TO M'CASKILL FOR 24 YARDS --- ARROWSMITH GRABS THAT BULLDOG FUMBLE

Constitution Staff Photos—Rogers

Billy Mims' right arm played an important part in Georgia's victory over South Carolina yesterday at Columbia. In the top photo the Bulldog tailback has just shot a pass which Alex McCaskill, end, is about to catch and carry to the 4-yard line. The toss was good for 24 yards. From there Fordham carried the ball over in two tries for Georgia's first score. Two passes, Mims to Gillespie, had started the Bulldogs on the touchdown drive. The boys are taking part in the well-known game of "Grab-That-Fumble" in the lower photo. Arrowsmith, Gamecock quarterback, recovered a Georgia fumble and ran to the 10-yard line. The Bulldogs make 15 first downs, South Carolina 5.

:-: Ralph McGill's Running Story on Georgia-South Carolina :-:

FIRST QUARTER.

MUNICIPAL STADIUM, S. C., Oct. 1.—Today was home-coming day for South Carolina. The university put on one of those very, very collegiate shows before the game. There were floats, and then cars bearing members of the university's social cabinet. As their cars swept up, attendants swung open the doors and graciously assisted the sweet young things to their seats in a special section before the stands.

Following them came, one by one, and announced over the loud speaker, cars bearing a sponsor for each county in South Carolina. Attendants snapped open the doors and cheers greeted each arrival.

Players' benches in the WPA stadium here are semi-dugouts, an improvement. So were loud speakers for cheer leaders. Coaches Rex Enright, Ted Twomey and Vernon Smith "purged" from the Georgia staff along with Harry Mehre, sent their South Carolina team first to the field. Georgia followed within a few minutes and after warm-ups both teams retired to the dressing room for the final instructions.

The weather was clear and hot. Some 15,000 people were in the stands when the teams took the field for the game.

GAMECOCKS WIN TOSS.

A plane dropped the ball, flying almost to the playing field.

South Carolina won the toss and chose to kick.

Urban kicked over the goal and Georgia was starting from her own 20. Fordham got a yard at left tackle. He failed on another try. Hise kicked to Grygo who was downed on the Georgia 46. His team drew a 15-yard penalty on the first play. They tried a pass and Salisbury grabbed it at the 50 to give Georgia a break.

Hise got 5 at right tackle. On a fake buck Fordham got three at the same spot. Hise going the same spot, fumbled the ball forward and ran for it and got it with a dive for a first down at the Carolina 36.

Hise failed at right end. A holding penalty was called and Georgia set back 15 to nullify the first down break. Fordham got two at right tackle. Cate on a reverse failed.

Fordham fumbled on the next play and Carolina got it, but both teams were called off sides. Hise kicked out of bounds at the Carolina 23. Georgia's first threat had ended. Clary kicked and Hise taking it on the run, got back 15 to his own 43.

Fordham got two at that right tackle which the Bulldog had picked as a weak point. Hise flung a perfect pass to Vassa Cate who grabbed it with a twisting leap and got Georgia her second first down, this one at the Carolina 42.

ALMOST DISASTER.

Another try almost brought disaster. Alex Urban, the big center, grabbed it and almost got away. He would have had he not been slow of foot. He took the ball back to the Georgia 38.

Ed Clary got 9 yards around his right end. Doctor Arrowsmith made it a first down, but it was called back and Carolina penalized 5 for offsides. Clary fumbled on the next try and Dorflinger recovered.

Clary failed in the line and it was fourth down.

Cate batted down a pass to Grygo and Georgia took the ball at her own 32.

Hise lost a yard at tackle. Fordham also failed. Hise kicked to Grygo who caught the ball on the run and fumbled. There was a mad race for it and he got it at his own 34.

I wish, at this point to nullify an earlier statement that loud speakers for the cheer leaders are an improvement. They are not. They may save wear and tear on the cheer leaders' vocal chords, but they permit the leader to murder the whole crowd with his shouts.

Clary kicked a beauty, running back Hise, who took the ball only to be downed at his own 23.

The ubiquitous Urban grabbed Hise's pass and again almost got away.. He took it to the Georgia 24 before Fordham blocked him, not risking a tackle.

A 5-yard penalty helped Carolina.

SALISBURY INTERCEPTS.

But not for long. Clary tried a pass. Salisbury grabbed it for Georgia and ran it back to the Georgia 44 before they downed him. The tide of the battle was changing with such rapidity the rival crowds were changing cheers into groans and groans into cheers.

Fordham failed at tackle. Mims, who had replaced Hise, got 3 at right end. Cate, on a reverse, failed. Georgia was penalized 15 for holding. The ball was back to the Georgia 24. Mims, trying a fake kick play, fumbled and Craig recovered for Carolina at the Georgia 25.

It was another break for the Gamecocks. Both teams were dropping the ball, intercepting passes and otherwise adding some spectacular thrills.

Two plays got 5 yards. A third got a yard and a half. The quarter ended with the play.

Score: Georgia 0; South Carolina 0.

SECOND QUARTER.

The fourth down try was an involved reverse and it failed, Georgia taking the ball at her own 19.

Cate and Fordham were stopped cold and Billy Mims kicked to Grygo, who got it back 7 at his own 48. Two plays got only 3 yards and Clary kicked out of bounds at the Georgia 28.

Cate fumbled but recovered on the first play and Mims kicked, getting the ball out of bounds at the Carolina 27.

Both teams were using more caution, apparently not worried by the epidemic of fumbles.

Fullback Henson found a hole and got 7 yards at right tackle. A 5-yard off-side penalty followed on the next play.

Carolina gambled by waiting until the fourth down to kick and they got away with it. Clary kicked to Mims, who was downed in his tracks by a really spectacular tackle by Nowak, who knocked himself out on the play.

It was Georgia at her own 39.

Georgia missed signals and had to rehuddle. The play was a buck which got 4. Fordham carried the ball.

Mims snapped a pass to Thomas and got a first down at the Carolina 49. It was a nice pass.

He tried again and not being rushed at all, took his time and fired a bullet pass right down the middle to Gillespie, who took it for a first down at the Carolina 35.

Mims' next pass was incomplete, and he picked up 5 on an off-tackle play. Fordham got 1. Urban stopped Fordham and took away the ball at the Carolina 26.

Clary kicked right out of there, Mims being downed on his own 41.

Hunnicutt replaced Cate. They ran him and he got 1 yard. Mims passed right down the middle, the simplest pass in football, and again Gillespie caught it for a first down at the Carolina 43.

On the bench Coach Enright leaped in fear and sent in a substitute halfback to do something about the defense.

Mims tried another and Urban, who is a really great football player, broke it up. Mims passed again and Gillespie got it, stumbling but holding to it. It was first down for Georgia at the Carolina 25, the first real offensive threat of the afternoon.

BULLDOGS SCORE.

Mims tried a line play to pull in the defense. He then passed to McCaskill, who took it almost to a touchdown, being pulled down at the Carolina 4-yard line. The Carolina pass defense simply was not there.

Fordham took it to the 1-yard line. On the next try he made a touchdown. Georgia had driven from her own 41, a full 59 yards, to a touchdown with passes doing the real work.

Badgett kicked the point.

Georgia 7; South Carolina 0.

Clary brought the kick-off back 15 to his own 39.

Carolina was offside and Georgia kicked again, this time from her 45, and it was short and out of bounds at the Carolina 29.

They decided to kick it over, another offside being called. The officials then brought it back and to the relief of one and all if not to the understanding, put it in play on the Carolina 30.

Carolina got nothing in three plays and Stroud kicked out of bounds at the Georgia 28.

Fordham fumbled and Carolina recovered at the Georgia 40 with one minute to play.

Little passed far to the right and Fordham grabbed it. Georgia had it at her own 16.

Fordham failed as the half ended.

Georgia 7; Carolina 0.

Neither team had exhibited any running game worth watching, but Georgia's passes with Mims pitching and Gillespie catching was very, very good.

THIRD QUARTER.

Robinson took the Georgia kick-off back to his own 27.

Stroud kicked and it was downed on the Georgia 45. They called it back and both teams ruled offside.

He kicked again, this time to the Georgia 34.

Fordham found a hole and got away for 15 yards and a first down at the Carolina 46 after making two short gains in two line bucks.

Hise was rushed and became confused. He threw a desperate pass and Alex Urban, who has been referred to here before, grabbed it. This time he scored, running a full 60 yards from the point where he caught the ball.

Score: Georgia 7; Carolina 6.

He is going to be one of the great centers in football, this boy Urban.

Substitute Dearth, in to try for the point, had it blocked by Georgia's Lumpkin.

It still was Georgia's game, 7 to 6.

MIMS LOSES.

Cate took the kickoff and was downed at his own 26. Two line plays were stopped, but Cate, on a nice reverse, got a first down at his own 38. Hise got another first down at the 48 by a fast break off tackle. He was hurt and Mims came in for him. Mims was rushed in trying to pass and lost 9 yards. Mims quick-kicked out of bounds on the Carolina 10. A very fine effort.

A fake buck got nothing. Stroud kicked short and it was Georgia's ball at the Carolina 42.

Cate got 7 on a well executed reverse. Fordham picked up a yard. Fordham made it a first down at the Carolina 32.

Mims' pass to Cate barely was batted down. He was rushed on the next one and lost 5 yards. Rex Enright had managed to improve the pass defense by instruction during the half.

They rushed his next one and it was batted down. He kicked over the goal. Carolina had it on her own 20.

Two plays got 5, but Carolina was penalized 15 for holding. Stroud kicked out of bounds at the Carolina 46.

CATE GALLOPS.

Cate, on a reverse, picked up 14 yards around his left end. The ball was at the Carolina 32. Fordham fell and failed to gain. Dr. Arrowsmith broke up a pass. Cate got 5 in the line. On the old fake kick variation of the State of Liberty play, Fordham got a first down at the Carolina 21. Mims got 5 at right end. Carolina took time out and it was an excessive time out, the penalty giving Georgia a first down at the Carolina 11. Cate went 5 yards over his right guard. Urban was hurt and came out. You may remember his name. Burns replaced him.

Mims got 4 at right tackle. The line broke through and stopped Cate. They tossed back Fordham too and took the ball. It was Carolina's ball at her own 3-yard line as the quarter ended.

Score: Georgia 7; Carolina 6.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Clary kicked out. Mims fumbled, and Granoff recovered at the Carolina 45.

Grygo plunged to a first down at the Georgia 41. Lumpkin stopped two line plays. Clary kicked over the line. It was Georgia's ball at her own 20.

Matthews made 10 at right tackle. Two plays failed and Georgia drew a 15-yard holding penalty. Matthews fumbled, but recovered in the line. Mims kicked to Grygo, who was downed at his own 49.

A pass, Clary to Craig, got a first down at the Georgia 31. A line play failed. Two others failed and Carolina attempted a field goal. It easily was blocked and Georgia had the ball at her own 38.

Mims, on a third down, got a first down at the Carolina 48, but it was called back and Georgia penalized 15 for holding. Mims kicked and the ball was downed at the Carolina 45.

GRYGO GOES.

Grygo went hustling around his left end for a first down at the Georgia 43.

Little was hurt and carried from the field, the third Carolina man to be removed in the second half. Clary got 5 at right end. Grygo made it another first down at the Georgia 32.

Grygo got a yard. Lumpkin batted down a pass. Then Clary fired a pass which traveled to Nowak, who grabbed it out of the air at the Georgia 6.

Gillespie threw back Grygo for a loss of 13 yards. Clary failed. In came substitute Dearth, whose try for point after touchdown had been blocked. They prepared for a placement from the 32-yard line. It was short and nowhere the goal.

There was less than a minute to play and Georgia had the ball at her 20.

Georgia was penalized 5 yards for delaying the game. Fordham hit the line. The game was done. Georgia had won, 7 to 6. The Georgia band ran out and began to congratulate the players.

Final score: Georgia 7; South Carolina 6.

CAFEGO GALLOPS AS VOLS DEFEAT TIGERS, 20 TO 7

Willis, Bailey, McFadden Star in Losers' Offensive Drive.

By KENNETH GREGORY.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 1.—(AP)—To the mingled cheers of 13,000 patrons, Tennessee's Volunteers soared from behind today to hand scrapping Clemson College a 20-to-7 setback in a game replete with thrills.

When Major Bob Neyland's starting eleven fell back under a power drive of 64 yards to the payoff stripe by Clemson, Tennessee's "shock troops," generalled by George Cafego, the West Virginia flash, reversed the order of proceedings.

With Cafego, 170 pounds of gridiron dynamite, running wild and passing all over the field, Tennessee's rally produced touchdowns in each of the last three periods while the defensive setup thwarted all further scoring threats by the Southern conference team.

TIGERS FIGHT.

Clemson, surprise victor over Tulane a week ago, went down fighting. The Tigers, with big Don Willis, Bob Bailey and Banks McFadden bearing the brunt of the offensive, staged a spectacular 66-yard march late in the fourth period only to be checked at the Tennessee goal and came right back with another threat that falted at the 30.

Tennessee scored 11 first downs to 9 for Clemson, gained 238 yards rushing to 200 and had the edge in passing yardage by completing 7 out of 14 as Clemson hit the bull's-eye for only 5 in 16 tosses.

Notre Dame's Power Overwhelms Kansas Eleven, 52 to 0

'IRISH' BATTER JAYHAWK LINE FOR EASY WIN

Total of 84 Gridmen See Service for Notre Dame.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Notre Dame's 51st football team, sparked by a classy sophomore and powered by almost a score of hard-running ball carriers, rolled over Kansas, 52 to 0, today.

Opening their second half-century of football, the Irish scored in every period to rout the Jayhawks and give promise of producing one of the strongest running games in recent Notre Dame gridiron history.

Something of a rarity in the Irish system, a first-year star, played a brilliant role in the triumph. Bob Saggau, of Denison, Iowa, six-foot sophomore, broke away for the longest touchdown run of the afternoon, 51 yards, and otherwise gave a brilliant account of himself.

Kansas, unable to consistently crack the strong Irish forward wall, relied largely on passes and in Sophomore Ralph Miller had a tosser of high caliber. In the final period two aerials carried Kansas to the Notre Dame 14 for the Jayhawks' best scoring bid, but an intercepted pass ruined that opportunity. It was the fourth and final time during the game that Kansas advanced past midfield. Notre Dame, at the time, was using the last of 84 men who saw action for the victors.

L. S. U. CRUSHES LONGHORNS, 20-0

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 1.—(AP)—A University of Texas eleven which amazed 17,000 spectators today by outplaying Louisiana State in the first half collapsed completely to let the powerful Tigers rampage to a 20-0 victory.

Deceptive ground play and aerial wizardry baffled the Texans in the final half, the power-packed Louisiana eleven scoring twice in the third and adding another in the fourth period.

Louisiana tallied its first marker in the opening minutes of the third period after Fullback Wallace Lawson, of Texas, fumbled and gave the Tigers the ball on their own 38. The Texans were caught flatfooted when Halfback Young Bussey tossed a hard one to big Kenneth Kavanaugh, Louisiana end, who shook off a couple of tacklers and raced 48 yards for the counter. Barrett Booth place-kicked the extra point.

KENTUCKY BEATS PETRELS, 66 TO 0

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 1.—(UP)—The University of Kentucky Wildcats showed little mercy for an outclassed opponent today as they downed Oglethorpe University, 66 to 0.

It was the largest Kentucky victory margin in many seasons.

Fleet Kentucky backs, working behind a savage line, reeled off 20 and 30-yard gains at will. Oglethorpe, her mainstay players out of service because of injuries, was able to chalk up only one first down.

Kentucky gained 383 yards from running plays to 69 for Oglethorpe.

Sophomore Is Star In Villanova Win

VILLANOVA, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Villanova, undefeated in 10 games last year, opened its 1938 season today with a 59-0 victory over American International College of Springfield, Mass.

Coach "Clipper" Smith uncovered a brilliant sophomore halfback in Nick Basca, of Phoenixville, Pa., who scored three of his team's nine touchdowns. Villanova scored twice in three periods and crossed American's goal line three times in the second quarter.

Tech-Notre Dame Game Saturday Headlines Week's Grid Card

BULLDOGS MEET FURMAN FRIDAY; VOLS VS. AUBURN

Kentucky Clashes With Vandy; Tulane Battles North Carolina.

Georgia Tech's battle with the Fighting Irish, of Notre Dame next Saturday at Grant field will headline an important week end of football skirmishes in the south. The game is the first of a four-game home and home contract between the two schools. It is the second of the season for both teams.

This will be the ninth clash between the Yellow Jackets and the Irish, and their first meeting since 1929 when the National Championship South Benders won, 26 to 6. Notre Dame has won seven of the eight games to date. Tech's only win came in 1928 when the Jackets went on to win the national title.

Georgia and Furman clash Friday afternoon at Athens, and the Bulldogs will have Saturday off to scout the Jackets against Notre Dame.

Kentucky meets Vanderbilt at Lexington, and Tennessee and Auburn battle at Knoxville in two big games on Saturday's schedule. Vanderbilt won last year 12 to 0, while Auburn beat the Vols, 20 to 7. Florida clashes with Sewanee at Gainesville in the only other intra-conference game.

JACKETS BEAT MERCER, 19 TO 0

excellent play of George Smith and Robert Ison at ends.

Both played good games and Ison looms as the Jackets' best pass receiver, catching a 38-yard toss from Lewis Crockett to set up the winners' first touchdown.

Another outstanding feature was the pinch-kicking of Buck Shaw, the Texas Cowboy. Twice Tech tried for extra points and exactly two times missed by wide margins. Jacket fans whaled and gnashed their teeth for it looked as if Alex's men were keeping up their standard of the last few years.

However, on the last touchdown, Cowboy stood back, cool as a Tom Collins, and booted the ball squarely between the goal posts.

OFFENSE SPOTTY.

But the Jacket offense was spotty and supporters could gain but little encouragement in the game. Diminutive Bobby Beers, although he played less than half the game, sparked the attack, which threatened often but cashed in only, three times.

Beers, 150-pound tailback, was the leading ground-gainer of the day with a total of 78 yards in 11 tries. Billy Gibson played nicely during the first half but was pretty well bottled up in the second.

Howard Ector played a cool, calm game and Juno Page looked good on pass defense.

FIRST SCORE.

The Jackets' first score came midway the second period after Hawk Cavette, sophomore starter at quarterback for the Jackets, and Mercer's Art Pledger had tied up in a kicking duel throughout the first quarter.

Tech was gaining from 5 to 15 yards on each exchange of punts and once Mercer was pushed back to her 1-foot line as Cavette got off one of his longest.

Young Robert Beers, in the game for Billy Gibson at tailback, nullified a 52-yard punt by Pledger with a sparkling 36-yard run through the middle of the line.

After the Mercer line stopped Tech's attack on the 37-yard line, Tech started her initial touchdown drive. Gibson returned Pledger's kick from the Tech 32 to the 42.

MISSES PASS.

Crockett and Wheby went in the Tech backfield but Smith let Crockett's pass slip through his fingers. Crockett then passed to Wheby for a first down at the Mercer 43. Crockett and Murphy failed at the line and then Crockett faded back and passed 38 yards to Ison, who was bumped out of bounds on the Mercer four.

On the next play, Billy Gibson literally outran the Mercers and sped arond right end for the touchdown. Crockett's try for the extra point went wide.

There was no more scoring and Tech held a 6-to-0 lead at the half.

Tech's second touchdown came early in the third period. It was Mercer's ball on her 36 when Spec Landrum's pass was intercepted by Howard Ector, who sped unmolested across the goal line. It was Gibson this time who failed to convert.

PUNCH LACKING.

Tech threatened often in the third quarter but lacked the punch to push over a score. Once an attack was halted at the Bears' three. The drive was sparked by Ector's 18-yard pass to Ison, who was stopped at the Bear seven-yard line. Ector got three but Beers was stopped for no gain by Veo Yon and his pass intended for Page fell incomplete. On fourth down Beers tried left tackle but was stopped cold and the ball went over.

It was pretty much the same story in the final chapter. Tech, with substitutes shot throughout the lineup, threatened but could score only once.

The touchdown drive started at the Bear 39. Joe Bartlett, who has been injured and was not counted on to play, picked up five yards in two trys and then passed incomplete.

Jumpin' Joe then tossed a fourth-down pass to Page who was tackled at the Mercer 14. Bartlett picked up three at tackle. Page added six at center and then made it a first down on the four.

BARTLETT SCORES.

On two plays Bartlett drove over and Shaw converted with the aforementioned dropkick.

Coach Alexander used almost his entire varsity squad in an effort to let the more promising sophomores gain valuable experience.

Lake Russell substituted freely and displayed a team of youngsters who will improve with each game.

His ace, Spec Landrum, was playing with an injured arm but uncorked several neat passes.

In Whimpy Jones, 230-pound tackle, Russell has a fine player, and Paul Davis, substitute end, was the Mercer star, breaking up play after play and spending a great deal of time in the Jacket backfield.

PASS ATTACK FAILS.

Mercer's passing attack could not get going although Bubber Lawrence made a neat catch of a 24-yard toss by Landrum. Neal Allen, who was playing despite the sudden death of his father, was all that has been said about him.

The Bears could never get deep enough in Tech territory to turn on their aerial attack.

Richter at center, Hendricks and Thompson at tackles, and Captain Rainey stood out in the Mercer line while Bill Howland and Landrum sparked a futile attack.

Sports Events Listed For Tech This Week

Football, Tennis and Golf Exhibitions To Feature 50th Jacket Anniversary.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Football, tennis and golf will be featured sports events of Georgia Tech's celebration of her 50th anniversary next week end.

The football classic, of course, will be Tech's contest with the Fightin' Irish of Notre Dame.

But in addition, Tech has planned outstanding golf and tennis exhibitions. Bobby Jones, Charlie Yates, Watts Gunn and Dick Garlington will play an exhibition golf match at 2 o'clock Friday. The site has not been determined, but it is likely to be East Lake.

GRANT MEETS BOBBITT.

On the same afternoon Bitsy Grant will battle Russell Bobbitt in a tennis match at the Tech courts. Then Grant and Bobbitt will play a doubles exhibition against some selected opponents.

Incidentally, all but Grant of the above stars are Tech alumni or students.

Jones graduated in 1922, Yates in 35, Gunn in 25 and Garlington in 23. Bobbitt is now a junior at Tech, but has already made a name for himself in the tennis world.

Jones, well, he's just the immortal Bobby Jones. Yates is present British amateur champion, Gunn won the national intercollegiate champ at Tech. All three have been members of the United States Walker cup team.

Dick Garlington teamed with Yates to win the southern four-ball tournament last year. He has won the East Lake Club championship twice in succession.

NOT ANNOUNCED.

Although the pairings have not been announced, Jones and Garlington will probably play Yates and Gunn.

Grant was a member of the United States Davis cup team last year and present fourth-ranking player in the country. Last season he was ranked second.

Bobbitt is southern intercollegiate champion and a member of the "kid" doubles team which caused such talk in the national doubles this year.

All alumni are invited to attend both exhibitions. A limited number of free tickets for the golf match can be had at Muse's on Tuesday.

No ticket is needed for the tennis exhibition.

through center for three yards. Brunner might have got away but slipped as he reversed and made only one yard but gained first down on the Auburn three-yard line on his next effort.

TIGERS HOLD.

From there Billy Payne rammed the Plainsmen line twice, with no gain and Brunner lost a yard. A tricky reverse, lateral and forward pass failed and the ball went over on downs with Tulane losing her best chance in four years to score on Auburn.

Auburn kicked out of danger and thereafter there was nothing to thrill the sweating spectators except a few futile dashes, some forward passes which might have clicked but did not, and the eternal punting.

The play of Kelly, O'Gwynne, McGowen, Mimms and Walker stood out for Auburn.

BULLDOGS BEAT GAMECOCKS, 7-6

Mims, McCaskill, Lumpkin, Hise Are Stars in Georgia Victory.

snap passes and wide ones. Georgia threw 14 passes and completed 6 for an average of almost .500. He is a junior and if he does not become one of the great passers in the south then his preview today was just an accident. It couldn't have been that. He was too good and too sure of himself.

The second quarter was about to bow itself out when Mims took a Carolina kick and was downed on his own 41-yard line.

There was no indication the Georgia offense was about to mesh its gears and get going. Hunnicutt came in for Cate. He got a yard. Then Billy Mims threw one right down the alley. Gillespie came in from the side and caught it. He had caught one just a few plays before. This one seemed to electrify his offense.

THIS BOY URBAN.

Urban broke up a pass and Mims very smartly used a line play to loosen up the inexperienced defense, having done so he fired once more and again Gillespie caught it. This was his greatest catch. He had to leap for the ball. He just got it and stumbled as he landed. For a while there he was tumbling and juggling the ball, but when he went down he had control.

Mims, showing very fine judgment, called a line play and then, with all the Carolina team watching Gillespie and trying to cover him, Mims passed across the field to McCaskill, who took the ball and almost scored. He was downed at the 4-yard line.

Fordham took it over in two plays and Georgia had her touchdown. Bill Badgett kicked the point with his big right foot and there was no Carolina chest as valuable as Lumpkin's.

EARL HISE.

Earl Hise, sophomore halfback from Chickamauga, Ga., also was a good football player today. He showed enough to warrant the prediction he will be one of the better sophomore halfbacks this season. He passed well even if it was one of his which Urban took back 60 yards for a touchdown.

This came when the third quarter barely had begun. The touchdown inspired Carolina to a very fine effort and they showed, too, they had profited from their instructions at the half.

GEORGIA DRIVES.

Georgia, taking away the ball after an exchange of kicks, drove from the Carolina 46 to the 3, a full 43 yards, but lacked the coordination and power to drive the ball over the last line. It was a drive in which Fordham, Cate and Mims carried most of the burden.

The fourth quarter was South Carolina's. Twice in that quarter the Gamecocks threatened. Once they drove all the way to the Georgia 6-yard line. Some fine running by Halfback Grygo and Halfback Clary put the ball well down into Georgia territory and a pass, Clary to Nowak, put the ball at the Georgia 6.

There the Georgia defense proved itself, holding and throwing back three ground-gaining efforts and a final field goal try.

TENSE FINISH.

It was a tense finish to a game which produced some good football and some poor football. Both teams obviously are going to be better teams. Georgia especially showed a potentiality which may develop into a fine eleven. Rex Enright, with Ted Twomey and Vernon Smith as his assistants, showed he is a fine coach. His team is inexperienced and yet managed to produce some good football and a really fine finish.

Georgia made 15 first downs to 5 for Carolina. This fairly indicates the superiority of the Georgia attack.

Georgia gained 181 yards rushing against 100 for Carolina. Georgia gained 86 yards on passes to 45 for Carolina. Georgia completed 6 of 14 attempted and Carolina 2 of 7. Cate was the leading ground-gainer with 54 yards to his credit. Fordham was next with 53. These two gained more than 100 of Georgia's 181 yards made rushing.

Joel Hunt, Georgia's head coach, expressed himself as being satisfied with the progress made by his team. Rex Enright was proud of his team's performance. Both hope for improvement by next week.

STATE LEAGUE STARTS JANUARY 7.

The Georgia state inter-city bowling league that has been proposed for several years by interested bowlers in several cities throughout the state is about to become a reality with four different cities having teams taking part in the competition. Columbus, Macon, Atlanta, and Rome are slated to make up the team roster.

Tentative arrangements, discussed at a preliminary meeting in Atlanta that was presided over by John S. Blick, president of the Southeastern Bowling Association, will have the league opening for scheduled competition on Saturday, January 7, 1939.

Each of the teams will play "abroad" one Saturday and have a "home" match the following week of play. The arrangement is to have a two-week interval between matches, instead of the first proposed idea of one week. This plan will curtail expenses and enable the players to have more time for practice. Each team will meet all others twice.

Officials predict that interest in the state bowling league will eclipse any single event or movement that has been made toward the promotion of bowling in Georgia.

A fee of $10 will be assessed each team for each bowling match in the early schedule. This amount will include the cost of the three games of bowling, with the balance being deposited in a prize fund in which all of the teams will share.

Carleton Plant, in Columbus; Carl Tidwell, in Rome; Joe Massey, in Macon, and John S. Blick, in Atlanta, are members of the executive committee of the league.

--CRACKERS--

ting, with none on in the sixth, gave the Crackers a lead they were able to keep until the ninth.

The Crackers made four double plays during the afternoon as the Exporters threatened consistently. Exporter runs came in the second, third, eighth and ninth.

Selway left the game with the score tied, so Rowe got the loss. Selway is the boy who beat Little Rock twice last year pitching for Fort Worth.

GREAT PITCHING.

Durham's great relief pitching was a 10th inning feature. He retired the side in order.

The Crackers beat Trout in the opener in Atlanta. So, since they have nicked Rowe twice, they may do the same to Trout.

The Crackers, with home runs doing the work, made the most of seven hits. The Exporters made the least of 15—all off Beckman, who won his twenty-fourth game of the year.

Now, with a Dixie series title almost within their grasp, and never having won one before, the Crackers will be out for blood in the fourth game tomorrow.

The fourth game of the series is coming up tomorrow on President Earl Mann's birthday. The boys would like to give him a present of four straight for the series. And they may do it. Larry Miller is likely to pitch for the Crackers, opposing Dizzy Trout, the eccentric right-hander.

Mann, who says he doesn't feel a day older than 33, will be given a number of presents. The ladies attended to that on a sort of shopping orgy today.

Dutch Burnsen, who managed Atlanta part of 1922, and Dynamite Dunn, who played part of this season with the team, greeted the Crackers before the third game of the Dixie series and wished them the best of luck. Dunn was delighted to learn the boys had given him part of a share from the pennant and Shaughnessy play-off cut.

Al Vincent, a Birmingham boy who has managed the Exporters two years, has a good chance to become the pilot of the Birmingham Barons next season if he wants the job, according to reliable reports.

Vincent has made a fine record here. He finished out of the money last season but came through with a pennant-winning club this year.

The feeling is that since he is a Birmingham boy he might be able to pep up the Slagtown entry in the Southern league.

Around 7,000 folks were in the stands and they were still coming as Steamboat Johnson roared "Play ball."

After Bolling flied to Mullin, Mailho rapped the first hit, a single to center. Chatham flied to Garner, Mailho went out stealing, Parsons to Vincent.

McCOSKY SINGLES.

McCosky led off with a single through the box for the Exporters. Mullin flied to Oetting. DeJonghe fouled out to Richards. Croucher flied to Chatham.

The Crackers put a couple of runners on the bases in the second. Mauldin singled and was safe at second when Oetting bounced to DeJonghe and then Vincent dropped the throw to second. Peters hit a home run over the left field fence, which is 330 feet from home plate, giving the Southern league champs a three-run lead.

In the Exporters' half, Fleming singled to right and was thrown out at second on a great diving play by Peters. Parson singled to left. Garner singled to center. Vincent singled through Chatham's legs. Parsons scored. Selway hit into a double play, Chatham to Peters to Bolling.

BOLLING WALKS.

Bolling led off the third with a walk. Mailho flied to Mullin. Chatham singled to left. Bolling stopped at second. Hill forced Chatham, Fleming to Croucher. Mauldin struck out.

Chatham made a nice stop of Dejonghe's grass cutter in the third and then threw the ball away at first. Dejonghe stopped at second. He scored on Croucher's single. Fleming fouled out to Hill.

With one away, Garner beat out a hit to short in the fourth. A great play followed. Vincent hit sharply to Hill, who fired the ball to Peters, forcing Garner and Peters made a sensational throw to first, catching Vincent.

The Crackers got two runners on in the fifth—Mailho singled and Chatham walked—but there were two away and Hill made it three by grounding out, Vincent to Fleming.

Fleming bounced a hit over Hill's head to lead off the Exporters' half. McCoskey fouled to Hill. Mullin walked. Another neat double play followed. Dejonghe bounced to Beckman, who threw to Peters who, in turn, rifled the ball to Bolling.

Oetting blasted a homer high over the left field fence in the sixth with the bases empty and one man out. Both Richards and Feters were thrown out by Croucher.

Peters let Garner's easy roller get through him in the seventh. Vincent singled to center. Selway forced Garner at third, Beckman to Hill. McCoskey popped to Bolling. Mullin grounded out, Bolling to Beckman.

FOURTH DOUBLE PLAY.

DeJonghe bounced a double past third base when Johnny Hill lost the ball in the sun in the eighth. Croucher singled to center. DeJonghe held third. Fleming singled to center and DeJonghe scored. Parsons fanned. A double play saved the situation. Garner hit the ball and it went Peters to Chatham to Bolling. That was the fourth twin killing by the Crackers.

The Crackers were scoreless in the ninth. In the Exporters half, Vincent led off with a double to left-center. Secory batted for Selway. Secory singled to left scoring Vincent and tying up the game. McCosky forced Secory, Beckman to Chatham. Mullin flied to Mailho. DeJonghe flied to Mauldin.

Beckman led off the 10th with a single to right-center. Pritchett ran for him. Bolling bunted and Rowe, pitching for Beaumont, tried to get Pritchett at second. Both hands were safe. Mailho forced Bolling, Fleming to Croucher. Chatham flied to McCosky and Pritchett scored after the catch. Mailho went to second on the throw. Hill was intentionally walked. Mauldin grounded to DeJonghe, who tagged Mailho.

Durham took the mound for the Crackers in the 10th. Croucher flied to Mailho. Fleming flied to Oetting. Parsons lined to Mauldin. Great relief pitching again was credited to Durham.

YATES OPENS 'DRIVE' IN SOUTHERN FOUR-BALL

center of the lobby and shook hands this morning.

It was hours before the kickoff, so Alvin Gardner and Trammell Scott tossed a coin for a cup of coffee.

They chatted about matters pertaining to their respective leagues, both agreeing it was a fine thing that two pennant winners had come through to make it a Dixie series natural.

UPON ARRIVAL.

Upon arrival today hundreds of Texans were at the train to greet the Exporters. They begged Al Vincent's club not to let the Crackers take four straight. They're not used to getting beat by Southern league clubs out here.

Dick Niehaus, club trainer, had a present for Buster Chatham, of Waco, ready when they stepped from the train.

He presented Chatham with a toy revolver and holster. The inscription read: "To a drugstore cowboy from the brothers in the lodge."

GOOD OLD VEAZEY.

Veazey Rainwater, former prominent Atlantan, entertained the Beaumont players in Atlanta and then, returning here, he entertained the Atlanta delegation.

Rainwater, who heads a well-known soft drink concern here, arranged for an extensive tour of the city and surrounding territory before today's game.

At noon Rainwater entertained the Atlanta party at a luncheon at his soft drink plant. Previously there was a visit to his splendid kennels, where he has champion Cocker Spaniels, airedales and setters. Many cups in his office bespeak their class.

Veazey sat with the Beaumont delegation in Atlanta, but, courteous to a fault, he spent his time with Atlanta friends at the game.

There was standing room only. Loss of two straight by the Exporters brought out the fans to lend them moral support.

PETERS PUZZLES THEM.

In baseball it is usually the .250 hitters who give teams the most trouble.

Pitchers bear down on the big hitters, somehow, relax on the boys who do not have a feared reputation.

So Russ Peters has the Beaumont people puzzled. He started the big rally in the first game and has been very troublesome at the plate ever since.

The .250 hitters are always tougher than otherwise when a team least expects it.

A REAL SETTER.

It was during the visit to the kennel that Eddie Rose said to Bob Durham, "There's a real setter over there."

"Yep," replied Durham, "and I notice it's setting down, too."

EX-PEB SKIPPER GOES TO PHILLIES

Louis Browns, and Frankie Frisch, of the Cardinals, but when the Phillies slipped to last place early in the season and remained there, hopelessly out of the running, it became apparent that he would not be renamed.

Until this season Wilson, once considered one of the best catchers in the league and noted for his handling of pitchers, served as playing manager.

Prothro, after playing with Washington, the Boston Red Sox and Cincinnati, became manager of Memphis in 1928 and after four years there resigned to accept the helm at Little Rock. He was a third baseman.

Oklahoma Upsets Rice Eleven, 7-6; Pitt Trounces Temple, 28-6

POINT-AFTER ACE BOOTS SOONERS TO BIG VICTORY

Raphael Boudreau Keeps Record for No Misses in Three Years.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 1.—(AP) Quiet Raphael Boudreau, who never has missed a try-for-punt in three years of college play, delivered the goods again today and Oklahoma's Sooners upset vaunted Rice Institute, 7-6, before 18,000 stunned, perspiring fans.

He trotted out just before halftime and slammed across the winning point after Substitute Howard McCarty had spun across from the 18-yard line for the touchdown.

Boudreau supplied the clincher but two great ends, Captain Roland Young and John Shirk, supplied the antidote for Rice's heralded two-man riot of Ernie Lain and Ollie Cordill with a smashing game that smothered their aerial antics.

Hurried on practically every pass he threw, Lain was ineffective and helpless against the surge of those Oklahoma ends.

Waspy, 150-pound Doug (Scat) Sullivan, the 226-pound Lain's understudy, was the spark behind Rice's second period score. On the first play after replacing Lain, he delivered a 16-yard aerial to Substitute Halfback Hugo Stevens. Sullivan, catapulting into the big Sooner line, moved on down to Oklahoma's 15-yard line and on five successive blasts off the tackles finally went over for the score.

COLUMBIA WINS OVER YALE, 27-14

YALE BOWL, NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Passing, running and punting with as much skill as this historic structure has ever seen, Sid Luckman paced Columbia's Light Blue eleven to a 27-to-14 triumph over Yale today before 35,000 fans.

Backed by a sturdy, dogged eleven which blocked for him furiously, the Lions' senior halfback scored one touchdown and set up three others as Columbia tallied once in the first period, twice in the second and once in the fourth.

Columbia had everything but reserves. The Light Blue played with only three substitutions, and in the last period wearily held a horde of eager Yale reserves at bay.

The Light Blue showed its superiority early. Luckman put the ball in play on Yale's 40 after running back a kick 14 yards in the first. With Luckman slashing at the Blue tackles and bombing the secondary with short flat passes, Columbia went to the 3-yard line. There Luckman crashed over right tackle for the score.

OLE MISS BEATS LOUISIANA TECH

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Oct. 1.—(AP)—The University of Mississippi Rebels followed an unimpressive first half with a powerful comeback in the second today to give Louisiana Tech a 27-to-7 trimming.

The Techmen led at the close of the half, 7 to 6. They capitalized on a good break when Adams, Tech end, recovered a fumble on the Ole Miss 9-yard stripe. Williams sent a short pass to Williamson for the touchdown and Eager converted.

The Rebels scored in the second period following a 30-yard pass from Les Dodson, fullback, to Ward. Right Halfback Erm Smith made eight yards over tackle to score.

The Rebels showed real power in the third period, with Parker Hall and Les Dodson, sophomore fullback, ripping the Tech line for nice gains. Hall's 32-yard heave was ruled completed after interference by Louisiana Tech was called, and he passed to Kent Massengale for the touchdown. Massengale converted.

Ole Miss scored twice in the final quarter, Jimmie Tillman running 50 yards for one marker, and Parker Hall going 26 yards for the final touchdown.

Union-Endicott Battles Smithies to Scoreless Deadlock.

ENDICOTT, N. Y., Oct. 1.—(AP) Coach Gabe Tolbert's Tech High Smithies and "Ty" Cobb's Orange Tornado, of Union-Endicott High school, battled here this afternoon to a scoreless tie before 4,500 fans at the opening game of the season in En Joie park.

The Atlantans showed an edge over the local squad in experience and out-rushed the Endicott gridders 174 yards to 130 and gained 12 first downs to their opponents' ten.

Both teams had scoring opportunities which they muffed, Atlanta turning on the heat in the third period to march 67 yards only to be stopped on the one-foot line. Endicott, at the end of the first half, missed a certain score when Halfback Szeliga intercepted a pass from Parks on his 15 and raced all the way to the Blue and Gold's 23-yard line. As he was tackled he lateraled to Center Ketchuck who stepped out of bounds with a clear field for a touchdown.

INDIANA LOSES TO OHIO STATE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 1.—(AP) Ohio State's gridders, hardly the "Scarlet Scourge" of former years, took a long step toward the Western conference title today by defeating the Hoosiers, of Indiana, 6 to 0, before 67,397 fans, a record opening day throng.

The Bucks, outgained through the air and on the ground by the lighter and faster Hoosiers, credited their victory to a couple of Ohio sophomores, and a couple of breaks which halted Indiana thrusts in the shadow of the goal posts.

The Hoosiers won everything today but the game, piling up a 16-to-6 edge on first downs, outgaining the Bucks 144 yards to 63 by rushing, and 121 yards to 74 through the air. In total yardage the Hoosiers had 310 to 180 for Ohio.

Two Indiana sophomore substitutes, Joseph Tofil and Joe Nicholson, provided the Hoosier "punch" in the second half. They ripped through the big Scarlet line almost at will.

CRIMSON TIDE IS EASY VICTOR

Davis, Slemmons Star for 'Bama; Moseley Held Out of Fray.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Alabama's Crimson Tide smashed Howard, 34 to 0, here today in a display of power and versatility before approximately 8,000 fans.

Alvin (Pig) Davis, 185-pound fullback from Greenforest, Ark., stole the offensive show with long gains on off-tackle slants and line smashes, although the other 'Bama backs gained plenty of ground.

Billy Slemmons opened the scoring with a 15-yard end sweep in the opening period. George Zivich tore off 43 yards for the second, and Davis' long run accounted for the next one, both in the second period. Charles Holm rammed over the fourth score midway of the third period, and Pig Davis' second touchdown, in the final period, ended the scoring for the day.

Herky Moseley, hero of Alabama's victory over Southern California last week, was held out of the game, his place being filled for most of the contest by Charley Boswell, who did a fine all-round job.

VANDY CAPTURES LISTLESS GAME

DUDLEY FIELD, NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 1.—(UP)—While Coach Ray Morrison experimented with half a dozen combinations of three teams, Vanderbilt defeated Western Kentucky Teachers this afternoon, 12 to 0.

The game was a listless affair, with neither team showing any offensive power. The Commodores scored in the second and fourth periods.

Lunsford Hollins paved the way for the first score with two successive first downs to the Teachers' 44. Then he reversed his field twice and ran 31 yards. From the 28-yard stripe he hurled a pass to Franklin for the touchdown. In the fourth Hollins again led the way to Vandy's score.

The Teachers threatened only in the first period, but lost the ball on downs on Vandy's 14-yard line.

Dartmouth Reserves Get Good Workout

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 1.—(AP) Dartmouth beat St. Lawrence, 51-0, on Hanover's Memorial field this afternoon. Dartmouth reserves played all but a few of the first minutes of the game and found little trouble in running up a high score against the Red and White-uniformed team from Canton, N. Y.

PORTER'S MITE TAKES $57,045

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Porter's Mite, fleet son of The Porter and holder of the world record for six and one-half furlongs, barely lasted today to nose out Eight Thirty and gain a hard-earned victory in the classic Futurity, main event on the closing program at Belmont Park.

The triumph was worth $57,045 to his owner, W. E. Boeing, wealthy airplane manufacturer of Seattle, Wash., who was not able to see his colt capture the big juvenile plum of the year because bad weather kept him in the west.

Porter's Mite, which Boeing bought last winter from John Hay Whitney for a reported $7,500, was a 6-to-1 shot. George D. Widener's Eight Thirty earned $7,400 for second place, while the Greentree stable's Third Degree was third, a length and a half behind, and William Woodward's Johnstown, the favorite at 2 to 1 and the early leader, finished fourth.

T. C. U. DEFEATS ARKANSAS, 21-14

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Texas Christian University opened the Southwest conference football season today by defeating the University of Arkansas, 21 to 14, before 10,000 fans.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 1.—(UP)—A scrappy, underrated Brown eleven outfought Harvard and scored a 20-13 upset victory before a crowd of 25,000 today in Harvard stadium.

Taking the lead in the first period when Shine Hall, Brown's halfback, scored the first of his two touchdowns, Brown was never headed. Hall scored his second touchdown in the last period. Jack McLaughry, son of Tuss McLaughry, Brown's coach, tallied the third, on a 72-yard run after a pass interception. Tom Carey, Brown center, intercepted the pass and flipped a lateral to McLaughry when hemmed in.

Harvard scored in the second and fourth periods, the first on a 63-yard touchdown run by Frank Goley, and the last when Captain Bob Green snared a pass and ran 25 yards over the goal line.

McLaughry completed Brown's scoring with two placements after touchdowns, and Chief Boston boosted a placement for Harvard after Green scored.

ROLLER SKATING IS SLATED HERE

Plans for a roller skating rink to be known as the Atlanta Skating Casino and located at 31 North avenue, between the two Peachtrees, were announced Saturday by Louis and J. D. Weill, co-owners and operators.

Remodeling of the building along thoroughly modernistic lines already is under way and the Messrs. Weill, long prominently identified with the insurance business in Atlanta, expect to formally open the rink to the public around October 15.

The ground floor will be on sills and cement and the skating surface will be built of northern Michigan hard maple. Three hundred pairs of roller maple wheel skates already have been ordered.

G.I.A.A. Honors at Stake in Prep Games Here This Week.

By ROY WHITE.

Two important battles in the G. I. A. A. championship race will be fought Thursday and Friday nights at Ponce de Leon park, while six other Atlanta prep teams will be in action Friday afternoon and night.

Tech High, defending both its city and state crowns, returns to the city Monday after a week's trip in New York where two games were played and battles Marist College Thursday night. Both teams are battling for both city and state honors.

Boys' High, winners in two tough games and tied by Monroe Aggies in a third, will renew its rivalry with the Bluejackets of Savannah High Friday night at the ball park.

G. M. A. will play LaFayette High, of Alabama, Friday afternoon on the College Park campus. Decatur will be host to Fulton High Friday night at Decatur. Commercial plays Richmond Academy at Augusta. Russell plays at Cedartown and North Fulton plays Rome High at Rome.

Marist will open Thursday's game with a veteran team and may give Tech High plenty of trouble all the way.

WORLD MARK MICKEY MARTIN'S TARGET

Daredevil King and Queen Booked Four Days at Fair.

Mickey Martin, "King of the Daredevils," colorful thrill show promoter, has signed a contract with President Mike Benton, of the Southeastern Fair, for four days of "Hell Riders" thrill show at Lakewood October 2-9.

Mickey Martin staged his thrill show at the Southeastern Fair grounds last spring, and so well pleased fair officials that they arranged for a suostitution of daredevil shows at the fair instead of auto races.

Martin has rapidly moved up to the front with the best of the daredevil shows in the past two years, and is just getting into the fair booking game. He has 15 people, doing 15 stunts in a two-hour program packed with thrills. Having $25,000 in equipment, the Mickey Martin Hell Riders stunted last year among other places at Cincinnati, Dayton, Fort Wayne, Atlanta and Birmingham.

The show is well balanced and clicks rapidly, with the amusing antics of "Doggie" Artrip, the daredevil clown, interspersed. Martin has considerable difficulty in restraining "Doggie" from taking over all the most dangerous stunts from the others on the show. Among the thrillers on Martin's program are "End for End Roll Over," "Return From Hell," "Double Truck Jump," "Skee-Jump Through Burning Wall of Death," by Mrs. Mickey Martin, the "queen of the daredevils," and many other hair-raising stunts.

Mickey Martin, "King of the Daredevils," jumps over two trucks in a world's record leap for stock automobiles. This record of 72 feet, 4 inches is the target for Martin this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Southeastern Fair. Martin and his "Hell Riders" will give four performances—this afternoon, Wednesday afternoon, next Saturday and Sunday, October 9.

WRESTLING WAR SLATED MONDAY

Local wrestlers have challenged foreign matmen to a battle to a finish Monday night at the West End arena. Promoter Frank Bettis has had considerable trouble trying to get a referee to suit both sides. It was finally understood there would be two referees in the ring.

All of these bouts will be for the best two out of three falls, winner take all.

Young Londos will meet Paddy Nolan, of Ireland. Nolan promises to leave town if defeated. Wild Bill Collins tackles Sailor Al Olsen, the Boston Gob, while Gentleman John Mauldin mixes it against Charlie Layden, the Denver, Col., kangaroo kicker.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Stimulated by further hopes of broadening peace in Europe, the stock market finished the week today with the best Saturday performance in three months.

The list got off to a rather quiet start, met and overrode profit-taking, then continued to ascend with increasing momentum. Just before the close a burst of buying in virtually all departments put the ticker tape in arrears two minutes.

Gains ran to 2 or more points and, while recessions from the best were in evidence at the final gong, most pivotal issues emerged around top levels for the session. A number of new highs for the year were posted.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks pushed up .9 of a point to 49.1, where it was only 1.7 points under the peak for 1938 to date. On the week the composite was up 3.9 points, which was the best showing for any similar period since the June rally got under way. Transfers for the two hours totalled 946,940 against 797,370 a week ago. It was the liveliest Saturday since July 2.

Gainers of fractions to a point or more among generally higher curb shares were Electric Bond & Share, Aluminum Company, Cities Service, Lake Shore Mines, New Jersey Zinc, American Cyanamid "B" and Technicolor. Turnover of 113,000 shares was the best for any short session since July 2 and compared with 87,000 last week.

The project application calling for a large expenditure on the old capitol building was filed yesterday.

The application for a loan and grant of $245,000 to build a new barracks to house 200 students, and to provide faculty apartments and a swimming pool, hurdled the final obstacles in the Atlanta office this week, college officials were told, after legal technicalities had temporarily held up the application.

The new application asks for a loan and grant to build a new gymnasium and classroom building on the site of the present basket ball court.

BLUDGEONED WIFE FLEES TRAILER FIRE; HUSBAND PERISHES

Woman Relates How Mate Struck Her, Set Gas-Fed Flames.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Oct. 1.—(AP) Police wrote into their records today an injured woman's story of a narrow escape from the flaming interior of her trailer home, after a struggle in which she accused her husband of hitting her on the head with a hammer and then setting fire to his gasoline-soaked clothing.

The husband, identified on police and hospital records as E. J. Eagles, 58, died this morning, a few hours after he was pulled from the trailer in a dying condition from burns.

Physicians said Mrs. Eagles suffered only minor burns, but that they were treating her for "possible skull fractures."

Police Captain J. D. Armstrong said Mrs. Eagles told him she was awakened by her husband, who told her "she didn't have long to live." He placed the time at around 1 o'clock this morning, as firemen were called out shortly after that hour.

Captain Armstrong quoted the woman as saying her husband struck her twice with a hammer, then poured gasoline, kept in the trailer for a small stove, over her clothing and his own.

The police captain said Mrs. Eagles, dazed by the blows, managed to wrest away from her husband and escape from the trailer as the man set fire to his own clothes.

Employes of a nearby plant were attracted by the fire and attempted to put it out with water. They said Eagles was inside the trailer when they arrived. Firemen quickly quenched the blaze, saving most of the trailer.

The couple had made their home in the trailer here for some time, parking on a vacant lot off First avenue, some distance from the heart of the city.

Captain Armstrong said Mrs. Eagles' only explanation of the attack was that her "husband apparently went crazy."

Besides his wife, Eagles is survived by one son, Robert Eagles, of 201 Ivy street, N. E., Atlanta, and a sister, Mrs. S. G. Haverstock, of Toledo, Ohio.

Rites were held at the graveside in Riverdale cemetery here this afternoon.

Among the immediate projects being considered, the secretary said, are plans for marking street intersections, placing county name markers on main highways, establishing a farmers' market, installing a local credit exchange, securing "Cartersville" auto tags, and forming a committee to pass upon and regulate various advertising schemes other than local newspaper, poster board and theater advertising, in which all business firms are solicited, usually by out-of-town solicitors.

Plans have also been made to publish an illustrated booklet containing detailed information about Bartow county and its resources, with data relative to tax rates, schools, labor, power resources, churches, etc.

NEGRO EDUCATOR SUCCUMBS AT 71

Henry A. Hunt, Georgian, Dies in Washington.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., Oct 1.—(AP)—Henry A. Hunt, negro educator who won national attention for his activities among negroes, died last night at Washington, D. C., where he was employed as chief of the negro relations section of the Farm Credit Administration. He was 71.

Hunt had served in Washington since 1933, when he was employed as assistant to Henry Morgenthau, then governor of the FCA but now secretary of the treasury. In his position, he advised negroes, principally in the south, on how to use the FCA resources and how to form credit unions.

The picturesque six-foot, two-inch educator was born at Sparta, Ga., went to Atlanta University and paid his way by working as a carpenter, being graduated in 1890 with the bachelor of arts degree.

He served variously as principal of a school at Jackson, Miss., and as business manager at Biddle University, Charlotte, N. C., but his chief interest centered in the Fort Valley Normal and Industrial School. Founding the school "without cash," he built it up to a plant now estimated as worth $500,000, with around 1,000 students on the rolls.

The Harmon award and the Spingarn medal, both for service to his race, were awarded in recent years. Also he won, about 10 years ago, a Julius Rosenwald Foundation fellowship to study co-operatives in Scandinavia.

BUILDING, PAY ROLLS REACH HIGH LEVELS FOR THIRD QUARTER

New Court House and Church Annex Major Items in Permit Listing.

LAGRANGE, Ga., Oct. 1.—Acceleration of construction, and increased industrial pay rolls here during the third quarter of 1938 have kept pace with quickened southern progress, and have reflected a general improvement in business optimism, city authorities report.

LaGrange, they assert, failed to experience the usual summer slump in building or employment.

A steady gain in construction was noted during the quarter, building permits totaling $280,340, a peak for the year. This sum is well in excess of earlier figures, the January-March total being $56,920, and the April-June total $78,104. The chief project listed called for construction of the new Troup county courthouse, with jail and office annex, the permit allowing expenditure of $240,670. Work on this building was begun in August. Work also was begun during the quarter on the new $60,000 Sunday school annex to the First Baptist church.

Private business expansion is further indicated in the erection by a wholesale grocery company of a new building valued at approximately $8,000, and by an oil company storage plant valued at $5,000.

Meanwhile, mill officials revealed a general increase of approximately 5 per cent in industrial pay rolls in the mills in and near LaGrange.

Outstanding among public transactions during the quarter was the passage in August of a bond issue which will permit bonds totaling $155,000 to be sold by the city of LaGrange, as the first step in a program for building, equipping, and enlarging schools of the city. Funds thus raised will be supplemented by approximately $126,000 of federal monies, an appropriation amounting to $115,695 having already been made and an additional sum being anticipated. Plans call for the rebuilding of Harwell Avenue school, oldest building in the city system, funds appropriated by the Works Progress Administration totaling $53,910; for building of a negro school, the federal appropriation being $31,500; and for expansion of Hill Street school, the appropriation being $29,286. A fourth school, to replace a building now rented for use as Dunson school, is also a part of the building program, the decision pending a further government allotment.

Still another feature of the school improvement program is the renovation of the LaGrange High school athletic field lighting system, made possible by the co-operation of the city officials, the board of education, and the local Lions Club. A sum of $350 has been spent to improve the effectiveness of the lighting, making the stadium one of the best equipped among secondary schools in this section.

400 CASES FACING U.S. SUPREME COURT

1938 Term To Open Monday in Atmosphere of Tranquillity.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The supreme court will begin its 1938 term Monday amid conditions contrasting sharply with those that ushered in the 1937 session. Approximately 400 cases are on the docket.

It was one year ago tonight—three days before he took his court seat—that Justice Hugo L. Black delivered a radio address in which he said he had been a member of the Ku Klux Klan but had resigned.

There also were continued repercussions from the long congressional battle over President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the judiciary.

But the new term begins in an atmosphere of tranquillity. Only two justices described by Roosevelt men as "conservative"—McReynolds and Butler—remain.

The principal discussion centers around the likely successor of Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, who died last July. Belief is that the President will make no nomination until congress convenes next January.

A challenge of the Tennessee Valley authority act and disputes involving interpretation of the National Labor Relations act are included in the calendar.

LEGATION AT BOGOTA TO BECOME EMBASSY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP) The State Department today announced that President Roosevelt has approved elevation of the United States legation at Bogota, Colombia, to the grade of an embassy.

The government of Colombia is taking similar action with respect to its legation in Washington.

Under the Cherokee Rose

By Rose Marie

New state-aid cancer treatment centers are in operation at Dalton and Savannah. The treatment center at Dalton was opened in July and the one at Savannah in August. The valuable deep therapy machine for the Dalton clinic was given by Mrs. M. E. Judd, president of Dalton Woman's Club. The New York office of the American Society for Control of Cancer, after examination of work done in publicity and education last year, issued the statement that Georgia leads the nation in the quality and quantity of work. This is particularly gratifying to Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs since the work has been accomplished largely through the clubwomen, with Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, commander of the women's field army.

The place on the inside workings of the 1939 New York Fair that corresponds to the office of Governor Grover Whale on the outside is filled by a Georgia woman, Miss Henrietta Adderton, formerly of Flowery Branch, and a classmate of Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, and Mrs. J. C. Rogers, of Dahlonega, at Demorest. Every exhibit and every attraction must be submitted to Miss Adderton before becoming a part of the fair. Before assuming this responsible position, Miss Adderton served as judge of one of the police courts in New York, and as judge of municipal marital relations court in Philadelphia.

In the new yearbook issued by the Twentieth Century Club of Boston and sent to headquarters by the press reporter, Mrs. J. A. Horn, a list of the offices is given as follows: President, Mrs. C. W. Groover; vice president, Mrs. L. L. Lundy; second vice president, Mrs. Harry Vann; recording secretary, Mrs. Manley Bradshaw; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harvey Carson; treasurer, Mrs. H. G. Norton; auditor, Mrs. John Leak; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. A. Horn. Included in the book are the chairmen, the monthly programs, list of members, and by-laws which make it of great value to the membership and to the state officers.

The yearbook from the Arts Study Club, of Gainesville, has come to state headquarters and is appreciated. Officers listed are, president, Mrs. John Newt Richardson; vice president, Miss Lucile Castleberry; recording secretary, Mrs. Harry Purvis; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Thurmond; treasurer, Mrs. Oscar Lilly; parliamentarian, Miss Margaret Palmour; scrap book, Mrs. Milton Hardy. The topic for the year is "The Modern Woman," based on a University of North Carolina libary extension publication. The September meeting featured Tallulah Falls school, with Mrs. W. R. Garner in charge.

Ellijay Woman's Club published a most inclusive year-book artistically decorated with sketches of the club home and the club flower, designed by L. L. Daugherty Jr., and dedicated to Bessie Truman Cobb, charter member and honorary life president. In September, "Types of Architcture" was studied, with Mrs. E. T. Hudson, program chairman. Hostesses were Mrs. Howard Perry and Mrs. Herbert Tabor. The president is Mrs. R. W. Smith.

Straus-Levert Memorial Hall adorns the cover of the yearbook of the Talbotton Woman's Club. This club home is the center of community life in Talbot county, a memorial of the alumnae for an old school, the love of three men for their parents and grandparents and the love of a community for its fellowman. Each monthly meeting is in charge of three committees and the chairmen for September were: Program, Mrs. W. B. Allen; finance, Miss Mary Slade; hostess, Mrs. E. K. Leonard.

Members of Stone Mountain Woman's Club entertained their husbands, the board of education, school faculty and mayor and council at a reception recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. N. McCurdy. The interesting program was in charge of Mrs. Robert Tuggle and Grace McCurdy, who undertook to show the new teachers how a "model" schoolroom should be managed. Amusing contests in lesson form were given the "pupils." As Professor Quiz, Judge Ralph McClelland conducted a questionnaire, matching the wits of five chosen couples. Honor students receiving awards were Mrs. Robert Herring, Dudley Johnson, Mrs. Bill Jordan, Miss Mary Ford and Douglas McCurdy.

It is good business to register births and deaths, because these records have a proven value in the social, legal and economic affairs, and are also recognized as indispenable to intelligent public health activities. But aside from these business reasons, the registration of births and deaths is a memorial to loved ones that willl endure. Georgia makes this possible for all, rich or poor alike, by providing for the registration of every birth and death.

On the evening of October 6 Covington clubwomen will entertain with a buffet supper at the home of Mrs. R. M. Mobley and Miss Sallie May Sockwell.

Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, recording secretary of General Federation of Women's Clubs, will speak to South Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs, at the convention to be held in Spartanburg on October 7. She will present the "General Federation and Its Activities," in her address to clubwomen in the Palmetto state. The general theme of the convention is facing facts in South Carolina."

Trustees of Tallulah Falls school had 1,500 reprints made of the report of the school that was published in the recent yearbook of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and gave them wide distribution. Gratifying acknowledgements are being received, including expressions from the General Federation of Women's Club president, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar; the general chairman of international relations, Mrs. Frederick Beggs, of Wyckoff, N. J.; the president of the New Mexico Federation, Mrs. R. W. Goddard, of Mesilla Park. Georgia is recognized as the only state in the General Federation having such an outstanding educational project.

Comer Juniors Pledge Scholarship Sum For Tallulah

Comer Woman's Club met recently with the second vice president, Mrs. R. T. Eberhardt, presiding. Reports were given by Mrs. S. J. Carmichael, American home chairman; Mrs. J. W. Gholston, fine arts. The junior clubs reported three meetings held during the summer. A piano bench was presented the clubhouse, and $5 was given the high school. Juniors and subjuniors pledged $2.50 for the Stewart Brown scholarship at Tallulah Falls school.

Mrs. S. J. Carmichael reported the clubhouse grounds kept in order, and Mrs. W. F. Carithers stated that "clean-up" day at the cemetery was successful. She expressed appreciation for the splendid co-operation of club members and of council members. Mrs. H. J. Whitehead was leader of the program which was in charge of the juniors. Roll call was answered with an item of youth news. A chorus sang the "Junior Marching Song," with Marianne Adair at the piano.

The junior pledge was given and Hilda Cox played a piano solo, and president of subjuniors, Margeret Sims, presented as speaker, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, who told of her recent European tour and of the "youth movement" in Italy. Hostesses were Mesdames C. S. Rowe, Robert Rowe, W. A. Rowe, M. A. Rowe, J. E. Johnson, W. S. Lowe and M. T. Payne, who were assisted by juniors in entertaining during the social period.

Colbert Woman's Club

Colbert Woman's Club met recently in the school auditorium, with Mrs. W. L. Hardman and Mrs. J. C. Barnette as hostesses. In the absence of the president, Mrs. H. H. Hampton, the vice president, Mrs. J. C. Hardman, presided and opened with the collect led by Mrs. J. K. Brookshire. Two working groups reported the sum of $2.50 raised by each.

Mrs. Wyatt Benton read a greeting from the state president, Mrs. Albert Hill, of Greenville, and Miss Lois Johnson read an article from The Clubwoman GFWC. Mrs. S. R. Hardman talked on "Urban and Rural Co-operation," and Christine Loden gave a piano solo. Superintendent Brookshire talked to the members about things he hopes to accomplish in the school, and told ways in which members could assist the school, and expressed appreciation for past services rendered. Refreshments were enjoyed in the Home Economics building.

Parliamentary Pointers of Interest.

Election incidentals: What are the correct steps in an election?

1. Count voting strength and ascertain majority. 2. Read rules in by-laws on nominations, election and term of office. 3. Report of nominating committee. 4. Nominations from the floor. 5. Tellers distribute ballot slips. 6. Tellers collect ballot slips. 7. Report of committee of tellers. 8. Chair declares result of vote. 9. Installation of officers.

Should the president preside at election of officers?

The president should preside during the election of officers, even though she is eligible for re-election. But she should request the vice president (or some other member) to declare the result of the election for her, if she is re-elected.

Election: The by-laws specify the method of nomination, election and term of office, and other details regarding the annual election of officers. The constitution usually contains a list of the officers. Rules should always be read before an election is held.

Duties of president in an election: Before conducting the annual election, the president should consult the constitution and by-laws, to inform herself as to the requirements concerning the election of officers, and have the secretary read the rules to the assembly before proceeding with the election.

The president should carefully outline a written "order of business" for the election so that she may follow with certainty the correct steps as outlined by parliamentarians.

Nominating committee: Select women who are not likely to become candidates; who know the membership and those best qualified to serve as officers.

The duty of the nominating committee is to interview eligible members and secure their consent to serve (if elected.) If the committee decides to nominate one of its members, and that member consents, she should retire from the committee at once and someone should be appointed in her stead.

The chairman of the nominating committee has the same privilege as any other member in committee meetings. If nominations are not decided by agreement of the committee, they must then be put to vote in the committee meeting and decided by a majority of the committee. In case of a tie the chairman casts the deciding vote.

Mrs. Phil Ringel Issues Message

MRS. PHIL RINGEL, OF BRUNSWICK.

Mrs. Phil Ringel, of Brunswick, president of the Eighth District Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, pledges to the clubwomen of her district her best thought and efforts during the next two years. Since her college days at Agnes Scott, where she received her A. B. degree in 1926, Mrs. Ringel's ability as a brilliant leader has been recognized, and she is an officer in five local organizations. She is married to an attorney and they have two children, a boy 9 and a girl 7 years of age.

In a message for the official Club Page in The Constitution Mrs. Ringel says: "After a summer of careful thought inspired by the state convention in Albany, the club institute in Athens, and the deep sense of responsibility I feel toward the office I hold, I have chosen the following objective for my administration: 'Progress—through programs, procedure and projects.'

"For project I want to follow the aim of our general federation president, 'adjusting democracy to human welfare,' narrowed down to 'making oneself a community asset;' that is, having each member of every club want to find out what her community needs most and working to accomplish this.

"The theme of our state president, Mrs. Albert Hill: 'Meeting the challenge of the new day,' cannot be improved upon, so I am using that also. As a district slogan, we will use 'Let us pay our debt to the past by making the future indebted to us.' Only in carrying on further the work of those pioneer women who began our federation can we show our appreciation of what they accomplished.

"The eighth district executive board meeting will be held in the Phoenix hotel in Waycross on October 13, and Mrs. Jack Williams, president of the Waycross Woman's Club, has charge of local arrangements."

Fourth District Clubwomen Meet In Covington on October 7

The fourth district of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs meets in Covington at the First Baptist church on October 7. Mrs. R. M. Mobley, president of the hostess club, will preside at the opening and assembly singing will be led by Mrs. H. I. Shingler, of Ashburn. The club collect in unison will be led by Mrs. Jarrell Dunson, of LaGrange. To the welcome extended by Mrs. J. C. Upshaw, of Covington, Mrs. H. R. McLarty, of Manchester, will respond. A vocal solo will be rendered by Mrs. Shingler, with Mrs. M. E. Goode, accompanist.

Mrs. Mobley will introduce the district president, Mrs. C. J. Killette, of Hogansville, who will deliver her message and call for reports from the following district officers: Mrs. Wilbur Freeman, first vice president; Mrs. R. C. Fryer Jr., second vice president; Mrs. Joe Vason, recording secretary; Mrs. Pierce Lee, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. C. Tyus, treasurer; Mrs. Clifford Smith, parliamentarian.

Distinguished guests will be presented by Mrs. J. A. Corry, of Barnesville, and include the state president, Mrs. Albert M. Hill, of Greenville, and the director for Georgia in General Federation, Mrs. Ralph Butler, of Dallas, who will address the body. The theme of the meeting and the theme of the present administration is "Meeting the Challenge of the New Day," and the talks will be built around this key thought.

The department of Junior Clubwomen will present a skit, "Nothing Doing," written by the state cochairman of juniors, Mrs. R. C. Fryer. During the luncheon, which will be served at the Covington library, music will be rendered by Mrs. R. H. Patterson, of Covington. The afternoon session will feature the district slogan, "Fact-Fanding of Fourth," and there will be three-minute talks by the club presidents on "Plans for Meeting the Challenge."

Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, vice president at large, will conduct a panel discussion on meeting the challenge of the new day through the departments. Taking part will be Mrs. Joe Vason, American citizenship; Mrs. W. A Combs, American home; Mrs. B. A. Hogan, education; Miss Mary Grimes, fine arts; Mrs. Albert Hill, legislation; Mrs. A. B. Anderson, press and publicity; Mrs. George Caldwell, public welfare. "Meeting the Challenge" through the foundations will be discussed by the chairmen: Mrs. J. A. Corry, Tallulah Falls school; Mrs. L. M. Bradford, student aid; Mrs. Henry M. Bird, Ella F. White endowment.

Chairman of State Public Safety Urges Conservation of Human Life

By MRS. HENRY M. BIRD, of Bowdon, Public Safety Chairman.

There is no more important question confronting Georgians today than the conservation of human life. All over the country the effort to remedy the alarming loss of life by accident is limted only by a lack of knowledge of the real facts. The Department of Public Safety in Georgia, directed by Lon E. Sullivan, is putting forth every effort to make the department a vital force in life-saving by having a definite program and by keeping the public informed as to Georgia's record in safety efforts and results.

Mr. Sullivan expressed a desire for the public safety committee of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and the State Department of Public Safety to get together on a specific program for clubwomen, and offers every assistance possible in perfecting such plans. As chairman, I heartily indorse the suggestion and shall endeavor to promote the program as outlined in co-operation with the State Department of Public Safety.

Two major items have been given for our information and study: 1. The establishment of boys' patrol in every school in the state. Some schools already have such patrols, sponsored by the Georgia federation public safety committee. The outline is very complete and Mr. Sullivan believes the clubwomen can play a major part in this very necessary service. 2. Is a plan for the establishment of a citizens' safety council in the counties, especially where the death rate by accident has been highest. Women's organizations are asked to use their influence in promoting this plan.

For the information of those willing to co-operate with the state and district chairmen, articles will be sent for the club page and for the local papers from time to time. When it is possible, I suggest that Mr. Sullivan be invited to present this subject on club programs, and, if practical, make the meeting county-wide. In promoting safety keep in direct contact with the State Department of Public Safety, and that you may have at hand your district chairmen, their names and addresses follow. Write them to visit your club and inform them of news pertaining to safety.

First district, Mrs. S. C. Bell, Millen; second, Mrs. R. M. Tiller, Baconton; third, Mrs. D. C. Royal, Chipley; fourth, Mrs. H. M. Bird, Bowdon; fifth, Mrs. T. A. See that your local community is supplied with the "common sense rules of safety" and that they are observed. Twelve ways to help save lives in Georgia include: 1. Apply the Golden Rule to your driving. 2. Learn how fast your car will stop—not how fast it will go. 3. Keep to the right on hills and curves. 4. Never pass with less than 700 feet of clear highway ahead. 5. Have two good headlights and a good rear light. 6. Have good brakes and tires. 7. Don't drive while drinking. 8. Observe all traffic signs. 9. Never cross a railroad track without caution. 10. Dim lights within 700 feet of approaching car. 11. In wet weather keep 100 feet behind all vehicles on your side. 12. Yield the right-of-way to pedestrians.

Convention of King's Daughters Interests Federated Club Members

Federated clubwomen will share with representatives of the Georgia branch of the King's Daughters and Sons in the 41st annual meeting of the order which will convene in Atlanta October 6 and 7 at the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

The major project adopted by the junior department of the Georgia branch of this splendid organization is a perpetual scholarship at the federation's school at Tallulah Falls. Leading officials in attendance at this convention who will be guests of the Tallulah trustees at dinner on the evening of October 5 at the Henry Grady hotel, include the convention honor guest, Mrs. George H. Prior, of Jewett City, Conn., first vice president of the international order; Miss Kate C. Hall, of Savannah, Georgia branch president, Mrs. W. H. Smith, of Savannah, secretary; Mrs. C. F. Goree, Mrs. E. H. Russell, Mrs. H. C. Gurr, of Atlanta, and Mrs J. M. Murrah, of Columbus, chairman of the junior department.

The Order of the King's Daughters and Sons is perhaps the oldest combined religious and philanthropic group in the United States, having been organized by 10 women 52 years ago in New York city. Today, all over America, members own great properties dedicated to philanthropic work, particularly among the sick and aged.

In Atlanta both the Home for Incurables and the Home for Old Women were organized by the Atlanta chapter of the King's Daughters and Sons.

The badge of membership is a silver maltese cross bearing the initials, I. H. N., which may be changed in any language to represent the watchword, "In His Name." The motto of this great order is:

"Look up, not down;
Look forward, not back;
Look out, not in;
Lend a hand."

Suggestions Offered For Library Service.

Always alert to publicize helpful suggestions for library service, Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, secretary of the Georgia State Library Commission, wishes the clubwomen to know that reference material is available to those taking the study courses arranged by the extension service of the University of Georgia.

She says: "Study courses for clubwomen from the division of general extension of the University System of Georgia cover the subjects of landscape gardening, journalism; family relationships, educational psychology and contemporary American literature. Arrangements for taking any course should be made with the director, Room 10, 223 Walton street, N. W., Atlanta, Ga.

"Clubs in communities without local public library service may use the services of the Georgia Library Commission in borrowing books needed for any course. Where one or two special textbooks are required, it is recommended that the club purchase these and call upon the Library Commission for the loan of supplementary reference books and materials for the course.

"Arrangements will be made to furnish the books as needed, usually to cover one lesson at a time, unless the entire course is being taken over a short period of time. All book loans from the Georgia Library Commission are free for the cost of postage."

Write direct to the secretary, Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, in care of Georgia Library Commission, State Capitol in Atlanta.

Bridge Lite

By Harold Sharpsteen.

TWO HANDY PLAYS.

A good working knowledge of safety plays is one of the outstanding characteristics of the master bridge player. While the crowning achievement may be found in successfully engineering some brilliant end-play, the day-in-and-day-out top-ranking players are well fortified with a repertoire of safety plays . . . plays which limit losses to minimum against all possible adverse suit distribution.

LEAD LOW CARD.

A common combination, often misplayed at suit or notrump contracts is:

North
A Q 3 2
W—E
J 6 5 4
South

Outstanding: K 10 9 8 7

To finesse South's Jack up to North's Ace-Queen, lacking the ten and nine, is a losing play.

PLAY ACE NEXT.

Lead low to North's Ace-Queen tenace. If West plays low finesse North's Queen.

If the Queen holds the trick lead dummy's Ace immediately.

If West plays the King, second hand, cover with North's Ace and lead back North's Queen immediately.

KING PLAYS FIRST.

Another frequently misplayed combination:

North
A 10 4 3 2
W—E
K 6 5
South

Outstanding: Q J 9 8 7.

South leads or plays up to the King on the first round. If both adversaries play low, South leads low to North's Ace-Ten tenace on the second round.

If West plays low, North's ten is played.

If West plays high, North concedes the trick to West and loses no more.

Lay out both hands and play the suits through against all possible types of adverse distribution.

Methodist Women Plan Mission Study Month for October

October is special mission study month for 295,000 women members of the W. M. S., Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The North Georgia Conference, W. M. S., with 450 auxiliaries and a membership of 18,046 has accepted this plan for a month of intensive mission study. Study leaders' meetings were held in each of the 10 districts of this conference during September in preparation for accredited council mission study classes in the auxiliaries in October.

The topic for study recommended by the Woman's Missionary Council is "The Church in the City." The text to be used is "The American City and Its Church," by Dr. Samual G. Kincheloe. Mrs. D. R. Little, conference superintendent of study, has prepared suggestions and helps on this text which have been distributed to each society. The Christian social relations department will sponsor activities beneficial to the city which will grow out of these study classes.

The study of "The American City and Its Church" will be of particular significance since it follows the text "Rebuilding Rural America" which was studied last spring in the missionary societies, and completes the picture of modern American life in its relation to the Christian church.

of especial interest will be the study of council home mission institutions in cities within the bounds of the North Georga Conference, namely, Atlanta Goodwill Industries, Atlanta Wesley Community House and Bethlehem Center in Augusta. The supply department will co-operate by sending boxes of supplies to these institutions.

Among the major activities are homes for aged women, homes for children, a fresh air home, and a preorphanage age children's home. The Georgia branch has the distinction of owning and operating the only home for aged men in the order. A perpetual scholarship for the Junior Department is being established at the Tallulah Falls Industrial school in the name of the state branch president, Miss Kate C. Hall. # Ninth District W. C. T. U. Meeting Is Held With Demorest Union

By MRS. MARY H. ARMOUR, President, Georgia W. C. T. U.

The meeting of the ninth district W. C. T. U. at Demorest Friday was enlivened by the presence of Mrs. Marvin Williams and Mrs. R. H. McDougall, of Atlanta. There was rejoicing when the president, Mrs. R. H. Black, announced that the district had completed its quota of the national temperance education fund and had become a gold star district.

Mrs. McDouglall spoke to the students of Piedmont College on "Why I Do Not Drink," and her audience was delighted. Some of the reasons she gave were: "Because when I am having a good time I want to know it. Because I want to be well; any doctor will tell you that drinking alcoholic liquor is harmful. Alcohol is poison; an irritant, habit-forming, narcotic, depressant drug. Because I want to have a clear brain. Only men and women with clear minds can hope to succeed today. Experimental work done in Europe and America by eminent scientists proves that alcohol even in very small quantities retards mental activity. Because I do not want to waste my money, and money spent on alcoholic liquor is worse than wasted. Because I do not want to kill myself or anyone else on the highway. Who has a right to drink? Policeman, fireman, doctor, engineer, bus driver, aviator? I have no more right as a driver of my own car to endanger life than these have. Because I want to maintain my self-respect. Because I am my brother's keeper, and I must make my example one safe and beneficent for others to follow. For this I am accountable to God."

Mrs. Fletcher Johnson was named head of the Gainesville W. C. T. U. for 1938-39 at the annual election meeting held at the home of Mrs. R. B. Jones on Wednesday. Other officers elected were Mrs. E. E. Mincey, vice president; Mrs. Carlton Miller, secretary, and Mrs. Noah Webster, treasurer. The program of the afternoon was featured by Mrs. V. L. Byrd, who discussed the W. C. T. U. work in the islands of the seas.

Mrs. W. H. Preston, of Atlanta, director of the department of flower mission and relief for Georgia W. C. T. U., had a fall last week on the way to church and fractured her hip. She is at Grady hospital and the doctor says she will have to stay in a cast for six weeks. For years Mrs. Preston has ministered to others, giving the best she had. Now is the time when the best will doubtless come back to her.

A note received Tuesday from Mrs. Burghard says: "I send the members my love, but tell them I am still not able to write letters."

The meeting of the Peachtree Road W. C. T. U. held at the home of Mrs. Guy Wood Tuesday, with Mrs. Robert Andoe and Mrs. B. A. Hickman hostesses, was of unusual interest because an effort is being put forth to establish a liquor store at Buckhead. This is in spite of the ruling made by the county commissioners some months ago that no liquor stores would be allowed in unincorporated territory. Plans were made for committees to notify the Christian people of the community that they might protest in person or by letter or petition. Those present seemed to be convinced that the majority of the people of this section are averse to the establishment of a liquor store in our midst. Feeling runs high, and it is hoped all will make themselves heard. A notice from the commissioners was read, as follows: "The petition will be heard at the next regular meeting of the board, to be held the first Wednesday in October, at 2:30 o'clock in room 514 courthouse, and all persons who have objections to the granting of said permit are hereby notified to appear before the board on October 5 at the above-stated hour and state their objections to the board."

Mrs. J. J. Morgan was re-elected president of the Vienna W. C. T. U. at the last regular meeting, and Mrs. C. A. Sims was named vice president. Other officers are Mrs. W. A. Kirkland, treasurer, and Mrs. J. F. Plexico, recording secretary.

Social Events Close Sorority Rush Week

Rush Week, which closes today, was climaxed yesterday by many novel parties given by members of the O.B.X., Phi Pi, Sigma Delta and Pi Pi sororities. The O.B.X. sorority celebrated its 25th anniversary in honor of its rushees last evening at a formal dinner at the Athletic Club.

Centering the long banquet table in the dining room was a tiered cake embossed in purple and gold, the colors of the sorority. Crystal containers held flowers which carried out the purple and gold color motif, and novel favors were presented to the rushees.

Miss Evelyn White entertained yesterday afternoon at a chicken fry at her home on Peachtree road in honor of the O.B.X. rushees. The table which was placed in the garden, was centered with garden flowers which carried out the colors of the sorority, and during the afternoon the guests enjoyed badminton and other games. Assisting were Mesdames W. H. White, mother of the hostess, Joyce Buff and Joel Chandler Harris.

This afternoon the group of young belles who pledge O.B.X. will be honored at a tea given by Miss Betty McDonough at her home on North Rock Springs road.

Another affair planned for today is the breakfast at which pledges to the Sigma Delta sorority will be honored and which will be given by Miss Georgia Rauschenberg, president of the sorority, at her home on Habersham road. This afternoon the pledges will be honored at a party at Lakemoore.

Yesterday Miss Zaida Clay entertained the Sigma Delta rushees at a breakfast at her country home, "Lazy River Farm" and in the afternoon they were honored at a tea at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club.

Yesterday morning the Pi Pi rushees were honored at a picnic given by Miss Mary Clapp at Brownwood, the country home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Clapp. Lunch was served in blue boxes decorated with the Pi Pi ensignia. Last evening the rushees were honored at the steak fry given at the home of Miss Jane Jarvis on East Lake drive. Supper was served around a large bonfire.

This afternoon Miss Sue Pierson entertains at a tea at her home on Maple drive for the Pi Pi pledges. The sorority colors will be carried out in the decorations. Assisting in entertaining will be officers of the sorority, including Misses Mary Frances Broach, Mary Clapp, Jane Jarvis and also Mrs. Downing Brown, mother of the hostess who is treasurer of the group.

Rushees of the Phi Pi sorority were honored yesterday at a party at Lakewood and last evening Misses Catherine Tift and Ione Mercer were co-hostesses at a spaghetti supper at the home of the former on Prado for the rushees.

Today the Phi Pi pledges will be honored at a luncheon at the Guernsey Jug on the Marietta highway and this afternoon they will be honored at the tea at which Miss Virginia Hopkins entertains at her home on Conway road.

Lens and Shutter—Camera Flashes

If your technique is off and you get a headache over proper exposure, you should take time out to read this column of news about Atlanta camera fans, which is appearing in The Constitution as a regular weekly feature. Sponsored by the Atlanta Camera Club, this column is designed for all amateur photographers. The Atlanta Camera Club itself is an amateur organization composed of 70 candid shot enthusiasts interested in better photography. Whether you know a shutter from a lens you, too, can join the club and take part in its activities, which include educational lectures, pictures competitions and traveling exhibits. All amateur photograpers are invited to submit their best candid photographs to the Picture Editor of The Constitution for use in this column each Sunday.

By LEONARD ROSINGER.

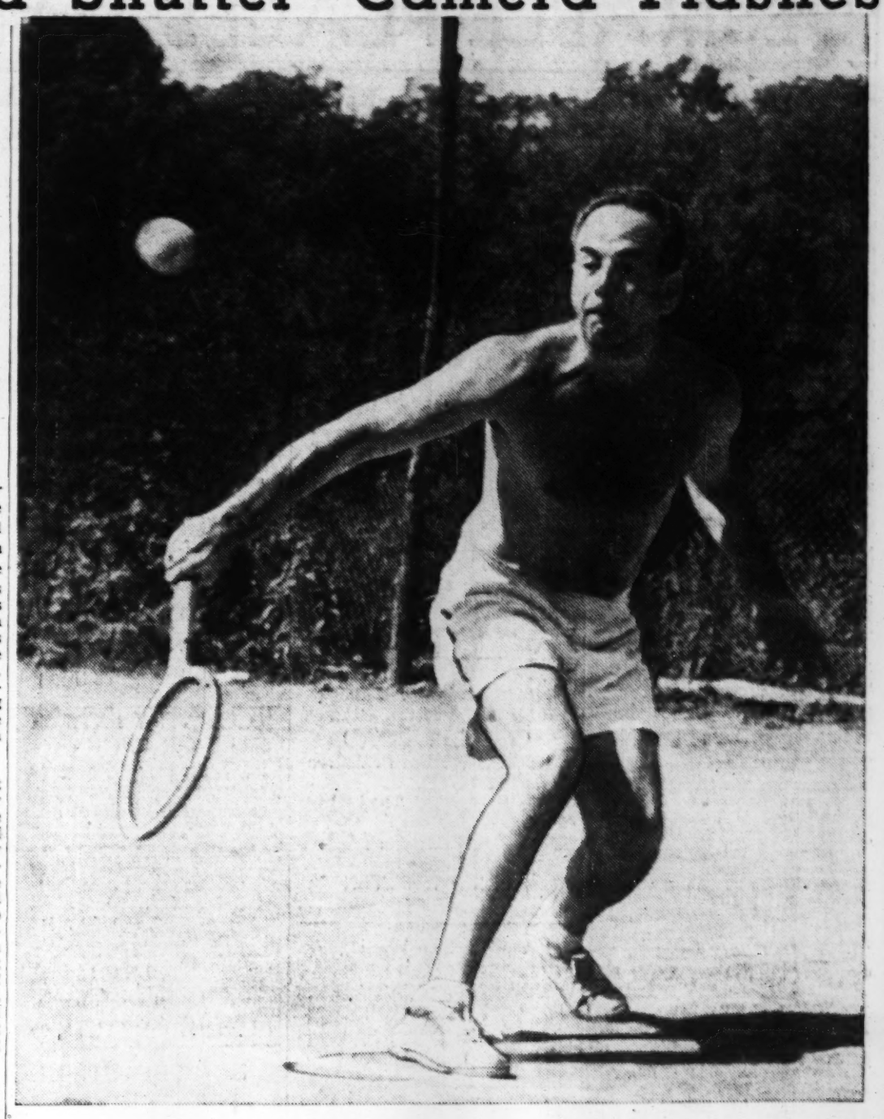

The answer to many a photographer's dream of a picturesque subject would be an old-fashioned four-masted schooner rolling in the seas. So rare, however, are these sailing vessels that pictures of them are almost collector's items. Mrs. Oscar Strauss Jr., on a recent trip to the coast, was fortunate enough to discover one of those relics of a former day. Starting with this excellent material, she added a skillful handling of the subject to make a picture that induces admiration when viewed by spectators.

With the football season about to get under way, no doubt many innocent spectators again will be injured by forced inspection of pictures taken from the top row of the grandstand by overenthusiastic amateurs. A cardinal rule of good photography is "stand close enough to your subject to make the center of interest dominant." At spectator's distance in the football stadium, it is next to impossible to take pictures of any interest. Exception, of course, is when you are equipped with a long-range telephoto lens to bring the center of play within shooting distance.

If you're looking around for picture material, don't miss the possibilities of the carnival midway opening today at Lakewood. Magazines these days are full of interesting pictures taken at fairs and carnivals. The outdoor "bally" performances to induce the customers inside are excellent lens material for candid cameras, and if you want individual closeups the performers are more than willing to pose for you. Wages for this sort of service are usually a print of the finished picture, and if you promise to deliver, the confidence should be respected.

Assignment for the October competition of the Camera Club is causing many a furrowed brow among members. Subject matter of the picture is limited to "Outdoor Scenes at Night" and it presents a tougher problem than did any of the earlier contests. Many night scenes, when brilliantly alluminated and given a long exposure, look just like weak versions of daylight scenes. A nighttime effect can be easily achieved by underexposing the film or by using a red filter to eliminate shadow details and then printing very dark when enlarging. Some club members, disgusted with tricky night shots, are entering night "effect" pictures in their places. "Work" is the title announced for the November competition.

Newest trend in candid photography seems to be audience photographs. It's gotten so that cameramen are turning their backs on the scene that holds mass spectator interest and training lenses insted on the mouths agape to catch the fleeting expression of triumph, sorrow or joy that sweeps across the audience. You might try it yourself at the next football game if you can tear your attention away from the field. Go after a series of pictures of one or two persons as they run a gamut of emotions in a tightly contested game.

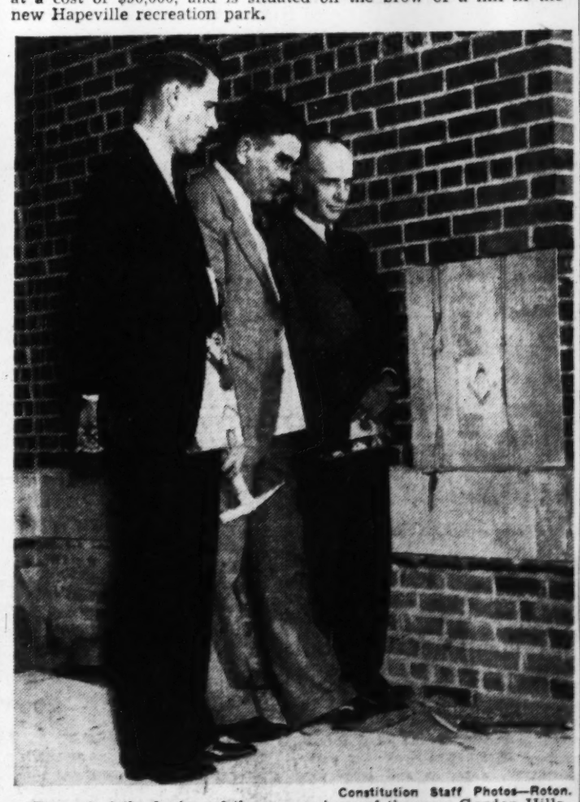

It moves! A photograph of verve and action is this snapshot made by Alan Sommerfield. He caught the poised racket, the ball in midair and the tense expression of the player—and he did it with an exposure of 1-1,000 of a second, with a lens opening of 5.6.

Cornerstone Laid for New Fulton Schools

Cornerstone for the new Hapeville High school was laid yesterday by John M. Travis, of Savannah, grand master of Georgia Masons. Assisting Travis, who is troweling in the mortar, are left, Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent, and Douglas MacRae, principal of the new school. The school was built with WPA help at a cost of $90,000, and is situated on the brow of a hill in the new Hapeville recreation park.

Present at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Garden Hills elementary school yesterday were, left to right, T. S. DeFoor, master of Sardis Lodge No. 107, F. & A. M.; Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent, and T. W. Moore, chairman of the Fulton county board of education. The Garden Hills school, built with WPA aid at a cost of $100,000, is on Delmont drive, and is declared to fill a long felt need in the thickly populated Buckhead section.

VOL. LXXI., No. 112. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 2, 1938. M SECTION

Miss Elsie Hetzel Weds Mr. O'Kelley At Home Ceremony

Miss Elsie Hetzel became the bride of Frederick Henry O'Kelley Jr. at a beautiful ceremony performed last evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, on Highland avenue.

Dr. William M. Elliott Jr., pastor of Druid Hills Presbyterian church, officiated in the presence of an assemblage of friends of the bride and groom, and John C. Shockley, pianist, and Cecil Black, soloist, presented a musical program.

Vows were spoken before an improvised altar of palms which was flanked by seven-branched candelabra containing tall white tapers. Floor baskets of white chrysanthemums, roses and gladioli completed the decorations.

Groomsmen were Alton Burdette, Donald L. Tibbits, and John Hetzel, brother of the bride.

Miss Elizabeth Hetzel, sister of the bride and maid of honor, wore a gown of raisin-colored moire taffeta fashioned off the shoulder, and featuring a full skirt trimmed with matching velvet ribbon. Her hat was fashioned of raisin-colored velvet ribbon and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, gladioli and delphinium.

Bridesmaids were Misses Ola Mae Hetzel, sister of the bride, and Elizabeth Boggs. They wore peacock blue models fashioned like that worn by the maid of honor, and carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums tied with matching ribbon.

The lovely bride entered with her brother, William F. Hetzel, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his father, F. H. O'Kelley Sr., who was best man. Her wedding gown of white lace over matching taffeta featured a bouffant skirt and her short veil of illusion tulle extended from a lace cap caught to her hair with real orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony, Mrs. W. F. Hetzel, mother of the bride, entertained at a reception for members of the wedding party, immediate family and friends.

The bride's table was overlaid with a real lace cloth and centered with a silver bowl containing an artistic arrangement of orange blossoms and tuberoses. Silver candlesticks, holding white tapers, adorned each end of the table.

Assisting were Mrs. J. N. Parker, aunt of the bride; Mrs. F. H. O'Kelley Sr., Misses Caroline Ledbetter, Ellen Connelly, Mesdames Seab Reeves, D. M. Robinson and members of the wedding party. Miss Nettie Lee Greer kept the bride's book.

Mrs. W. F. Hetzel, mother of the bride, was attired in a violet crepe model trimmed in matching velvet, and offset by a shoulder bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. F. H. O'Kelley, mother of the groom, wore a royal blue crepe model and her flowers were a shoulder spray of pink roses.

During the evening Mr. O'Kelley and his bride left for a wedding trip to the mountains. Mrs. O'Kelley wore for traveling a brown crepe dress and green tweed swagger coat with a fitch collar. Her accessories were of brown and her flowers were yellow roses.

Upon their return the young couple will reside at 1089 Blue Ridge avenue.

Miss Trammell Weds Charles Golden.

Miss Rose Trammell became the bride of Charles A. Golden at a ceremony on Wednesday evening at the Peachtree Christian church. Rev. Dr. Robert Burns officiated in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

The bride, an attractive brunet, wore Alton blue with dubonnet hat and accessories to match. Her corsage was of roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rice entertained for the couple following the ceremony at supper at their home at 1369 West Peachtree street.

Mrs. Golden, a popular member of the younger set, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus H. Trammell Sr.

Mr. Golden, prominent young businessman of this city is the son of Mrs. J. A. Golden, of Bessemer, Alabama.

The couple will reside at 328 Ponce de Leon avenue.

Mrs. Holcombe Weds Robert B. Burrows.

Mrs. Merwyn Holcombe and Robert Beck Burrows were quietly married last evening at 6 o'clock at the bride's home on Greenwood avenue, N. E. Dr. W. A. Shelton performed the ceremony in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

Immediately after the marriage supper was served to the wedding party at the home of Mrs. Alice E. H. Kirsten on Parkway drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Burrows are residing at 844 Parkway drive, N. E.

Goswick—Floyd.

Mrs. Lamar Issues Call for U. D. C. Convention in Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 16

By Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, of Elberton, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, president general, has issued the call for the 45th annual convention of the general U. D. C. to convene in Tulsa, Okla., November 16. Convention headquarters will be the Mayo hotel and all sessions will be held there. Mrs. Lamar will preside over the convention and it is hoped that a large delegation will attend from Georgia division as a compliment to our distinguished president general. Mrs. Clyde Hunt, division president, will be the official head of the delegation.

Mrs. Hunt wishes to call special attention of the chapters to the proposed new by-laws included in the call to the general convention. All presidents are urged to read these proposed changes carefully and call attention to them at their meetings. Some important changes are proposed by the committee on general revision of by-laws, Mrs. W. E. R. Byrne, chairman, and action will be taken on them at the general convention.

Mrs. Hunt is very busy now, completing plans for the state convention in Gainesvile, October 25-27 and accepting the many courtesies extended her throughout the division. The past week she was honor guest at Thomaston, where she was entertained at a luncheon preceding the dedication of a memorial honoring General John B. Gordon. On Friday, Mrs. Hunt attended the meeting of the finance committee, Mrs. Hardy Richard, chairman, in Atlanta, and was honor guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. J. L. McCord.

The dedication of a memorial, in the form of a marble sundial, honoring the memory of a native son of the county, General John B. Gordon, marked the culmination of a project dear to the hearts of all the members of the Sharmon of Upson chapter, at Thomaston. Mrs. Grady Fowler is the president of the chapter, and a distinguished member, Mrs. Mark Smith, is serving the division as auditor. The exercises were held under the auspices of the local U. D. C. and the John B. Gordon Chapter, S. C. V., of Atlanta. The principal address was made by Judge John D. Humphries, of Atlanta, and the memorial was unveiled by the two veterans of the county, R. B. Reeves and E. S. Davidson. Distinguished guests included Mrs. Clyde F. Hunt, division president, and McWhorter Milner, state commander S. C. V. All division officers were invited.

Cordele Chapter, Mrs. P. C. Clegg, president, held its September meeting recently and the following officers were elected: Mrs. P. C. Clegg, president; Mrs. J. D. Felder, first vice president; Mrs. F. E. Williams, second vice president; Mrs. P. G. Seaman, recording secretary; Mrs. Margaret Malone, corresponding secretary; Mrs. R. E. Hamilton, registrar; Mrs. John R. Brown, historian; Mrs. J. E. Teate, recorder of crosses of military service, and Miss Tallulah Atkins, reporter. Mrs. Clegg will represent her chapter at Gainesville as president and Miss Atkins was elected delegate. The chapter ordinarily disbands during the summer months, but this year under the energetic leadership of Mrs. Clegg, meetings were held for 12 months, and much work accomplished along all lines of U. D. C. work.

Jefferson Davis Chapter, of Elberton, Mrs. S. S. Brewer, president, held its first meeting of the fall at the clubroom with Mesdames D. J. Thornton, T. T. Thornton, Dave Hudson, Misses May Tate and Kate Carithers hostesses. Splendid reports were made by standing committees; 24 graves of soldiers have been marked, two crosses of military service presented, box of fruits sent Soldiers' home, flags, pictures and books given to schools, donations made to all division causes. The following officers were elected: Mrs. S. S. Brewer, honorary president; Mrs. L. D. Hewell, president; Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, first vice president; Mrs. Caswell Hulme, second vice president; Mrs. M. F. Folsom, recording secretary; Mrs. Dozier Thornton, corresponding secretary; Miss Sarah Anne Wright and Mrs. J. E. Webb, treasurers; Mrs. G. C. Cleveland, registrar; Miss Nora Jones and Mrs. R. L. Rice, historians; delegates to convention are Mrs. S. S. Brewer, Miss Mary Lizzie Wright and Mrs. Anna Duncan. Mrs. W. A. Lee talked on "Indigo, Its Origin and Cultivation." Mrs. August Kerten sang, accompanied by Mrs. Lester Lee. The closing number was a paper on "Admiral Raphael Semmes."

Annie Wheeler Chapter, Carrollton, met with Mrs. M. E. Griffin, the president, Mrs. Horace Cole presiding. "Indigo, How Introduced, Cultivated and Used" was discussed by Mrs. R. E. Foster, while a sketch of the life of Admiral Semmes was given by Mrs. Betty Cobb. Instrumental selections were rendered by Mrs. Jack Aycock.

It will be of interest to learn that Mrs. A. Belmont Dennis, third vice president of the division, and her husband are on an extended motor trip to points in the east. They will stop in Richmond, Va., where Mrs. Dennis will present an oil portrait of General John B. Gordon to the Georgia room in the Confederate museum. This portrait is the gift of the Children of the Confederacy of Georgia through the generosity of a friend.

G. S. C. W. Alumnae.

O. Martin, parliamentarian; Mrs. Thomas A. Moye, Mrs. M. L. Wise, Miss Maude Hilley and Mrs. H. P. McDonald, members of the executive board.

Flower Show Group Postpones '39 Show Till Following Year

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Flower Show Association it was unanimously voted by the members present not to stage a combined show in the spring of 1939.

Due to the fact that it is proposed to put on a much larger show later, it was decided that more time was needed for preparation, and the members agreed to postpone the show until 1940, at which time a very elaborate presentation would be held.

The object of the association is to stimulate interest in horticulture and conservation, and methods for carrying that idea forward were discussed. The ensuing year will be devoted to forwarding plans for the next year's show, as well as to every type of work with the members' own gardens for growing and cultivation of flowers.

Mrs. Grady Black, president of the Flower Show Association, presided at the meeting at which this decision was made.

Opening of 1938 Football Season Inspires Many Social Events

Atlanta's 1938 football social season was inaugurated yesterday when prominent Atlantans were hosts at parties preceding and following the Tech-Mercer game played on Grant field. Among social events preceding the gridiron classic was the breakfast at which Mr. and Mrs. James Maxwell Couper were hosts at their home on Montclair drive. The affair honored Mr. and Mrs. Ryburn Clay, whose marriage was an important event of last June. The guests were limited to a group of the hosts' and honor guests' close friends.

The aperitif party at which Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Osborne entertained at their home on Seventeenth street after the game assembled a group of the hosts' close friends and several prominent out-of-town guests.

Another social affair following the game was the cocktail party given by Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Williams at their home on Brentwood drive. An artistic arrangement of pale green and mauve rose alabaster figures adorned the center of the table and throughout the home a profusion of bright-hued autumn flowers were used as the decorations.

are Mrs. Eugene Harrington, finance; Mrs. Philip L'Engle, tickets; Mrs. Granger Hansell, advertising; Mrs. Evan McConnell, programs; Mrs. Harry Lange and Mrs. H. J. McDargh, publicity.

George Trippe, Former Atlantan, Weds Miss Davis in Evanston, Ill.

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 1.—Centering cordial social interest in Georgia and Illinois was the marriage of Miss Marion Woodling Davis and George Trippe, of Albuquerque, N. M., formally of Atlanta, Ga., which was solemnized at a beautiful ceremony taking place this evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Lady Chapel of St. Luke's Pro-cathedral. Dean Gerald C. Moore officiated in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of relatives and friends.

The chapel was effectively decorated with a bridal motif of green and white prevailing. The altar was banked with palms and ferns, interspersed with tall floor baskets of white gladioli. Placed at intervals amid the greenery were seven-branched cathedral candelabra holding burning white tapers.

Ushers were John W. Waller, of Sparta, Ga., Robert Wilson, of West Palm Beach, Fla., and Lawrence Patrick, of Danville, Ga., and the groom's best man was Julian Kelley, of Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Barbara Boettcher, maid of honor, was becomingly gowned in a floor-length model of turquoise blue quilted taffeta. The gown featured a square neckline, short puffed sleeves and a slight train. Miss Boettcher wore a halo of white carnations, tied in the back with turquoise blue ribbon and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and chrysanthemums.

Miss Mary Trippe, of Atlanta, Ga., sister of the groom, and Miss Anne Webster were bridesmaids. They wore models similar to that worn by the maid of honor, tiny old-fashioned blue velvet hats trimmed with white carnations, and carried muffs of white carnations.

The lovely bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Lambert Davis, made a charming picture in her wedding gown of white bridal satin. The dress was fashioned on princess lines, with high bodice and full skirt that flared into a wide train. The slightly puffed sleeves were fastened tightly from elbow to wrist. The bride wore an illusion tulle veil, which was worn by her mother at her wedding, and carried a shower bouquet of gardenias.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Davis, parents of the bride, entertained at a reception at their home on Michigan avenue for the wedding party, relatives and out-of-town guests. Mrs. Davis received her guests in a model of cornflower blue cut velvet with a tiny feather hat to match and she wore a shoulder cluster of orchids. Mrs. George Trippe, of Atlanta, Ga., mother of the groom, wore Chateau wine crepe with a sequin jacket and a bouquet of orchids.

Later Mr. Trippe and his bride left for Albuquerque, N. M., where they will reside. Mrs. Trippe traveled in a smart model of teal blue fashioned with a bolero and worn with matching accessories.

Out-of-town guests include the bride's grandmother, Mrs. William L. Davis, of Seattle, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Plummer, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mr. and Mrs. Austin Wynne, of Detroit, Michigan.

Fall Program of Post-Debs and Once-Prospective Buds Revealed

Social, Home and Business Careers Divide Interest of Atlanta Belles

By Sally Forth.

THE fact that they were not able to organize a debutante club was but a brief setback to the group of resourceful Atlanta belles who compose the post-deb and the once-prospective deb coteries. They decided to "start somehting," and "start something" they did!

Laura Hill, Sarah Lewis and Ida Akers, that attractive trio who provoked so much social attention and admiration as debutantes last winter, have enrolled at the Atlanta School of Interior Decorating, from which institution they will emerge with an "artistic viewpoint" and a yen for color harmony. Patrice Poole and Mary Carver, who were listed in the prospective deb ranks, also pursue "color and perfection of line" at the decorating school, but they are "old hands" at the game, for they studied there last year.

Rachel Burton turned from a post-deb to a prospective student, for she is seriously considering joining her friends in the pursuit of color harmony. Marie Cherry, another popular Atlantan who reports daily at the decorating school, is a prospect for next year's debutante club.

Kathryn Barnwell emerged from her debutante season to launch upon a career as a member of the Fourth Estate. Doubtless you have already seen her by-line above a clever story or interview in "The South's Standard Newspaper."

"Tish" Preacher, Emmakate Vretman and Alice Armstrong, attractive additions to the business world, have recently been joined by Helen Roberts, who has planned her fall season around a business career.

Ethel Erwin will highlight her autumn activities by attending the Duke-Tech football game in Durham, N. C. Caroline Cooper, another sports fan, is anticipating the Army-Navy game to be played in Philadelphia during the month of November. And, of course, Caroline will be one of Navy's most enthuiastic champions!

Marianna Adair is busily studying French, but as she belives in the theory of "all work and no play—," she plans to "keep up with" her social life by attending the debut of her cousin, Elizabeth Yerkes, which is to take place in Jacksonville during the month of November. Elizabeth has often visited Marianna here, and was a charming guest at the Atlanta belle's debut party last season.

Frances Young is studying voice in New York, and will not return to her native heath until spring! Tommie Quin has no major plans, but she is determined to devote a lot of her spare time to improving her golf game. But if Sally knows Tommie's game, it doesn't need improving!

Roline Adair, Dorothy Sanford, Catherine Calhoun, Mary Morris, Helen Aycock, Bebe Young, Isabel Boykin, Julia Hoyt, Nancy Moody and Ann Brumby will continue their social triumphs of last winter.

Wylena Upshaw, who was one of the attractive out-of-town belles to "bow" here last year, arrives in a few days to be the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Eubanks, at their home on Rivers road. Flora Wright, who was England's contribution to last season's Debutante Club, is also expected to arrive in the city within the next few weeks, and hosts of Atlanta friends are impatiently awaiting her arrival.

Rosalie Brooks, another belle who received an invitation to join would-be debutante ranks, has decided to study for a business career. Accompanied by Sue Bayliess, a former Georgia University student, she will struggle with shorthand and typing at Draughon's Business school. Lilla Farrall, another prospect for this season's club, and graduate of the High Museum of Art, is now a career girl, who apparently enjoys her work.

Matrimony has taken its toll of last season's buds, with the result that a number of the coterie have decided that "a woman's place is in the home."

Anne Atkins was the first to tread the orange-blossom trail when she became the bride of Tom Meador Jr. last spring. Amelia Hewlett, who had the distinction of being the first of the club to announce her engagement, married Tom Perkinson, of Marietta, at a brilliant May wedding. Helen Bell became the bride of Bill Leverton, of the United States navy, in the early summer, and moved to Annapolis for residence. Anne Coppedge, who came from her home in East Orange, N. J., last season to be presented to Atlanta society, married Julian Carr, of this city, and is now residing in Cambridge, Mass., where Julian attends Harvard University.

ELOISE GRESHAM and Stuart Witham Jr., whose betrothal is announced today, admit that Miami, with its tropical moonlit evenings, caused their friendship to flower into romance. The bride-elect and her fiance have been friends since early teen-age, but not until last winter when, by chance, they met in Miami, did they discover the budding of an affaire de coeur.

Stuart, as you know, formed a business connection last fall in the Florida city, where he went immediately for residence. With her parents, the Irving Greshams, Eloise went to Miami soon after for a two weeks' stay. It was during that period that Stuart became so attentive to the Atlanta belle. Underneath moonlit skies and beside the Atlantic's rippling waves, the pair danced and dined at fashionable clubs and hotels.

Those were lonely days for Stuart after Eloise returned home. In fact, the former Atlantan was seized with such homesickness that, in the 11 months that have passed since Eloise's visit, he has found much business to bring him here. But it was not until his visit a few weeks ago that he was able to persuade her to return to Miami this winter for a permanent visit as Mrs. Stuart Witham Jr.

Mrs. Dixon Named Vice President Of National Legion Auxiliary

By MRS. C. B. McCULLAR, of Milledgeville, State Editor.

All Georgia is rejoicing this week over the election of Mrs. P. I. Dixon, of Thomasville, as southern vice president of the National American Legion Auxiliary. Mrs. Dixon was elected last week at the national convention in Los Angeles and installed there Thursday with the new official staff. Mrs. Dixon, who is the former Miss Martha Speer, is a past department president of the Georgia auxiliary and has served as head of many of its committees. She has already served on the national staff as national committeewoman from Georgia. She has a long and outstanding record of devotion to the auxiliary, and her new office will carry her on auxiliary missions to all parts of the south. She succeeds Mrs. A. H. Lawo, of Tennessee, in this office.

Annual round-up of all former auxiliary members and enlistment of new members has centered the attention of all units during the past weeks. The department is striving for the biggest membership in its history as a special compliment from her own state to Mrs. Dixon as she assumes her duties as southern vice president. Mrs. R. G. Vinson, of Thomasville, leads the membership drive. The district having the greatest percentage of quota units 30 days before the annual convention will win a beautiful hand-painted ship picture. Mrs. Vinson reminds those who have recently organized new units of the importance of organizing units in their districts, and that since the new units can only have the minimum number required under their own charter as a quota, the new units accomplish their quota requirements at the same time that they receive their charter.

Mrs. W. S. Davison, department president, returned to her home at Baldwin this week after heading the delegation to the Los Angeles convention. She was official hostess at a tea given in honor of Mrs. Dixon by the Georgia delegates. Assisting her was Mrs. J. W. Oglesby, of Quitman, who has just completed her term as national executive committeewoman. Mrs. Oglesby is succeeded in that office by Mrs. Edgar Pullen, of Cordele, immediate past president.

The Perry unit entertained with a party for Ward 8 at the Augusta hospital Friday. The party was arranged by Mrs. T. D. Murphy, hospital director for the auxiliary, and Miss Nell Harper, recreational aide at the hospital.

Georgia units are taking on a special seasonal activity now in helping with annual autumn county fairs in their various communities. This is regularly scheduled on their programs of community service. Dawson unit, under the leadership of Mrs. J. B. Petty, is planning for its part in the big annual peanut festival there. Mrs. D. A. Gann and Mrs. H. B. Hodgson have been named co-chairman for the Allen Fleming unit's fair committee at Athens for October.

One of the youngest units in the department, welcomed by the whole state, is the Hugh Holt unit at Lawrenceville, recently organized by Miss Helen Estes, of Gainesville, past president and Area C child welfare chairman. Mrs. J. E. Shafer is president; Mrs. Jim Cates, vice president; Mrs. Paul V. Kelly, secretary; Mrs. J. V. Dunagan, treasurer; Mrs. L. O. Hinton, historian; Mrs. R. M. Higgins, chaplain, and Mrs. O. N. Pharr, sergeant-at-arms.

Mrs. John Lynch, director of hospital work at Atlanta's Veterans' hospital, sends the greetings and appreciation of herself and the veterans there to Georgia units for the splendid parties which have been made possible for the boys by Georgia's auxiliary units this year. The Cedartown, Claxton, McDonough and Winder units entertained during the summer months. Union City's unit entertained the boys in August. The September hostess units were Danielsville, Forsyth and Monroe. The Monroe unit drove to Atlahta and presented a program of music. Says Mrs. Lynch: "The patients are simply overcome by the abundance of treats provided by the visiting units and marvel at the great expense and effort put forth, to say nothing of the transportation feature which means a lot of work for some one back home in arranging. Truly these parties are the highlights of the month here. New life is injected; fresh viewpoints are gained, and hopelessness, for a time at least, is dispelled. I cannot express to the women of Georgia's auxiliary how much their efforts in this direction mean to these patients."

The outstanding project for the school this year is to be "health." It is the desired goal that every child be 100 per cent as to health and dental certificates. Another important project of the P.-T. A. is that of beautifying the grounds. It is hoped that these will be worthwhile and that they will contribute to Cascade's remaining a superior school. # WHERE YOUNG ATLANTA REIGNS!

"She'll be coming round the mountain—." The Atlanta Boys' Club hill-billy band is warming up for its first radio broadcast to be given in the near future. Boys with musical inclinations receive cheers, and encouragement, not jeers, from the other club members as they practice. In the spacious music room, which is equipped with piano, organ, radio and song books, boyhood finds musical talents are appreciated and he joins with other boys in lifting the rafters. Members of the band, from left to right, at the upper left, standing are James Bell, Franklin New and Sam Maslacge. Morris Weed is seated in front.

Well-lighted reading rooms, and a library with scores of books, attract the boys and extend an invitation to them to increase their knowledge while seeking pleasure. This candid camera shot—upper right—shows Roy Wood engrossed in the contents of a popular picture magazine. In the reading room at the Boys' Club will be found the latest periodicals and the classics.

In the workshop, members of the Atlanta Boys' Club make useful articles for the home. At left center, a group of youngsters is receiving instruction on the use of the copping-saw, from Shop Instructor W. B. Bizzell. Notice the cigaret stand, the wall-rack and book-shelf the boys in the foreground are holding. They are being made by the boys themselves, who take a pride in their handicraft. W. W. Woolfolk, director of the club, says the workshop was equipped by money donated by Atlanta citizens who believe in the work being done by the club and that materials for the various articles are supplied by the city's lumber yards in the form of scrap wood.

The spacious games-rooms attract the boys of all ages to participate in contests of fun and skill. If they are not playing themselves, the spirit of contest attracts them to watch others as the group—center right—is doing. The boys playing on the carom board are Dillard Medlin, left, and Lee Hamilton, right. Other games provided include ping pong, football, tennis, checkers, puzzles, etc.

In the rambling, three-story building below, which once housed the Standard Club and more lately a branch of the Salvation Army, boyhood in Atlanta finds a sanctuary where every boy's a king. Each afternoon after school hours, between 2 and 9 o'clock, 334 boys spend happy hours laughing, playing, studying, working in a wholesome atmosphere. They are the members of Atlanta's newly organized Boys' Club which is housed by this building at No. 314 Washington street. Organization of the club represents the fulfillment of a dream for W. W. Woolfolk, director of the club, who began back in 1933 trying to interest Atlantans in establishing some club in which the boys can find wholesome entertainment and instruction, thus taking them out of alley gangs which roam the streets while parents work.

Constitution Staff Photos—Wilson

By LEE ROGERS.

Every boy is Royalty at No. 314 Washington street.

In the rambling old three-story building, boyhood finds a sanctuary with no barrier to class or creed.

Here daily, his laughter makes the rafters ring.

This is the home of the recently organized Atlanta Boys' Club and here youth has found a natural habitat away from the barren streets and back alleys—the "playground" a swiftly moving civilization had forced him to frequent in his search for outlets for his adventurous cravings and for his longing for friendship and group activity.

In the eyes of the Boys' Club, the boy is supreme. Inside the clubhome, he plays, works and solves his problems in his own manner. He learns the constructive, and he molds the foundations of character which will aid him in becoming a better citizen.

The Boys' Club represents a dream come true for W. W. Woolfolk, executive director of the club. Way back in 1933, he began preaching the need of some club activity that would interest the 'teen age boys, that would keep them out of the streets and prevent them from joining the alley gangs.

For five years Woolfolk continued his efforts in the boys' behalf. His fellow citizens were amazed at the growing record of truancy and juvenile delinquency and the evidence of lack of respect for property and authority. He told them something must be done.

Through these years Woolfolk was working with Judge Garland Watkins in the juvenile court. He had first-hand information on juvenile delinquency and slowly pounded home his point.

In the winter of 1938 th Kiwanis Club undertook to aid Woolfolk in formation of a boys' club here. Other civic clubs responded. The Salvation Army donated a clubhouse.

On July 6 the present club headquarters were opened and Dick Heaton, of 129 Brown place, was enrolled as the first member. Twenty-three other boys joined that first day, 142 the first week. Now 334 boys between the ages of 8 and 18 are enrolled. By the first of the year, Woolfolk anticipates a floating membership of from 750 to 1,000.

Each boy registers as he enters the club. After that he is free to participate in any activity offered his group for the day. No check is kept on him. He is on his honor, and can come and leave as he chooses.

The clubhouse is open daily from 2 until 9.

"All we try to do is to make the programs interesting and attractive, so that the boy will want to stay," Woolfolk said. "We force no memberships, have no attendance requirements."

Last Thursday the Boys' Club held a formal opening of the building. Open house was conducted from 4 until 8 o'clock and all Atlanta was invited to see the work being carried on by the club. The boys observed their regular schedule as best they could with so many visitors around.

If you didn't attend, you missed one of the happiest pictures of contented boys you could find anywhere.

The youngsters were proud of their handiwork, and rightly so.

In the workshop, under the supervision of W. B. Bizzell, the boys spend an hour a day—if they wish—making cigaret stands, book ends, tables, waste-paper baskets, or whatever might enter their minds. Once-a-week group instruction is given in the manual arts.

Lumber yards around the city send scrap wood to the club, and the boys transform these scraps into acceptable pieces of furniture.

Expense of running the club—about $500 per month or $6,000 yer year—is defrayed by contributions from Atlantans who are sold on the work being done.

But the boy doesn't get the advantage of the workshop, the showers, the game rooms, the music instruction, the radios, the victrolas, the gym, or playgrounds, without paying his part.

Payment of dues gives the boys a sense of ownership.

Midgets (8 to 11) and Juniors (11 to 14) pay 5 cents for a membership card and 10 cents per month dues. Seniors (14 to 18) pay 15 cents per month dues. These paid, the boy is a member in good standing and entitled to vote in elections.

Each group has its own officers, elected in much the same manner governmental officials are elected. And they say the politicking is hot. A president, vice president and secretary-treasurer are selected for a period of six months. These officials from each of the three groups form the executive council, which is being trained to assume full responsibility for the discipline and regulations of the club as a whole.

In the senior group, Rutledge Lindsay was named president; C. T. Buffington, vice president, and Lonnie Clark, secretary-treasurer. The juniors selected James Lindsay, president; Ted Denson, vice president, and Harold Lindsay, secretary-treasurer. The midget group named Joseph Connally, president; Verlyn Baker, vice president, and Marshall Veal, secretary-treasurer.

Incidentally, all activity at the club is conducted within these groups. Three choices of things to do are provided at all times for all groups; thus the boy can pick that which interests him most.

Group officers make the laws and regulations for their division and keep after the members to attend regularly. (That registration at the door provides an easy attendance check.)

The junior officers have even undertaken to issue a newspaper. It's called the ABC Special. Woolfolk says if it keeps improving, the authorities will find some way of mimeographing it for them. The boys type it now.

"You can tell new members by their attitude," Woolfolk said. "The new members are cocky. But after a week or so they join in with the others and take pride in playing the game fairly and in making useful things in the workshop. A spirit of friendliness and fairness exists."

The boys are fond of Mr. Woolfolk. The youngsters tug at his coat to attract attention. And they usually get it, too.

It's Mr. Woolfolk this, and Mr. Woolfolk that. He won't allow them to give him a nickname.

Two youngsters, very much upset, came running up to Woolfolk the other day: "Mr. Woolfolk, why did that man run us out of the gym? We were playing up there and he ran us down."

"You boys must not have been behaving. That's why he ran you down. Run along now and play your games in a gentlemanly manner," Woolfolk counseled them.

And smiling broadly—knowing they hadn't fooled Mr. Woolfolk—they ran from the room and contentedly resumed their boxing match.

While the photographer was in the workshop taking pictures, the boys were told to stop work for a few minutes. Most of them misunderstood the reason, and there was a howl:

"Must we check in our tools now!"

That gives a faint idea as to how interested the kids are in their handicraft.

George Groom and Jack King, assistants to Woolfolk in charge of the game rooms, say there is never an idle moment in their departments. The boys have pool tables, football games, ping-pong, carom and other games available, and they use them constantly. In the gym there are punching bags, a basketball court, and a boxing ring.

In the playground is a tennis court.

A group of boys are organizing a hillbilly band which Woolfolk hopes to put on the air in the near future.

Every activity the average boy finds interesting is provided, and first-aid is available in emergencies.

"The club belongs to the boys, and they are made to realize this in every manner possible," Woolfolk explains.

The Boys' Club movement as a means of crime prevention is not new. More than half a century ago, just after the War Between the States, a number of the New England communities set themselves to the task of providing leisure time leadership for the gangs of boys on the street of the mill towns. They saw the restless energy of boyhood and recognized that undirected activity often leads to mischief and criminality. And so the Boys' Club movement began.

In 148 American cities the Boys' Club is functioning. In 89 of these organization, a quarter of a million boys are engaging in recreational and vocational activities with trained leadership to direct their free time. Play is used as a means to an end—the building of character—and without exception the testimony of unbiased observers indicates the good effects produced.

"A Boys' Club is not just any group or club of boys," Woolfolk explained. "It is a specific social service institution, serving the boys of a neighborhood or community with a building, a program of activities and trained leadership."

The boys are not considered problem children, and the word underprivileged is banned in speaking of members of the Atlanta Boys' Club.

To join the club, a boy fills out an application in which he signs this pledge:

"If I am granted the privilege of becoming a member of the Atlanta Boys' Club, I will always take a personal interest in all the club's activities and will do everything in my power to take care of the club building, the equipment and the games. I will be kind to all other club members; I will be fair in all of my play and work; I will be honest and truthful in all of my dealings everywhere; I will show my appreciation by being loyal and helpful."

The parent signs a release to the club in the event of injuries or accidents to the member in connection with the club activities, and authorizes the club to furnish first-aid service in case of injury or accident.

Prominent citizens of Atlanta who are connected with the Atlanta Boys' Club, Inc., are the following officers, committee members, and directors:

George Armstrong Custer--Man or Devil, Hero or Coward?

He Finally Became A Hero, Only In Death

By COLONEL THOMAS SPENCER.

The ony reason I ever became interested in the life of the "great" Indian fighter, George Armstrong Custer, was probably a chance remark my father made to me some 35 years ago. We were visiting his old home in Halifax county, Virginia, when my father remarked, "Custer destroyed our crops after Lee had surrendered."

"After?" I asked.

"Yes, after the war had ended," replied my father. What manner of man could this be, who after the War Between the States had ended, would deliberately destroy the crops of a helpless people? We shall see.

In all fairness to George Armstrong Custer, one must refer to him as "Paradoxical" George; the George of many whims and fancies; the man who on occasion was a real hero with all the glittering trimmings of a hero; the man who was kind to animals; the man, when tried, was found true; he was a tenderly devoted husband; and, he enforced discipline. And, yet, this same George was a terribly brutal commander; a man who ordered the hanging and shooting of Confederate enlisted soldiers, and witnessed these executions; and, a man who, when he should have rescued one of his officers, deliberately turned his back and let the Indians scalp this officer and some of his enlisted men; and who, though he was called a great Indian fighter, finally lost his life for lack of generalship and the total absence of the ability of a scout he was supposed to have been. Such a man was this paradoxical Custer.

Let's skip through the career of this general—later Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer. Born December 5, 1839, at New Rumley, Harrison county, Ohio, Custer lived exactly 36 years, six months and 20 days, dying at Little Bighorn, about 4 in the afternoon, June 25, 1876. How he died is swallowed up in one of those mysteries that came out of the west in those trying days when the souls of men were tried. Those terrible days when the Indian was being pushed westward—to find as best he could—a new home. No white man lived to tell the tale of Custer's death, but white men lived who knew Custer as Custer really was. Some of Custer's old comrades, in respect for the dead, kept quiet.

The general's wife—devoted to the last—wrote book after book—trying as best she could to make her hero live on through the ages—a hero to those who knew better. Brave men kept quiet—until such a time when the devoted Mrs. Custer might pass on. She outlived them all. She sleeps beside her husband at West Point.

Custer had no military background that came to him from his parents. Just what nationality was his is not known. To the Custers—Emmanuel and Maria—were born three other boys besides George Armstrong—Thomas, Nevin, Boston— and a sister, Margaret Emma. George Armstrong Custer and his brothers, Boston and Thomas, and the husband of the sister, all died together that sultry Sunday afternoon, June 25, 1876—in a manner unknown. Their deaths can be laid to the paradoxical George Armstrong Custer—who on that June 25, 1876, was disobeying orders when he permitted his cavalry to be trapped and killed by the Indians. The great Custer—killed—as he had killed. Trapped and massacreed by those whom he would kill. Such a man was George Armstrong Custer.

From boyhood to death, George Armstrong Custer was constantly in trouble. It was hard to find a school that would keep him, in his youth. His parents seem to have had a hard time keeping him at home or with other kin. Disobedient from start to finish. Through political pull—George Armstrong Custer was permitted—on June 3, 1857—to enter the United States Military Academy, at West Point. The then secretary of war, Jefferson Davis, signed the document that permitted young Custer to enter that school.

Custer was to be a headache to this same Davis in later years—as we shall see. It was at West Point that the nearly six-foot Custer received his nickname of "Fanny." Imagine the terrible Custer being called "fanny." In a room next to Custer's at West Point was one Thomas LaFayette Rosser, of Texas, who in later years was to hand "Fanny" Custer a real trimming. At West Point, Custer was a slovenly, insubordinate cadet. Tardy at his classes—filthy to a great degree. In spite of the many demerits piled up against Custer—and due entirely to the breaking of the War Between the States—Custer was graduated with the class of June, 1861. Thirty-four cadets received diplomas in June. Custer stood at the foot of the class—No. 34. Custer—second lieutenant—arrived in Washington on July 19, 1861—there to start a career that would end only in death 15 years later.

History records that Custer's first assignment was to deliver a message to old McDowell—who was out at Bull Run—to whip the "hell out of the damn Rebs," and "to capture Richmond," and, "to end the war." Old Lady Luck must have ridden out of Washington with young Custer. And, how the old lady was to smile at the young paradox in the years to follow. No word in the English language can best describe that indefinite something that dogged in the footsteps of Custer, than "luck."

Lady Luck did not smile so brightly on Custer at first Bull Run. There he merely watched through the blunders of the Yank and Reb. Records indicate that—due to inactivity—Custer was on "sick leave" from October, 1861, to February, 1862. On this "sick" leave Custer met Elizabeth Bacon, the future Mrs. Custer. Custer rejoined the fifth cavalry in February of 1862, later being commissioned a captain on McClellan's staff. Lady Luck starts to smile.

Later, he killed his first Confederate officer—taking that officer's horse and sword. The sword was to be his to the end. But, on June 27, 1863, Lady Luck smiled out loud at George Armstrong Custer. He was commissioned brigadier general. Custer was then 23 years of age—the youngest general in the federal army. Yes, Lady Luck, laughed. Brigadier General Custer—commanding the seventh Michigan cavalry. But, more is to come.

The yellow-topped Custer almost made his last charge at Gettysburg—when without learning the strength of old Wade Hampton's cavalry—he made a wild charge into the ranks of the Gray riders. Custer's horse went down—and down went Custer. A Confederate cavalryman arrived to put the finishing touches to the young general—when in stepped Lady Luck in the form of Trooper Churchill, of the sixth Michigan—who killed Custer's attacker. But there was no Lady Luck in that Little Bighorn of later years.

History records that Custer disobeyed orders again at Gettysburg. True—for a day at Gettysburg—Custer was a hero. A look at the Custer uniform at this time will give some idea as to the wearer. As irregular as uniforms were in those days—Custer's was worse. Black velvet trousers—with two rows of gold down the seams, these tucked into high boots; black velvet jacket with looping rows of gold braid; a navy blue flannel shirt, and, topped off with a scarlet tie. To see Custer in those days, one would not wonder at the West Point nickname of "Fanny." Fanny, the brigand. While pushing Lee back into Virginia—after the Pennsylvania disaster—Custer had adopted a slave for his cook—as well as a youngster. One will say, "Custer was a kind man." Yes, "Fanny the Brigand," kind. Bah!

The selfish egotistical Custer—harsh to the extreme. Yet, there cropped out acts of kindness. Kind to his horses, to his servants, but damnably mean to his men. Of his men he demanded cleanliness, but for himself—filth. In October of 1863 he wrote in part, "I feel that here, surrounded by my little band of heroes, I am loved and respected." Yes, probably respected—but never loved. There were moments when one had to respect a man who would lead a charge, but respect cannot be termed as love. Men loved "Jeb" Stuart and Joe Johnston, but man could not love Custer.

Nearly trapped in October by Stuart—Custer did manage to cut his way to freedom. Lady Luck was still smiling. The "Buckland Races" are known to every reader of Civil War history. It was in those races that Custer was forced to flee from Stuart. But, again Lady Luck saved the day—and Custer's skin. One cannot speak of Custer and not mention luck. The two were unseparable.

Luck again smiled on Custer—when on February 8, 1864, he was married to Elizabeth Bacon, who in after years was to champion his unjust cause. Elizabeth Custer, as we have said, outlived all those who would tell the truth of Custer. Devoted to the end—she was Custer's real champion. Another to champion his unjust cause was General Phil Sheridan. The great Sheridan who swept down the valley of Virginia, destroying and killing. And killing and destroying in a manner that put Hell-War Sherman to shame.

"The Boy General With the Golden Locks" is the title of this picture of Custer in his self-designed uniform, taken in 1863.

Sheridan was to save the disobedient Custer many times in the years that followed. In the end Custer had few friends—his wife and old Sheridan. Sheridan, like Mrs. Custer, tried to save Custer's reputation. Yes, they tried. Of Sheridan, one can have few kind words. Of Custer—less. Sheridan, the Devil, was Sheridan, the Angel, to "Fanny" Custer. A grand combination, these two. More of them later.

OUT TO WHIP STUART.

On May 9, 1864, we find Custer, along with Sheridan, "out to whip the hell out of "Jeb" Stuart. There was a degree of success in this raid, and a damnable blow to the south. The noble Stuart fell—dying a few days later. Lady Luck was again smiling. Sheridan was noting how capable Custer was. On June 11, 1864, Custer was to again meet old Wade Hampton—struck Hampton in the rear, made a capture or two, and then found himself surrounded by both Hampton and Fitz Lee. Again Lady Luck, in the form of Tolbert's Union cavalry, stepped in and saved the day—and face of the "boy" general.

On August 7, 1864, Phil Sheridan commanded the newly organized army of the Shenandoah. Sheridan moved into the valley of Virginia, and along came Custer. Followed outrages of which even Hell-War Sherman would have been ashamed. The drouth in the valley, in that 1864, aided the cavalry movements that were to follow. "Sheridan's Robbers," of which "Brigand Fanny" Custer was a part, were to put to shame all the dastardly deeds of former wars in what followed. Lady Luck was still smiling.

One cannot pass over the valley of Virginia campaign—in which Custer played so prominent a part—without mentioning one Colonel John Mosby, forty-third batallion, Virginia cavalry, regular Confederate troops, for this Mosby was to so rile "Fanny" Custer, that old "Fanny" was to order the execution of some of Mosby's men in the days that were to follow. Mosby—he who had stepped into the Union lines and captured a general—"pestered" Custer on every turn.

Custer could not lay a hand on Mosby or Mosby's headquarters. He did the next best thing—he captured several of Mosby's men—and on September 23, 1864, at Front Royal, Va., Custer ordered—and saw to the execution of six of Mosby's men. Four were hanged and two were shot. On the breast of one of these men—William Thomas Overby, of Georgia—Custer ordered the message, "Such is the fate of all Mosby's gang," pinned. The noble Robert E. Lee permitted Mosby to hang and shoot the same number of captured federals. Sherman would have blushed at such. But, such was Custer.

After the War Between the States had ended Custer ordered some of his own men shot. No pity in the heart of Custer for the men he had doomed to death. He, himself, was doomed. It was Custer that was to see that the valley of Virginia was so devastated that a "crow flying through the valley must carry his own rations." Custer—and his luck played into the hands of Lady Luck again—when he was given the command of troops that required a man of the rank of major general. His promotion did not come until April 15, 1865.

Let's go with Custer from the valley of Virginia to the front of Petersburg, to the right end of Lee's long thin line, and the final days of the war. Custer commanded the third division of Union cavalry. At Five Forks, April 1, 1865, Custer again disobeyed orders, yet his luck held. Followed the nine days of hell—when Lee withdrew to Appomattox—where on April 9, 1865—he surrendered his army of northern Virginia to old Grant, but not until Major General Armstrong Custer had ridden into Confederate lines to demand "unconditional surrender."

Longstreet, the "bulldog" of Lee's army, routed him out of the lines. Later Custer was ordered to march to North Carolina, there to play a part in the defeat of Joe Johnston's Confederates. A dispatch dated April 28, stopped him. Never again was he to lead the third cavalry division, federal army. Other events in the life of Custer would have to do with the Indians. Lady Luck still smiled—though faintly.

THE CONFEDERATE SWORD.

Lady Luck had followed his footsteps through the War Between the States. She had intervened in the "Buckland Races," and again at Trevilian Station; had been at his side when Rosser almost annihilated his command in the valley, and again at Appomattox. Certainly no great strategist; not invincible, only a fair tactician, and, a fair disciplinarian. Tireless—and yet no thought for his men. He certainly would not seem a coward—but this is disputed when one looks in on his career as an Indian fighter. The disgraces in Virginia are over for Custer. He makes a final bid on the hero stuff in Washington, when he dashes by the reviewing stand—twice. Custer must let the world know that Custer is in the parade.

On May 22, 1865, at Arlington, Lee's old home, Custer bids farewell to the third division. For a moment his men forget the tyranny of Custer. They cheer him. Music to Custer's ears. Somehow in my mind keeps coming up the question of the sword Custer had so brutally taken from that dead Confederate officer. On that sword were etched the following words, "No me tires sin razon: no me envaines sin honora." Translated, this means, "Draw me not without reason; sheathe me not without honor." The sword seems to fit in Custer's life—not at all.

When the War Between the States was over Custer went to Texas with the third Michigan. Men of that regiment wanted to go home. Custer wanted discipline. The men became dirty to the extreme, and one sergeant was court-martialed and ordered to be shot. Along with the sergeant, a deserter was ordered to be shot. Custer saved the sergeant, but allowed the deserter shot. This merely shows how extremely cruel Custer could be.

April, 1866, found Custer shorn of his brevet rank of major general, and back to a captain of cavalry. However, on July 7, 1866, Custer was elevated to the rank of lieutenant colonel of the seventh cavalry. Came soon orders to the restless Custer to report to Fort Garland, out in the heart of the Colorado Rockies. November of 1866 saw Custer at the end of his journey—in the west—where plenty of excitement was offered. It was the beginning of the end of "Fanny" Custer.

The Indian—whom he would kill—could and would also kill. In Custer's own "My Life on the Plains," he says, "The army is the Indian's best friend." The army might have been the Indian's best friend—but not at the hands of George Armstrong Custer. In the archives of the War Department one will read a message from General Sherman, dated December 28, 1866, which illustrates his (Sherman's) idea of how to tame the Indian. That message read, in part, "We must proceed with vindictive earnestness against the Sioux, even to their extermination—men, women and children." The life of the Indian was in poor hands when one considers that General W. T. Sherman, aided by Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer, was to be the master. Lady Luck still smiles—faintly.

1867—and we find Custer in the land he liked—the west. Here was adventure. At the head of the seventh United States cavalry, Custer would find adventure. He would be the able scout, the outstanding guide, the heroic warrior, and yet the most unscrupulous Indian fighter of all time. His own deeds of cruelty would far outshine those of the red men who faced him. And, yet, when in that June of 1876—above the Little Bighorn—it was the lack of these very qualities that brought him death. Out there on those same plains politics and jealousy were working against the Indian. Into this mess fitted "Fanny" Custer.

In June of 1867, some few of Custer's men, unable to stand more, deserted. Custer ordered them "brought in not alive." These troopers were shot. On July 28, "Fanny" Custer who had spent half his life disobeying orders, was placed under arrest. Later tried by a court-martial, he was found guilty of seven charges, one of which included having his men shot and then refusing them medical aid. For these crimes Custer was sentenced to be suspended from rank for one year. Yes, Lady Luck still smiled.

In the seven charges was one of desertion. Such a man was the "great" Custer. On September 24, 1868, old Phil Sheridan had Custer reinstated in the army. In his dispatch to Custer, Sheridan says, "Eleven companies of your regiment will move about the first of October against the hostile Indians." He moved immediately back to the west—joined with his seventh cavalry—and was ready to sally forth to kill the Indian. In Custer's command was one Major Joel H. Elliot, and it will be well to remember this Elliot.

On November 23, 1868, Custer moved out against the "hostile" Indians. Late one afternoon an Indian scout reported to Custer that an Indian village lay ahead. Custer, without the formality of ascertaining if these Indians were friend or foe—ordered his troops to charge. The friendly Cheyennes were simply massacred, with no chance to explain that they were friends. So above the Washita Custer had again found a chance to be the "hero." Here, as later at Little Bighorn, Custer had divided his command—without taking into consideration what lay ahead.

During the "battle" young Elliot, with 19 troopers, had chased a body of Indians. Reports of reinforcements to the Indians came to Custer. He ordered all the village destroyed—ignored the plea of his men to rescue Elliot and his 19 men—and then marched back toward the army fort. He left Elliot to fight to death. Maybe you will call this cowardice. It probably was. Lady Luck smiles—faintly.

LITTLE BIGHORN CAMPAIGN.

Let's draw a curtain on the years that followed. In May of 1876, we find Custer pleading to be permitted to join the seventh cavalry in the coming campaign against hostile Indians. But permission was granted with the understanding that he was to be second in command. Events that followed in the Little Bighorn campaign proved that Custer intended to act on his own. In that campaign he deliberately disobeyed orders—split his command as he had at Washita—and marched on to certain death. Later, at the head of 600 troopers, we find young Custer, highly elated at being in command.

Some thought of the past must have surged over the troopers. They cheered him. For the first time Custer did not have his long curly locks. Maybe he had some idea of what was to come. A moment of farewell, and the seventh United States cavalry is marching off to suffer as complete a defeat as regular American troopers had ever suffered. The damnable ego of Custer, the damnable idea of personal control, of personal victory, and of the mantle of the hero. The campaign against the Sioux was on in full. Came days of marching—days of warnings—days of suffering. Yet, Custer marched on. Indian guides deserted because they feared to forge ahead. Yet, Custer listened not to reason—but marched on to doom.

On June 22, 1876, the seventh United States cavalry prepared for its last march. On the morning of June 25 Custer divided his forces, against warnings of Indian guides—set out against an Indian force far superior to his own. At 2 p. m., Custer, with 337 troops, passed from view of all white men. Finally again separating his command, he marched on into "fame" with 225 men. Just what route Custer followed will never be known. Later his body was found, along with the bodies of his troopers. Whether surprised and killed, no one knows, for out of that mess of battle above the Little Bighorn, no white man lived to tell the tale. As near as one has been able to estimate—Custer made his "last stand" at about 4 in the afternoon of June 25, 1876.

Thus, in death, Custer had climbed to the highest peak of heroism. Disobedient, hardly brave, he had found in death that even Lady Luck continued to smile on him. We was proclaimed the nation's hero—the great Indian fighter. Yet, when one scans his life's history, one can hardly bow in worship to a man who followed always after fame, that came to him only in death.

Somehow, that etching on that dead Confederate officer's sword, "Draw me not without reason; sheathe me not without honor," which Custer has always carried with him, seems far out of place hanging to Custer's side. Records do not indicate that Custer carried that sword at Little Bighorn. One will doubt that even that honorable sword could have perished with the "great" Custer. The "great" Indian fighter. Fighter? Bah! Hero? Hardly.

THE DANES LIVE THE GOOD LIFE

(Editor's Note: Joe Camp, of Monroe, Ga., who recently completed his junior year at the Georgia State College of Agriculture, is now spending a year in Denmark, where he is at present at work on one of the fine dairy farms with which the country abounds.. He is there under the sponsorship of the Rotary Educational Foundation of Atlanta, and the following interesting paragraphs are extracted from his letters to his sponsors.)

By JOSEPH B. CAMP.

If you will get out your map of Denmark and look toward the southwest side of the island of Sjaelland, you will see the location of the town of Slagelse, which is about 60 miles from Copenhagen. The farm I am on is close to this town. It is called Mohojgaard (Maiden Hill), after a small knoll just back of the house, and is operated by Mr. V. Christiansen, son of a doctor, and graduate of an agricultural school. His wife is an Austrian by birth and is a former trained nurse. Both of them are very fine people, the type that you find succeeding in any line of endeavor, and when I asked them why they farm, the reply was that they liked the life of the farm in Denmark and that farming was also a good business.

The farm life here would be a credit to any country. Everywhere one finds beautiful homes, not so large and expensive, but very attractive and well constructed, each one with its flower gardens and shrubbery. Within the homes one finds hardwood floors, beautifully panelled doors, and the walls are either plastered or covered with wallpaper. The floors are well carpeted and the walls are practically lined with pictures, both photographs and beautiful paintings.

The furniture, as a rule, is designed for service and comfort, and many beautiful pieces are to be found in nearly any home. Open fireplaces are not usually found; instead there are attractively designed heaters which give more warmth for the fuel consumed. Electrical equipment and telephones are found everywhere.

Most of the farm homes have a combination living room, office and library, and the last part is usually not the least. Here at Mohojgaard one may find anything from farm bulletins to Kipling and Dumas, and many evenings are spent by the farm family reading the masterpieces of authors of all nationalities. To my delight, some of the books are in English, and my spare moments are spent in delving among them.

SOCIAL LIFE.

The social life of the Danish farmer is very interesting, and it should be treated separately. However, I will merely say here that it is elegant, and that perhaps the Dane has found on the farm that ever-evasive quality of living so often spoken of as "the good life."

Mohojgaard is a farm of 80 acres, and one may wonder how such a small farm supports the life and conditions that are to be found here; but after being here for a little over a month, the wonder of it is gradually disappearing and in its place is coming the realization that it is all due to a balanced system of agriculture. By balanced I mean a system whereby livestock and crops balance each other. The problem of marketing all the various products which come from such a farm program has been solved through farmers' co-operatives. One can hardly name a farm product for which there is not a farmers' marketing association to take care of it in Denmark.

On this farm of 80 acres there are crops of barley, wheat, oats, alfalfa, sugar beets, and another beet for cattle feed, timothy, rye grass for seed, clovers for seed, clovers for hay, and clovers for grazing. Of the livestock, there are 38 cattle, 24 sheep, 11 sows from which the average was 20 pigs each the past year, 100 hens, 30 geese, 18 ducks, 18 turkeys, and even 50 pigeons and 20 rabbits are counted in. The pigeons are marketed through co-operatives along with poultry, and the rabbits are sold to laboratories for experimental tests.

The cropping system is worked out in systematic rotations here so that crops of the same type do not follow each other. In this way plant diseases are kept down and a greater usefulness of the soil is obtained. Of any one of his fields, the average Danish farmer can tell you what is to be planted there next year. How often am I reminded of the one-crop system that is found on so many Georgia farms. However, I realize that many of the crops found here would be out of place in Georgia, but the same livestock could be used along with a cropping system that is suitable.

DANISH FARMS SIMILAR TO GEORGIA'S.

As for the marketing and co-operative end of the farming business in Denmark, from what I can learn it had its beginning years ago when the Danish farmers were in a condition similar to the one being experienced by the present Georgia farmers. There was a market, England, if the product was standardized to quality and the supply guaranteed. So the Danish farmers set to work to fill the order. They filled it, and they are frank to tell you that they do not have very much fear of competition because the quality of their products and their standardization is at present away out in front of the would-be competition.

As I said, the Georgia farmers are in a position similar to that experienced by the Danes before their present co-operatives were installed. We have a market in our cities, and when and if we standardize our products and guarantee a steady supply, many of the present ills will disappear. Hand in hand with such a movement would go an increase in the production of livestock and livestock products.

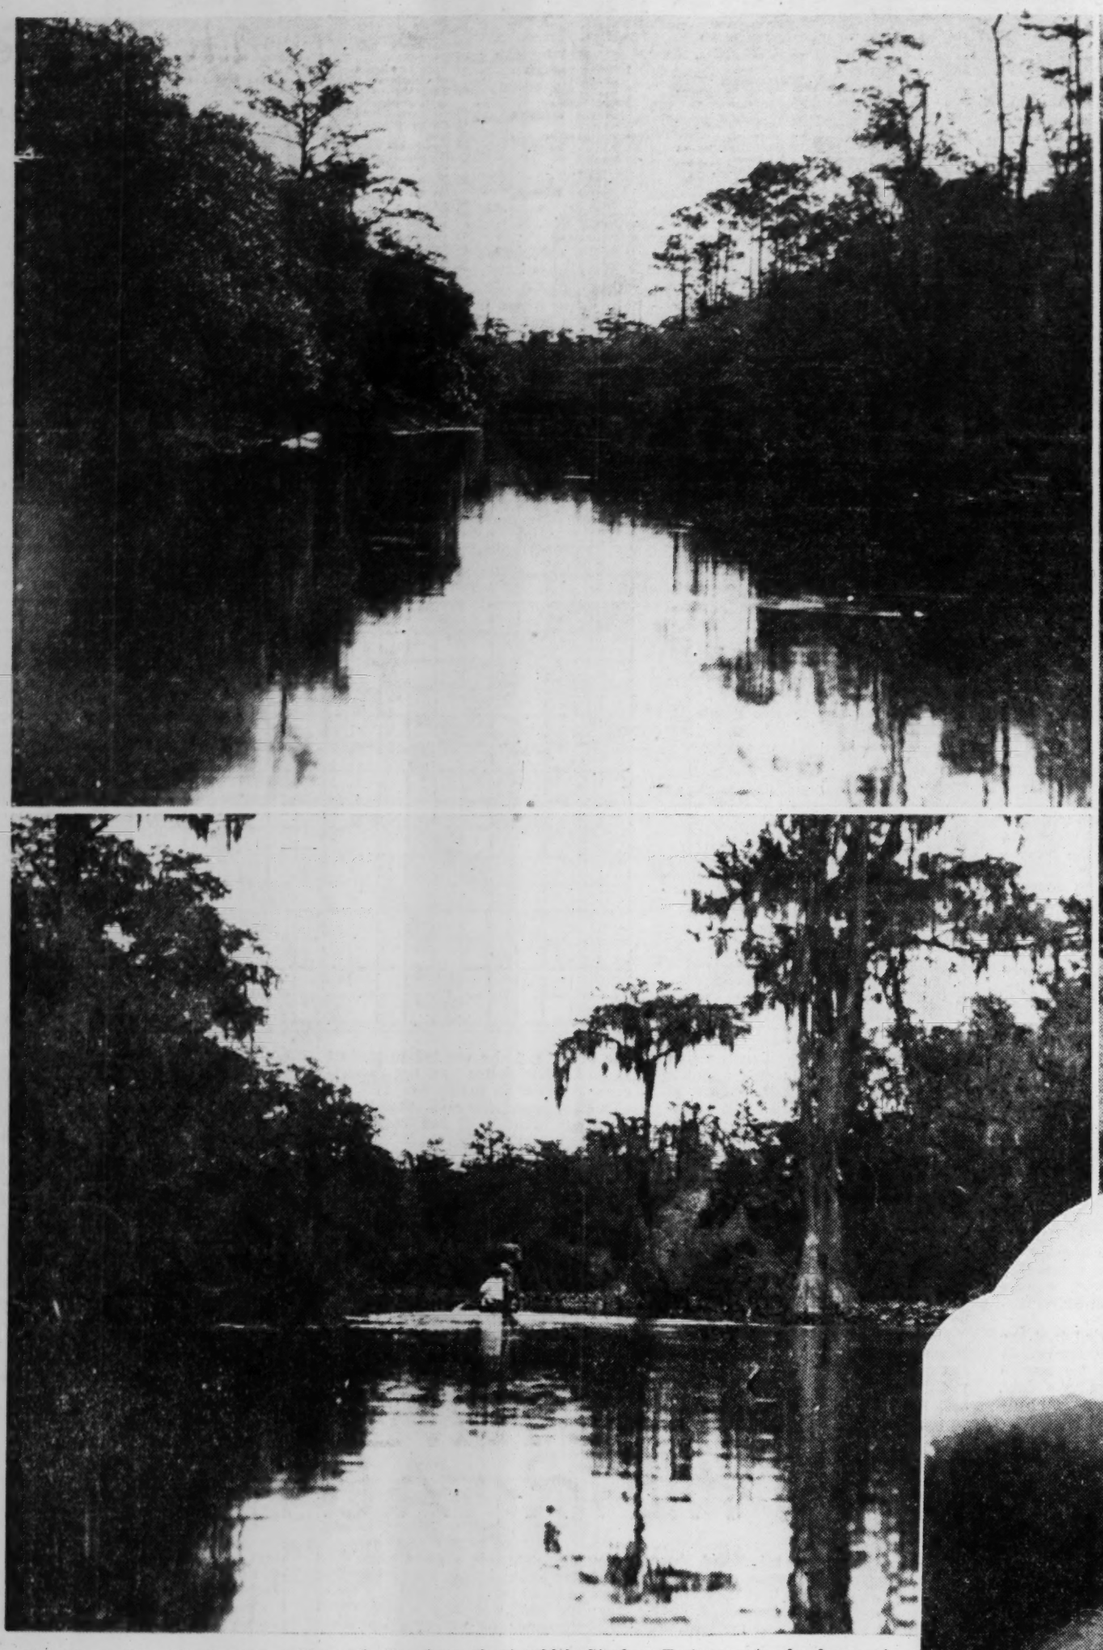

It is the incorporation of livestock in the farm programs that Georgia needs in order to build up her soils. The Danish farmer tells me that he does not like to sell the seeds produced on his farm if he can feed them to livestock and then sell the animals, because from 70 to 80 per cent of the nutrients fed to livestock can be recovered in their excrements. In Denmark one finds the cow barns, horse stables, and pig pens all provided with concrete, brick, or cobblestone floors, which are equipped with drains leading into a tank so that all the liquid manures can be saved for the fields. Such practices have brought Danish farm lands from a state of infertility to probably the greatest proficiency of production in the world today among gricultural lands.

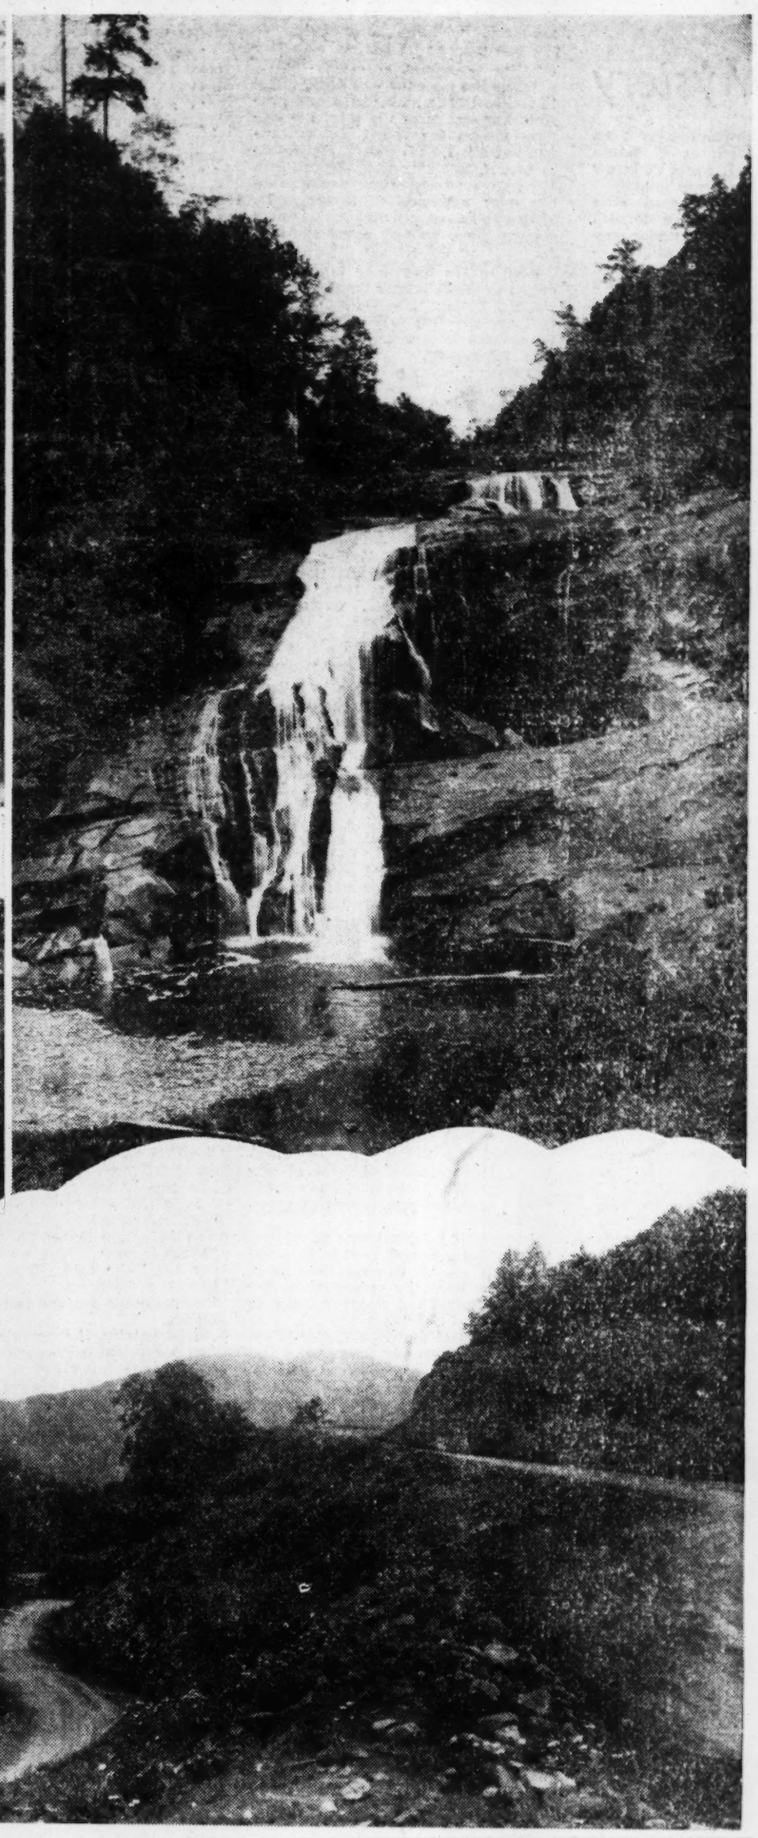

I find in Denmark, cottonseed meal cake, produced in the cotton belt of the United States, being fed to dairy cattle, the butter from which is marketed in England. Thus he Danish farmer is taking this highly nitrogenous material from the fields of Georgia and the other cotton states, feeding it to cattle, recovering from 70 to 80 per cent of the nutrients therefrom for his own fields, and reaping a profit from the butter sold. I mixed a batch of feed only yesterday in which every third pound was American cottonseed meal cake.

The Danish farmer did not arrive at his position in a haphazard manner, nor did he stumble blindly into the practice of using the nutrients produced in other countries to enrich his own soils. As a matter of fact, it is all a well-planned program and when I asked my host, Mr. Christiansen, how the Danish farmers became aware of such underlying principles and how they came to put them into such general practice, his answer was simply, "Education." Through education in agricultural schools they learned these basic principles of agriculture and the advantages in co-operation, and then through their co-operatives they managed to harness those principles.

There is much food for thought in the fact that Georgia exports her cottonseed meal and imports livestock products. Of course, I know that much of the cottonseed meal is used in fertilizers, but if it were fed to livestock, the farmer would have the livestock and still be able to recover from 70 to 80 per cent excreted in manures. The Dane has found this out and is succeeding in agriculture by using his knowledge.

America's Wonderlands at Southern Doors

"Way Down Upon the Suwannee River—"—the river about which Stephen Foster wrote—is shown at the upper left, where it leaves the Okefenokee Swamp on its way to the Gulf of Mexico.

By J. C. McAULIFFE.

From the highest mountain peaks in eastern North America, down to where nature's largest geological lowland wonder may be found, is all in a day's drive from Atlanta. Mount Mitchell climbs skyward nearly 7,000 feet near Asheville, N. C., and the marvels of Okefenokee swamp unfold just a few miles from Waycross, in south Georgia.

Clustering around the highest mountain of the Appalachian range are a score or more of other peaks that rise upward of 6,000 feet, making the region one of the most picturesque of its kind in all the world. Extensive areas of original forests still clothe the landscape, and dashing waterfalls crash over precipices and lend a grandeur to the scenery that is indescribable.

Shrubs and flowers bedeck the woodlands with garbs of myriad hue, and untamed wild things roam at will through the area, while the streams teem with fish unannoyed by the anglers of modern times.

Then down to where the Creator shaped the world in a far different fashion, the great Okefenokee swamp spreads itself out over nearly three-quarters of a million acres of territory, with water trails, runs, lakes, and rivers, making the region one far different from that usually designated as a swamp.

Instead of "a low bushy area, with polluted and stagnant waters," the Okefenokee is a magic creation, with fresh, running water everywhere; with giant cypress trees towering on all sides, and magnificent magnolia grandiflora, with evergreen foliage, beautifying the landscape, adding glories to the scenery roundabout everywhere.

Mount Mitchell, and its companions of the sky, are linked with the region comprising the Great Smoky Mountain Park, and is being connected with the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia and other sections by the far-famed "Skyline drive" that will rank as one of the wonderful roads of all time when it is completed.

Over this highway will pour yet more thousands, and tens of thousands, into the southeast, headed for a section filled with illimitable opportunities and destined to be a great part of the country. Already the effect of this influx is being felt in people who are buying land and settling in the territory.

The two areas are just beginning to be developed. Splendid roads are being constructed in the mountain region, already accessible from every direction. Together with the national parks and the national forests, the territory is virtually public property, with visitors coming from all over the world. The Okefenokee swamp is now largely under the direction of the bureau of biological survey, with its wonders open to visitors.

Travelers are fairly familiar with the mountain regions, but few are acquainted with the grandeur of the Okefenokee. Within its bounds the famous Suwannee river finds its source and wends its way toward the Gulf of Mexico, while the St. Mary's river in Georgia flows to the Atlantic ocean, one of America's deepest rivers, and of purest type of water, according to scientists. Stephen Foster's song, "Where the Suwannee River Flows," has immortalized that stream throughout the world, and the St. Mary's is historically rich.

Within the swamp area are numerous large islands, each containing several hundred acres of high, dry and fertile land. Little lakes abound, running to a depth of 25 or more feet, and some ranging from 150 to 600 feet wide and 4 or 5 miles long. Many beautiful water prairies are found, connected with water trails overlapped by giant cypress trees robed in gray moss, all of which contribute to the gorgeousness of the scenery.

Rare specimens of birds and wild game are found in the region. The plumed egret, the sandhill crane, eagle, water turkey, duck, gannet, ivory-bill woodpecker, and many others of unusual type abound the entire area over, with much wild game of many kinds, all adding to the interesting features of the swamp.

Historic records and Indian legends galore are linked with the story of the Okefenokee and the famed Suwannee river, along with St. Mary's river. Especially beautiful legends regarding the Indians are told, and there the Creeks and the Seminoles met on many occasions. It is related that strong ties bound the two nations together, and, in line with modern interest manifested in the swamp, the Cherokees often visited the section.

They invited the Seminoles to come up and see the dashing waters of the mountain regions, and in this way Warm Springs, Indian Springs, and other watering places became somewhat common meeting ground among the Indians of the three great nations. Osceola, of the Seminoles; McIntosh, of the Creeks, and Sequoia, of the Cherokees, were three of America's greatest Indian chiefs.

In his "Travels in North America," William Bartrom published a graphic description of the Okefenokee in 1791, relating that it was a marvelous area, comparable to the most beautiful spots on earth. Today, the innumerable types of flora and the myriad of flowers make it a sort of paradise that one would expect to find far from the haunts of man. It can now be reached by highways from every point of the compass, fine roads leading to it from all directions. With development ahead, it will attract yet more visitors than ever before in the past.

In the meantime, the season of year is here when a visit to either section will prove interesting. If you want to go to the highest altitudes east of the Rockies, it will take only a few hours to go up to Mount Mitchell, where winter's first touch tingles in a tantalizing manner, and autumn's paint brush is seen far in advance of the coloring of this section. Or, if you want to travel to the scenic lowland, where nature's grandest pictures are unfurled at your feet, now is a good time to go toward the Okefenokee.

And from the marvelous mountain heights, that constitute eastern America's upland wonder regions, travelers traverse an indescribably fertile agricultural section, dotted with towns and villages, and here and there cluttered up with cities, forming an industrial empire that transforms the raw material into finished products.

Rural and urban life at their best exists, commerce and manufacture are intimately joined with agriculture, and the communities lying in between constitute a section certain to grow, with the development of its natural resources, to a point beyond the dreams of the most sanguine exponent of southern possibilities.

With vastly improved roads, and greatly increased mileage, more and more travelers are coming southward on business bent, and in quest for pleasure. They are finding things that attract them, opportunities that lure them into becoming citizens, and all are joining to make the southeast one of the treasured sections of America, destined to become greater and greater with the passing of the years.

AMERICANS IN SPANISH TRENCHES

"Over There" 1938 style for thousands of American boys! What's it like—this "little world war" that observers persist in describing as the overture to world-wide disaster? What motivates the Americans who have butted into what looks like a private and remote fight—and how are they doing? Some of the answers are supplied in this article, by a Buffalo, N. Y., boy who is home from Spanish trenches only until his wounded arm heals.

By GEORGE W. POOLE.

(Copyright, 1938, for The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

Over 100 men were said to have been killed in the first half-hour of fighting on the strategic, key-to-Madrid, Jarama front when they went "over the top" across no-man's-land to lock with Italians and Moors, only three weeks after they left New York city, in February, 1937.

The men had received no training. They familiarized themselves with their rifles by firing five shots apiece into a hillside just before they went into the lines. They had no real uniforms. They had nothing but their hatred of Fascism and their faith in Spanish democracy.

But that was enough. They took the key to Madrid and turned it firmly in the Jarama lock and held that front for four months without relief—something of a record in modern warfare. By summer Jarama was becoming a legend to the later Americans arriving to fight for Spanish democracy.

We began to hear about it from Paris onward. It was in Paris that we had our first contact with the grim reality of the war we had come to fight. We met a shell-shocked negro veteran of Jarama while we were busy turning in our suitcases and anything else we could not carry in our pockets, for we had heard that we would have to hike the Pyrenees mountains between France and Spain because the English-born non-intervention committee had border patrols out to turn back any foreign volunteers.

"'At's a real war down there," he said, rolling his eyes. "Don't let anybody fool you, 'at's war, 'at's real WAR down there!"

They took him away when they found him talking to us.

But the boys did not scare that easily. Altogether there have been about 3,500 Americans in Spain, the majority in the Abraham Lincoln brigade, the rest in transport, artillery and hospital units. Most of them knew why they were in Spain. There were some adventurers and a few freaks, like one who came over to get away from his wife. He stayed and made a very good record for himself. I have often wondered what kind of a woman she must have been.

LIKE A MOVIE.

From Paris to the French-Spanish border we began to live melodramatically like a program picture of European spies. We traveled by night as we got into southern France and laid over in hotel rooms and farmhouses by day, sometimes for many days, almost for a week, while mysterious Frenchmen came to us daily to say it was too dangerous to move. We ate, we slept, we played cards and had plenty of time to think things over.

Our group must have brought the American entries to 2,000. I came for the same reason as the majority: The Spanish Loyalists needed help, and considering the democratic setup of the situation who better could help them than Americans? Under the guise of preventing a world war, the world was sacrificing the Spanish republic to the wolves and giving the wolves every break on top of it. We all believed that the Fascists were out to make a world war sooner or later in spite of any concessions outside of complete license, so we figured we would be helping to keep America out of that not-so-distant world war also, if we kept the Fascists out of Spain.

After two weeks in southern France, we joined other groups at a jumping-off point in the foothills of the Pyrenees. About 100 of us, Poles, Hungarians, Austrians, Germans, Czechs, and 20 Americans, started out single file behind a guide following an old smugglers' trail between France and Spain. It was 9:30 at night. We arrived in a Spanish village at 11:30 a. m. the following day—14 hours of the most gruelling physical effort I have ever experienced.

This was one break the original Lincoln boys did get. All of us received from five to nine weeks' training and were never in the lines for more than three weeks at a time, thanks to the fine job the boys did in holding Jarama and saving Madrid while the government organized the army and the whole country for war. The non-intervention committee had not been formed when they left Perpignon, France, by train amid cheers, bands and clenched fists of the Popular Front. But in late springs, the European diplomats were pulling long faces and combing their beards with their fingers over Chamberlain's non-intervention committee—six months after 50,000 Italian and Moorish infantry, supported by German technicians, had tried to take Madrid, and after 60 Americans had gone down on the City of Barcelona, Spanish passenger ship torpedoed by an Italian submarine on the way from Marseilles to Barcelona, in May.

At the height of our climb, the chocolate, sausage, and cigarettes we had brought with us were gone. We were above the timber line, literally crawling on our hands and knees, cursing and panting with the agony of the effort. We had left one man behind in a lonely hermit's shack about 3 o'clock in the morning. He later died in a base hospital at Albacete. His name was Sam Meyer, of Philadelphia.

When we crossed the final peak and began the downgrade, the going was no better. I found that it was just as hard to climb down a mountain as to climb up. The sun came up and dazzled us, but it had no warmth at this height. Clouds were below us, and as I looked around I felt as though we were a bunch of ants crawling tediously in a rusty slag heap. At one point we came upon a deep downslant covered with snow, and we had to sit down and slide for about a quarter of a mile. Eventually we came upon the stone marker with "Francia" on one side and "Espana" on the other. Below us through drifting clouds was Spain—the green, fertile and wooded province of Catlonia. It was a thrill. We wanted to sing, but we found that the only "Spanish" note we could think of was "Valencia," so we sang that. A group of Communists began the "International."

It was certainly very appropriate at the time. I was never so hungry and physically wretched in my life. We heard a rifle shot, and everybody cheered—the first sign of the war. It turned out to be a green-uniformed carbinero, a well-loved unit of the army, this one a youthful and friendly Catalonian peasant doing border patrol. We crowded around and examined his rifle, a stubby, wicked-looking Spanish Mauser, and he obligingly worked the bolt and ejected the five bullets around his feet over and over again.

SPANISH HILLBILLIES.

The first center of civilization we came to was a little mountain village called Casas Siete—Seven Houses. I think there were actually about 20 altogether. It was a pitiful, dirty, bad-smelling place, and the narrow streets were oozing with mud from a rain the night before. The townspeople, the children and the dogs stared at us like startled wild things. They had no more contact with their own country than some of our Kentucky mountaineers do with America.

History was passing through their village and they eyed it from behind doorways. The place was incredibly primitive, even in Spain.

We ate our first meal in Spain here: soup, Spanish rice, and a hard-boiled egg halved in a plate of tomato sauce, with bread and wine. It did not look as though we were going to starve in Spain. The wine was strong and took the edge off our fatigue so we were able to walk a few more miles to a road where military trucks took us to Figueras, a clean, modern-looking town of 13,000.

We stayed in a 600-year-old fort here, a large feudal palace with streets, barracks, and parade grounds. Other Americans had arrived before us and we spent the three days there exchanging stories, sleeping, and doing our first military work—guarding a fleet of American trucks on the parade grounds, loaded with English motorcycles.

We heard all sorts of strange stories and what had happened to Internationals crossing the Pyrenees to aid Spain. One group was said to have got lost and wandered for 78 hours without food. Another was said to have run into a group of Fascists who had sneaked up into the mountains and waited with a machine gun at a point where the path ran along a ledge a mile sheer up above a mountain stream. Three out of a group of 80 were supposed to have survived.

POTLUCK VARIES.

Battalions of cariboneros kept moving in and out of the fort for the whole three days we were there. They were a friendly, well-uniformed bunch who stood around smoking and chatting and leaning on their rifles, quite willing to talk to any of us who knew any Spanish. We learned that they had advanced so far in one attack that their officers had to call them back. We were quite impressed by this. They had seen action at Guadalajara.

The food was very bad at Figueras. One thing we learned about the food situation in Spain we learned there. That was, one ate well according to the supply of food in a particular sector, and also according to the efficiency of the local administration which had control of it. Because of the limited transportation facilities of the government, the food supply could never be uniform.

It took us three days by train from there to the International brigade's base at Albacete, a matter of 600 or 700 miles.

The trains ran with exasperating slowness and stopped at every station. We ate twice in the three days and slept on the floors and up in the baggage racks above the seats. Whenever possible, we bought a bottle of cognac through the window, giving our money to any townsman who happened to be down at the station to see the train in. We were never cheated.

At Albacete we were fed well, given a shower and military clothes. One could not call them uniforms, for no two men were dressed exactly alike. We wore several types of military tunics, pants and puttees, all in various shades of brown. Also canteens and bandoliers in which to carry rifle cartridges. Then we lined up on a parade ground and a call was made for cooks, truck drivers, mechanics, first-aid men and other trades necessary for a good war.

TIME MARKS TIME.

The remainder was the infantry and was split up according to nationality and sent to the villages around Albacete for training.

The American training camp was a little town called Tarazona, about 15 miles north of Albacete. We arrived there on July 1, 1937. The George Washington battalion had just moved out two weeks before. The town was beginning to fill up again with recruits, and the third American battalion in training was tentatively called the Patrick Henry. It was later voted by us to call ourselves the Mackenzie-Papineau, in honor of the Canadians with us.

In a week the government was to start its first major offensive at Brunete, in an attempt to free Madrid of artillery fire. The Lincoln and the Washington battalions were ready. The Mackenzie-Papineau might be needed. We trained frenziedly.

But Brunete came and went. In August the Mackenzie-Papineau was cut down a little when the Abraham Lincoln brigade called for about 100 replacements. Then the brigade put a crack in Franco's long-dormant Aragon front by taking the towns of Quinto and Belchite and threatening the city of Saragossa in late August and early September. Still the Mackenzie-Papineau trained on. We began to be known as the West Point of Spain. The government was becoming strong when it could allow us so much time to learn the arts of war.

Then in September, when summer was about officially over, the order came. Feeling ran high and every man was as sensitive as a race horse. We were going to the front at last.

More later.

Murder of Bank Teller

A Baffling N. Y. Mystery

By PETER LEVINS.

At 1:15 a. m., September 21, 1937, James Heavy, an employe of the Brooklyn Edison Company, discovered the body of a man lying in the gutter on South Portland avenue, a quiet, tree-lined residential street in downtown Brooklyn. Presently an ambulance arrived from the Cumberland hospital.

To the ambulance doctor it appeared as though the man had dropped dead, probably of heart disease. Traces of blood on the face and underneath the head had apparently resulted from the sudden fall. The man's clothes were not disarranged, and he still carried a newspaper under one arm. Death had undoubtedly struck him completely unaware.

The body was removed to the Kings county morgue, where papers on his person led to the dead man's identification as George O. Frank, 47, first teller of the Stock Clearing Corporation, 6 Broad street, in the Wall Street district of Manhattan.

The police broke the news to Frank's invalid mother, Mrs. Emma Frank, with whom he had been living on E. Thirty-fourth street, Flatbush, since his divorce several years before. She in turn wired his fiancee, Miss Grace Donehue, 35-year-old concert harpist, at Lowell, Mass. Miss Donehue left at once for New York.

Later that day Dr. Manuel E. Marten, assistant medical examiner, performed an autopsy—and found a .32 caliber bullet imbedded in the back of Fran's head.

DIDN'T SEEM SUCH A MYSTERY AT FIRST.

Thus broke one of the most mystifying crimes in New York's history. The police at first didn't consider it much of a mystery, for they soon pounced upon a suspect whom they involved in a deeply incriminating pattern of circumstances. But today, just 12 months later, the Murder of the Bank Teller remains a complete riddle. It reminds one of those fiction pieces in which the reader is supplied with all the details and is then invited to construct a solution.

The police ruled out robbery as the motive right at the start, for the teller had $41 on his person, as well as a gold watch. If anything had been removed after he fell, then this had been accomplished without disarranging his clothes. The obvious conclusion, of course, was that Frank had been killed by someone he knew, someone with a reason for desiring his death.

One person with a grudge against Frank quickly appeared in the drama—a pale-faced, red-headed, 37-year-old stenographer whom the slain man had jilted. She was Miss Gertrude O'Keefe, veteran employe of the Bankers Trust Company, who lived in a furnished room at 47 South Portland avenue, only a stone's throw from where the body was found!

George Frank had known Miss O'Keefe for years, the police learned. Their romance had gotten under way while the bank teller was still married, and Miss O'Keefe had supplied the money to finance Mrs. Frank's Reno divorce. Frank had broken with Miss O'Keefe in the summer of 1936 and since then had been making repeated efforts to recover a quantity of love letters he had written during their years of friendship.

He had threatened her on a number of recent occasions, the police learned, and she had unsuccessfully tried to get a gun permit.

Here, certainly, seemed a most promising lead.

Detectives hastened to South Portland avenue, where they found the suspect in bed. When they told her that Frank had been murdered she replied that she did not believe it. They told her she was under arrest.

Then, while officers started to search the tiny hall bedroom, she asked to be permitted to go to the bathroom and comb her hair. They insisted that she leave the door open as they did not wish to lose their suspect via a suicide leap from the window.

Miss O'Keefe went into the bathroom, and when she reappeared they found, hidden in her hair, an aspirin tin containing a list of articles in a safety deposit box.

Then one of the detectives found a .32-caliber revolver in a box at the bottom of the clothes closet.

However, if they expected her to collapse at the discovery of the gun, they were wrong. She merely said, "Oh, that's what you wanted. I thought you wanted letters. Why didn't you say you wanted that? I would have given it to you."

(Later her lawyer was to say that she believed the detectives were thugs hired by Frank to break into her place and get the letters.)

Miss O'Keefe admitted that she had seen her erstwhile sweetheart the night of the 20th, and that she had quarreled with him over her refusal to give up the letters, but steadfastly denied the murder. Indeed—as was brought out later by her attorney—she refused to believe that Frank was dead until the police brought her to the morgue and showed her the body.

What about the revolver, the detectives demanded accusingly. She admitted that she had purchased it recently to protect herself against Frank, but denied that she had ever used it.

Police tests quickly established that the great discovery of the gun was a false alarm. Not only had it not been fired recently, but it could not have fired the bullet found in Frank's skull. The murder bullet showed six groves and six lands, turned right (lands are the surfaces between the grooves), whereas Miss O'Keefe's weapon marked its bullets with five groves and five lands, turned right.

While the prisoner was being questioned as to her movements and possible knowledge of the crime, detectives visited the Irving Trust Company at No. 1 Wall Street, and found in Miss O'Keefe's safety deposit box 178 letters which Frank had written her over a period of seven years. They were extremely affectionate compositions, full of expressions of love and devotion.

Also in the box were typewritten copies of many letters which she had written Frank. She told the police that her practice had been to write the letters long hand, then type a copy for herself.

However, among her letters was one written in long hand after the breakup of the romance. Apparently Frank had sent it back. This letter, dated September 17, 1936, four days before Frank's birthday—he was killed on his 47th birthday—read as follows:

"Dear George: Events of the last few weeks have seemed so unreal! The last real happening that makes sense is that we were together on the Fourth of July and coming home had a tiff because you weren't able to get away with murder. (You know what I mean).

SHE AGREES HE MUST BE INSANE.

"When you laid down a hypothetical case before your friends (You'd hardly consult others than friends if you wanted backing up, although your mother as a committee of one would have been the proper one to seek as she is aware of facts which you overlook) I know whose side you presented—naturally, the man's!

"Such minor matters as the fact that you first asked me to marry you seven years ago, that I stuck despite a pretty black outlook and that our spats were principally caused by reasons similar to that of July 4 (I could go on indefinitely) were never mentioned, I am certain.

"You did not need advisers when you proposed or when you kept asking me to wait and telling me you could not live without me, or when after your long-put-off divorce you announced our impending marriage.

"Altogether baffled, it was not until you asked me the other day, on the phone if I believed you insane that the thought occurred to me. Frankly, I do, for having stooped to the level of a 'Brain Trust,' comparatively inexperienced, I have always made my decisions alone. Too, whenever I spoke of you, it was in glowing terms.

"Recalling your extreme reluctance to meeting me and having in mind that our recent conversations have been just so many opportunities for you to insult me, it seems best to forget about Saturday.

"In contrast to you, I prefer to remember the pleasant part of the past—happier Saturday afternoons, etc.—and for that reason I couldn't meet you in a mood such as yours has been of late. But it is not too great a favor to ask you to write me frankly whether we are still engaged. A fiancee does like to be kept posted.

"Are we engaged any more, or have you (with expert aid) decided that our engagement is off?

"I shall abide by your decision. Whatever it may be, it does not prevent me from wishing you a very happy birthday. Sincerely, G.

"P. S.—I will be at the old address long enough to get your reply."

The suspect's story, which the authorities could not crack during many hours of questioning, was as follows:

Between 6 and 7 o'clock, on the night of Monday, the 20th, she was standing on Fulton street, Brooklyn, near Joe's Restaurant, when George Frank appeared. As she did not wish to talk to him, she walked along toward Borough Hall and went into a Childs Restaurant. Frank followed her, and sat down at the same table.

She ordered her meal, he ordered his. No word was spoken between them. When they had finished he paid the checks. She left; he followed. She walked on to Fulton street and DeKalb avenue, where she entered a movie theater. She saw "Confession," starring Kay Francis, the story of a harassed woman who murders her seducer when she sees him wooing her daughter.

"I walked by him. I went along Fulton street to South Elliott place, near Brooklyn Tech High school. There he cornered me. He demanded that I return him his love letters. There were words between us. Then he made as if to punch me. I told him I'd call a policeman, and that seemed to calm him down."

Frank left her, and she continued her walk alone. Between 11:30 and 11:45 p. m., she entered the Nevins Street station of the I. R. T. subway and took a train to Times Square. She walked around Times Square and up and down Forty-second street, watching the Legionnaires — they were convening in New York at the time—then struck over to Fifth Avenue and walked there for a while. Then she went to the Grand Central Terminal.

"I was going to take a train out of town," she said, "but then I changed my mind and went home."

She reached South Portland avenue, she said, between 1:30 and 2 a. m., and went to bed. She saw nobody in the street. (Apparently she arrived home before the police reached the scene. They were rather late getting there, it developed.)

Miss O'Keefe denied that she had ever attempted any form of extortion in connection with the letters. "I never asked him for money in my life," she said. She wanted to keep the letters, she insisted, because they were all she had left of her romance.

Incidentally, she revealed that she had consulted a woman lawyer in 1934 about suing Frank for breach of promise. The lawyer, she said, told her that the absence of intimacy in the romance made any such action impractical. (Miss O'Keefe told the police that, during seven years of ardent wooing, Frank had but a single—and unsuccessful — "impetuous moment.")

Wall Street confidantes of the suspect declared that she had been living in fear of Frank in recent months. Sometimes she was afraid to go home alone, they said. They recalled how heartbroken she had been in July, 1936, after Frank jilted her. For a time, they said, she wasn't able to do any work.

Miss O'Keefe had gone to the Bergen street police station in Brooklyn on New Year's Day, 1937, to apply for a permit to carry a gun. She said a man was threatening to have her killed and she wanted to protect herself. The police had not considered it wise to grant her request. (This happened, she said, after Frank beat her because of her refusal to return the letters.)

The prisoner's brother, Arthur O'Keefe, meanwhile had been in town for the Legion convention. He was in the Grand Central Terminal, waiting for a train to take him back to his home in Albany, when he read the news that Gertrude was being questioned in the murder of her former fiance.

HER BROTHER SUBMITS TO POLICE QUESTIONING

O'Keefe, 43-year-old clerk in the purchasing department of the Delaware & Hudson railroad, hastened to a lawyer, Harry S. Austin, who telephoned the authorities. The brother then submitted voluntarily to questioning, and was cleared of any connection with the crime.

After a day of grilling, Miss O'Keefe was booked on a homicide charge, as well as a charge of illegal possession of a gun. She retained Samuel Leibowitz, celebrated criminal lawyer.

The suspect was taken to court for a hearing September 25 before Magistrate Matthew J. Troy. District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan asked for an adjournment on the grounds that the authorities were "looking for an important witness."

"Your Honor," interrupted Liebowitz, "this is a phantom witness. My

Marred by Profanity.

WHAT'S A HEAVEN FOR? By Percy Marks. Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York. 356 pp. $2.50.

College days in the life of Nat Wayne is the opening for "What's a Heaven For?" the new book by Percy Marks. Nat Wayne, a poor boy from the farm, finds himself surrounded by the glamour of college life. Many of the things done by boys and girls are very new and startling to Nat, and Percy Marks is able to give his readers both sides of college life—that of Nat and those who are better versed in life.

Love plays only a small part in the theme until the latter pages are reached, for this is really a story of the struggles of a poor and upright farm boy against the problems of life. Nat is followed through his college years and on into business.

Personally, this reader did not like the use of profanity and the many references to sexual subjects. The story is good and the loose manner in which profanity was used and sexual matters discussed caused this book to lose much that would otherwise have made for enjoyable reading.

Dutch Life.

OLD HAVEN. By David Cornel DeJong. Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston. 559 pp. $2.50.

David Cornel DeJong has gone home—back to the scenes of his childhood—to bring to American readers one of the most powerful and intensely interesting novels in many years. And with the aid of one of the two annual $1,000 Houghton Mifflin fellowships, he has been enabled to bring to completion what is destined to be termed one of the most masterly written books in a decade.

If the thoughts and the ideals and the ambitions the writer puts into Tjerk's mind at the ages of 10 and 11 seem too mature for the lad's tender years, the fruit may be overlooked and forgotten, for the reader is certain to be held spellbound by the constantly moving scene that is old Holland.

"Old Haven" is a stirring tale of Tjerk's struggle against old ties, of his growth and his conquest over ancient social barriers. It is a story filled with brilliantly painted word pictures of Holland, both old and new—as real as today. It is authentic, a document of Dutch life.

Lurid Narrative.

THE DEVIL THUMBS A RIDE. By Robert Du Soe. Robert M. McBride & Co., New York. 247 pp. $2.

The seemingly inconsequential decisions of a landlady, a policeman, and the buyer for the hosiery department of a large store start a series of events which increase in momentum with each turn of the page in this lurid narrative of life—and death—along the American highway.

A traveling salesman, filled to the gills with liquor, finds himself hopelessly entangled in a horrible situation when he stops for a hitch hiker, and "The Devil Thumbs a Ride."

The day is saved—as usual—by a woman, when cool-headed "Marge," the salesman's wife, steps in and clarifies the situation by the timely use of a little "horse sense." Fast-moving, intense, Du Soe's novel will hold the reader's interest to the end.

The "Isms" of Today.

DOROTHY THOMPSON'S POLITICAL GUIDE. By Dorothy Thompson. Stackpole Sons, New York. 120 pp. $1.25.

In a spirited foreword Miss Thompson labels this compact little volume "The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Isms." As a member of the male sex thus slyly complimented on its political acumen the present reader wishes to inform Miss Thompson that she has woefully underestimated her audience.

Using as few words as possible, and those few well-chosen for their simplicity, the author strips off the thin veneer of bombast and self-interest that hides the true nature of "isms." anywhere. This land of the free and home of the brave possesses a plentiful supply of material for discussion—the most significant difference between us and the old world being that the native taste for regimented regalia appears to lean towards sheets instead of shirts. At first glance the pithy words used to sum up the hallowed movements of our time seem over-simplified and too inclusive; it is, says the reader, impossible that such fine words could hide so much arrant nonsense.

Did someone mention "Liberalism?" Says Miss Thompson: "All the political tendencies momentarily raging in our times are anti-liberal." A sweeping statement indeed, but after a severe mental struggle this reader is forced to agree that it is true. It is only true if "liberalism" is in turn defined, but the author does that to perfection. One by one the bombastic catchwords of dictators and office-seekers are held up to scrutiny; one by one they fall with a dull thud from their pedestals. Leaving nothing? No, not quite. "Democracy, for the most of us, is not an 'ism.' It is a way of life." In the midst of so much humbug that much-abused term maintains its reality. We do not need a definition of it; we know what it means. And having found it in such trashy company we cherish it the more.

Game Made Simple.

CONTRACT BRIDGE FOR BEGINNERS. By Josephine Culbertson. John C. Winston Co., Philadelphia. 221 pp. $1.50.

For years, non-players of bridge, and countless mediocre players, have permitted themselves the doubtful luxury of an unbending inferiority complex when the name Culbertson is mentioned. Many have smiled sweetly through discussions of the merits of the Culbertson system versus the Whoozis system, or the relative merits of either, silently contemptuous and skeptical of its value, or overly eager to embrace the idea that: "My mind just isn't built to absorb an involved system."

Josephine Culbertson hasn't played bridge merely for marbles. It is her life and her living. Aside from an intense enjoyment of the game and its intricacies, she has made it a business—and has won without mistaking the coveted title of "World's Best Bridge Teacher." The thousands and thousands who have followed her daily newspaper articles acknowledge it. Countless others, in the non-playing and mediocre classes, have skipped those columns, unwilling to learn.

And now comes a different form of help—an unmistakable evidence of Josephine Culbertson's bridge teaching ability. To use her own words: "It (Contract Bridge for Beginners) is intended for average players, all of whom will profit from a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals; and also for those who have never played any card games before and are thoroughly unfamiliar with the use of a standard deck of playing cards. Such players can start at the beginning and learn how to bid their hands, how to play their cards, how to keep score and in general how to sit down at a table and play bridge without disgracing themselves by their lack of knowledge, or ruining the game for those who are more experienced."

It is just as simple as that. It makes no attempt to appeal to the so-called expert player. It comes right down to the level of the beginner and keeps pace with his or her own ability to learn. Intricate, mysterious and technical phraseology is omitted until the reader knows its meaning instinctively. It is written simply and without the technical flourishes one might expect from the hand of an expert of Josephine Culbertson's rank. It employs the words of the man in the street—in this case the beginner in this great game.

Detail by detail, in their natural and logical sequence, Mrs. Culbertson takes up the game from its start and explains its varied ramifications. First the principle of card rank; then how to bid and play, how to score, the relative honor trick values, the opening of bidding and and when to keep it open. On she proceeds with chapters on bidding for game, choice of bids, rebids, and then, when her reader is ready, the forcing two-bid, the meaning of shut-out bids, no-trump bidding, defensive bidding, the meaning of a double, slam bidding, and finally, how to lead and how to play a hand.

Here is a book for which the bridge-playing world has long waited—a volume of which Ely Culbertson himself has said: "This remarkable new book—the only book of its kind ever published on contract bridge—makes fundamentals so clear you can never forget them," and, of its writer: "No one else could have written this book."

Nazi Doctrine Guide.

THE WAR AGAINST THE WEST. By Aurel Kolnai. The Viking Press, New York. 711 pp. $4.

The author is an Austrian who was prominently identified with the Social Democratic party of that country until its dissolution. He is anything but a Nazi sympathizer, but is guided by a desire to understand and to explain the real meaning of Naziism to an audience that has long since lost all power to understand the Nazi doctrines as interpreted by themselves.

They are not, says M. Kolnai, to be dismissed with contempt. That seems plausible. A great nation does not go mad overnight. But the fundamental tenets now utilized by the Nazi party have no particular connection with that or any other party, and they did not spring up overnight. Some of them, and perhpas the most far-reaching of them, were formulated before the war. The roots of these ideas go back to such great, if slightly mad, thinkers as Nietzsche and Stefan George.

In a lengthy preface to this volume, Wickham Steed, the great English journalist and author, congratulates the publishers because they have failed to "iron out all the wrinkles in his (the author's) English style or to sandpaper its little knots and knobs until the surface should seem uniformly smooth." The point is well taken, though it is scarcely just to the author to express it in that way. His English style approaches perfection, and is admirably suited to the subject. This is heavy going indeed, and it needs the "knots and knobs" to make the subject sufficiently lively to hold the reader's interest.

To reach any understanding at all of this subject one must follow the metaphysical train of thought so easily followed by German scientists (and by no one else); one must acquire appreciation for values which the Anglo-Saxon mind scarcely ever thinks about. Thus suitably it is but a step from Nietzsche's "Superman" to the Hitler Aryan race concept, and while one can scarcely fail to agree with the author that both of these are "tinged with lunacy," it does not by any means follow that they are to be laughed at or shrugged away. They are much too dangerous for that.

Class Propaganda.

THE LIBERALS. By John Hyde Preston. The John Day Company, New York. 386 pp. $2.50.

Novels of the proletariat have appeared with increasing frequency of late, though scarcely with the forthright thesis embodied in this one. It appears to be the gist and burthen of the author's ideas that the events described in his previous work, "Revolution—1776," ought to be repeated forthwith and in a more thoroughgoing fashion. To this end the capitalistic system is made to totter toward the abyss in the hapless way said to characterize lambs going to slaughter. Now there is no doubt that economic problems merit discussion. There is some doubt as to whether the novel is a proper vehicle for carrying on such discussion, but in the case of some writers (notably Albert Halper, for instance) the divided aims of such works have been resolved admirably.

It ought to be asked, however, that if the novel is to carry the added burden of economic propaganda this propaganda should be set forth intelligently. Here it seems to me that the author has failed lamentably. He is a capable literary craftsman, but his talents have gone to waste. His ignorance of economics is amazing; his knowledge of factory porcesses is of the very sketchiest. His laborers are angels of most sedate behavior; his capitalists, on the other hand, possessed of an intense vulgarity that not even the cohorts of Moscow would claim as a necessary accompaniment to bourgeois domination, and his one "liberal" factory owner is cast in such an effete and helpless mold that it is quite impossible he should ever have gained the position he holds.

The labor movement has apparently no end in view save the destruction of its means of livelihood, and one is tempted to ask what in the world these men can want, in the remote contingency that they are allowed to have their way. Apart from these mechanical difficulties the story is well-handled, and it possesses a sufficient interest to stand on its own feet. Which, alas, makes its fanciful embroidery of class propaganda all the more objectionable.

French Province Novel.

THE SURVIVORS. By Rene Behaine. With a foreword by Ford Madox Ford. Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston. 378 pp. $2.50.

Fifty million Frenchmen, says the legend, can't be wrong. But the provincial French are neither so numerous as all that, nor do they maintain this stupendous batting average of the intellect. Indeed, in this book they are mostly wrong. Their politics are wrong; their agricultural methods are worse yet; their system of land tenure slated for the bow-wows. Their religion descends into a mere mumbling of Pater Nosters, with no real feeling behind it. In particular, and in a quite horrible way, are they wrong about their manner of bringing up their young.

"The Survivors" is the first in a chain of novels, some of which have already been published in France. Its author, as critical of the French social system as only a Frenchmen could afford to be, is hailed by Ford Madox Ford as "the most remarkable living writer." That is covering a great deal of territory, even for Mr. Ford. But there is no gainsaying the fact that M. Behaine is a great writer. He has something of the full sweep of Flaubert; the same facility for making commonplace people and incidents yield great drama. His style is of a remarkable purity that has been well-preserved in translation, and he possesses in abundance that fine irony that is the inimitable gift of French letters.

Unusual Situations.

FOREVER YOURS. By Harriett Thurman. MacRae-Smith Company, Philadelphia. 288 pp. $2.

When a triangle becomes a quadrangle, complications are apt to ensue. Harriett Thurman has created one, and written a first novel filled with unusual situations.

"Forever Yours" is a story of the beautiful widowed Fleury Altemus, her younger sister, Dee—and of handsome Peter and worldly Hunter Hale. Two young women and two men—each played against the others in a gamble for happiness.

Here is one of those stories you will not put down until you have finished.

"Witch Town" History.

PURITAN CITY. By Frances Winwar. Robert M. McBride and Company, New York. 307 pp. Illust. $3.

With all the excitement of a novel this book depicts the life history of Salem, Mass., "Witch Town" of the 17th century, from the time of the landing of its first settlers, through the War of Independence up to the present time. An interesting study of one of the oldest and most famous of America's colonial towns.

A Study of Paine.

THOMAS PAINE—AMERICA'S FIRST LIBERAL. By S. M. Berthold. Meador Publishing Company, Boston, Mass. 264 pp. $2.

The manner in which the word "liberal" is being bandied about today makes this study of the father of revolution doubly interesting. Paine was a unique character, yet his works guided in no little measure the social philosophy that the United States has developed through its years as a colony of Great Britain and as a nation.

Berthold's study of the author of the "Rights of Man" and the "Age of Reason" does not place Paine upon a pedestal, but pictures him in his human role as a molder of the destiny of the lives of many dedicated to freedom. Not only in the United States but in England, his birthplace, and in France, where he aided the revolutionists until the reign of terror was launched to tear down the ideal for which he worked. Paine is probably one of the least known of the early leaders of the republic. A distinct need for a greater understanding of his work is filled by this volume.

'Round the Clock With the Rushees

By YOLANDE GWIN.

My name is Jane Doe.

I'm a freshman sorority rushee and this morning by 10 o'clock I must pledge to one of the four big sororities here—the O. B. X., the Phi Pi, the Pi Pi and the Sigma Delta. I always remember them in that order because I learned my A B C's backward and forward, so it's much easier to list them alphabetically.

Since rush week began last Wednesday afternoon and ended last night, there have been seven teas, five dances, two steak frys, one picnic, one breakfast, one carnival, a sport party and a motor trip. Today, there will be a lot more.

Oh, yes, I had a bid—more than one to be exact, and was I thrilled! They came in the form of an invitation last Wednesday morning—I could hardly wait until I got home from school to open them. I wanted to stay home from school that day so that I could meet the postman at the door and receive the bids myself, but mother made me go.

Well, when I got home there were the bids—all looking very formal, and in the form of invitations with the coat of arms of each placed on the top and in colors. The bids were something like this—"The —— sorority extends to you a cordial invitation to become one of its members."

I don't get home until nearly 3 o'clock and it was exactly at 3 that the real rushing "week" began. Some of the sorority girls came by home to begin rushing me, and they brought me a date-book. Then the fun began. From 3 o'clock Wednesday until 11 o'clock last night I had a date every hour—except school time—and all the dates were with girls, but it was fun!

The date-books have been fine. I never would have known where I was supposed to be or who was coming by for me or where I was going, unless I had had one. I'm keeping mine for my memory book. They are very small and have blue covers. Inside there are the dates and rules approved by the Pan-Hellenic Council. Then there are the pages for the dates. And in the back of the book, are a few pages for notes. I scribbled all over mine and now I can't read what I have written.

The first day's dates began at 3 and lasted until 10 that night, with one hour alloted to each sorority. For instance, I could be with a girl or a group of girls from one sorority from 3 to 4 o'clock, another group from 4 to 5 and another from 5 to 6, and son on. I could never be with one group longer than an hour, no matter how much fun we were having.

It was the same way Thursday and Friday, but on Saturday the hours were from 8 in the morning until 11 that night, and we could have dates for two hours. After this morning at 10 o'clock when the rushees pledge, each one of us will go to the various parties planned for today by our sorority.

During all those parties I had to follow the rules in my date book just the same as I will have to do next year when I'm an "old girl." The Pan-Hellenic Council makes the rules and they are as follows:

No. 1. No rushee may pledge or promise to pledge before Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, at which time only one representative from each sorority will go to the rushee's house.

No. 2. Rush week shall begin at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and shall end at 11 o'clock Saturday night.

No. 3. Meeting places will be as follows: Pi Pi at Peacock Alley; Sigma Delta at the Colonnade; Phi Pi at the Pig 'n' Whistle on Peachtree, and the OBX at Piper's on West Peachtree.

No. 4. Fill dates as previously arranged unless a change is absolutely necessary. If so, consult one of the Pan-Hellenic officers.

No. 5. No rushee is allowed to be with a sorority girl either before or after the scheduled rushing hours. There is to be absolutely no outside communication after the scheduled meeting hours.

No. 6. If rushees spend the night together on Saturday before pledge Sunday, their bids will be revoked by the Pan-Hellenic Council.

No. 7. Any girl making a rushee more than 15 minutes late will be personally fined 50 cents for the first 15 minutes, and 50 cents for every additional 10 minutes after that. The money will be paid to the sorority which is kept waiting. These fines can be collected only if the rushee confirms and signs a written statement.

No. 8. No rushee and sorority girl may spend the night together during rush week.

No. 9. If a sorority member is seen double-dating with a rushee any time during rush week, there will be a personal fine of $5.

No. 10. There is to be no sending of letters, telegrams, candy, flowers, etc., at any time during rush week.

No. 11. Alumnae must abide by rushing rules.

No. 12. Violation of any Pan-Hellenic rule during rush week shall be punishable by a personal fine of $5.

No. 13. If a rushee does not accept her bid or bids she is not eligible to become a member of another sorority until the following year.

No. 14. If a rushee breaks her pledge, she is not permitted to pledge to another sorority for a period of three months.

No. 15. Any complaint pertaining to rushing or rush week must be written in the form of a statement and turned over to the vice president of the plaintiff sorority.

No. 16. All fines must first go through the Pan-Hellenic Council before they are paid.

No. 17. Any sorority member not paying her fines within a week of notifying is suspended indefinitely from her own sorority if tried by the Pan-Hellenic Council and found guilty.

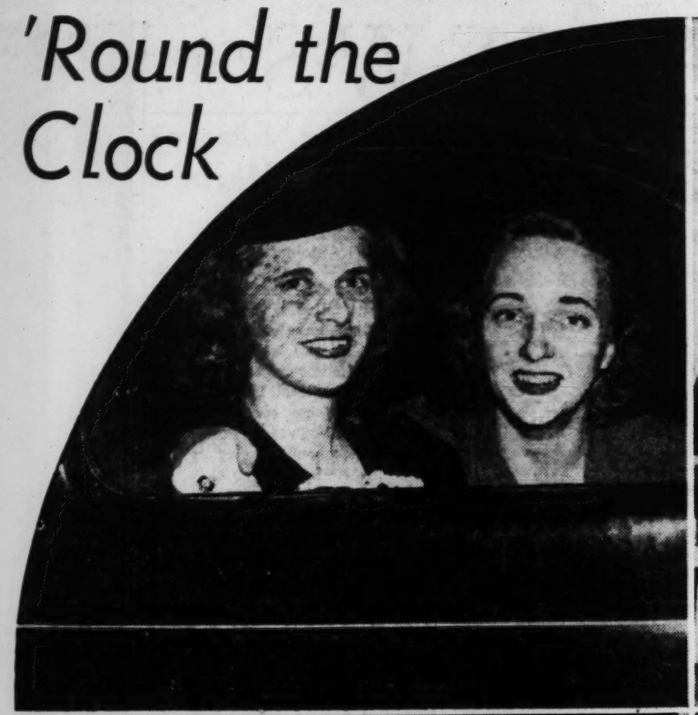

After I read all those rules that pertained to the rushees I said to myself, "Jane Doe you MUST follow those rules."

The officers and members of the Pan-Hellenic Council are a swell bunch of girls. They are Mary Frances Broach, a Pi Pi, who is president; Georgia Rauschenburg, a Sigma Delta, vice president; Caroline Yundt, a Phi Pi, secretary, and Elise Dunnick, an OBX, treasurer. The members are Mary Clapp, Sue Pierson and Jane Jarvis, of the Pi Pi's; Eleanor Clay, Catherine Tift and Ione Mercer, Phi Pi's; Emmy Martin, Zaida Clay and Lillian Winship, Sigma Delta's, and Eleanor Stafford, Betty McDonough and Betty Jane Watson, of the OBX.

I've been wined and dined since Wednesday. I've had a grand time, I've been given corsages at the parties by the individual sororities, and beautiful favors. While I was being rushed I could suggest anything—such as riding, golf, tennis, bowling or eating. Most all of us like to eat and we've had more ice cream sodas than the law allows!

It's all over now, and this morning by 10 o'clock I'll pledge to one of the four.

It's up to me to decide. Which one of the four shall it be?

Being taken for a ride is not so bad when you are a rushee to one of the big four sororities here in Atlanta. In the mid-morning hours on the dial we see Marjorie Eichenlaub, a Pi Pi rushee, being "dated" by Sue Pierson, secretary of the Pi Pi sorority.

Miss Carol Ingram, shown during her early afternoon activity, is a Sigma Delta rushee. On one of her rush-week dates, she chose a game of practice golf. She is pictured here with Miss Georgia Rauschenberg, left, president of Sigma Delta, and Miss Mary Carter, right, a member of the sorority. They are waiting their "turn" for a drive down the fairway.

A GEORGIA FARMER LOOKS AT EROSION

By L. P. JACKSON.

A Georgia farmer stood on a bridge watching a swollen stream that was red with the clay of Georgia hills and heavy with the soil of its fields. A passing neighbor stopped to inquire what he saw in the muddy waters.

"I am watching the farms go by," came his answer.

The age-old question of erosion looms today as the number one problem of the south—a section largely dependent upon its agriculture. So many farms have "gone by" on the rushing waters of its streams that official Washington has been aroused to action.

During his administration, President Roosevelt has established soil conservation stations, with attention concentrated upon the rapid depletion of American soil.

Expert agronimists have been put to work to map a program whereby the fertility of the soil may be preserved.

Trained agriculturists have sought to devise a terrace that would prevent the land from washing.

Experiment stations and agricultural schools have experimented with every phase of crop rotation in an effort to build up the land.

Now comes a solution to the problem from a Georgia farmer. A solution that is amazing in its simplicity. A solution that bids fair to revolutionize the time-honored method of farming as practiced in the south.

On his 700-acre farm, Bellevue, at Senoia, R. L. Hardy has devised and practiced for eight years a new method of cultivation that meets every phase of the problem—a method evolved from the practical experience of a thinking man who "had to do something" to save his land.

His plan has attracted the attention of government officials in Washington. It has been studied by agriculturists and agronimists throughout neighboring states. It has been the subject of at least one radio broadcast, and of numerous magazine and newspaper articles.

Agricultural departments at the University of Georgia and at Alabama Polytchnic Institute at Auburn have sent representatives to Bellevue to learn the method and see its results. In fact, hardly a day passes that Mr. Hardy does not show visitors over his fields and explain his plan of cultivation.

But perhaps the most convincing proof of the merit of the plan lies in the outline of its four-fold advantages. While it is simple and easy to follow, it offers (1) complete elimination of erosion; (2) constant improvement of the soil; (3) marked decrease in labor and the cost of production; and (4) the reseeding of the land without the work and expense of replanting cover crops. Which sounds something like a fairy tale until you hear Mr. Hardy's explanation of it.

The keynote of Mr. Hardy's plan is vegetation. Indeed, he claims that the salvation of southern agriculture is vegetation—a direct contradiction to the clean row crop cultivation that southern farmers have practiced for generations. And he ably supports his claim with the argument that nature's plan of conserving and enriching the soil is by the use of vegetation.

"Whenever man abandons land," he says, "nature immediately takes charge by starting some kind of growth, eventually covering it with weeds, trees, and other vegetation that gradually restore its fertility. In fact, wherever man has failed to work hand in hand with nature, the soil has become so impoverished and eroded that it is almost impossible to produce a normal or profitable crop on most of the soil of this section.

"The farmer proceeds with his present system of clean row crop cultivation year after year," continues Mr. Hardy, "and in his eagerness to gather as much as possible from his present crop, he loses sight of the conservation of his soil for future crops. As a consequence, he is almost ready to give up in despair without realizing that he has brought it all on himself by violating the laws of nature."

In the lower picture Mr. Hardy and Mr. Veatch inspect the same clover field after it has been laid off in four-foot rows for cultivation by the balk system, a method devised and used successfully by Mr. Hardy without the work and expense of terraces.

A herd of Jersey cows at Bellevue, grazing on the year-round pasture, the method of preparing which is described in this article.

A lover of the soil and a man of vision, Mr. Hardy has kept space with modern farming methods. He has long been a staunch advocate of the planting of leguminous cover crops to restore nitrogen to the soil—nitrogen being one of the ingredients most often lacking in Georgia soil—and to prevent erosion while the land is idle.

He has entirely discarded the use of terraces on his farm. But there are no washes on his land, and no gullies in his fields. At best, a terrace is only partly effective against heavy winter rains and spring freshets.

The government agricultural agencies have spent thousands of dollars trying to perfect a broad terrace—their best combined effort, perhaps—designed to hold rainwater in check and prevent from washing huge gullies through the land. But this proved expensive to build and maintain.

Here is the plan briefly sketched by Mr. Hardy, step by step. He begins by planting his farm in legumes in the early fall. For this purpose he prefers crimson clover and vetch, for with many years of experience, he finds that these legumes, in addition to enriching the soil, will reseed readily when handled according to his method. Then he proceeds with his cultivation along what he calls "the balk system."

He allows his clover and vetch to grow through the fall and winter to protect his soil from washing, and to store it with nitrogen. In the spring he lays it off in contour rows, making them four feet apart for corn or cotton. This is done by means of a two-horse middle-burster, which leaves a wide, deep furrow. He lists on this furrow with a small scooter, leaving undisturbed the space between the rows, which is called a balk.

Corn or cotton is planted in this list and the crop is cultivated as needed without plowing out the balk until the clover or vetch seed have matured. Then the balk is plowed down and cultivation is continued as desired. The matured seed in this balk will begin to germinate with the first autumn rainfall, and will be sufficient to cover the land for another season, without the expense of buying and planting new seed.

When the contour furrows overflow with rainwater, the water has to sift through the vegetation in the balk, which slows down its speed, and it will finally soak into the ground. As a result there will be no washing of the land, and the rainwater will be stored in the soil for future use.

Mr. Hardy has adopted the four-foot row as being practical in the balk system for either corn or cotton, as this allows sufficient room for the growing vegetation in the middle, or balk.

A mixture of crimson clover and Italian rye grass seed, planted in the early fall, has been used for a number of years on the Hardy farm to advantage, as it makes a fine quality of hay and affords splendid grazing for livestock in the winter and early spring, when summer pastures are dormant. In the balk system, this mixture will mature seed after the livestock has been removed at the beginning of the summer. The seed will be plowed under with the vegetation in the balk, and with the germination in September and October, the cycle begins all over again.

Believing that livestock is an important adjunct to a well-rounded farm program, Mr. Hardy always maintains a herd of Jerseys at Bellevue. To furnish a grazing pasture for his cattle during the winter, crimson clover and rye grass seed are sewn on the Bermuda grass sod on which they graze during the summer, thereby producing year-round pasturage.

In order to save his seed for planting additional fields and pastures, he felt the need of a clover seed harvester. But there was no practical machine for the purpose on the market. So, with necessity mothering the invention, he devised and constructed a rotary seed harvester from an old grain binder. This improvised machine has been used on his farm for 15 years, and copies of the idea are now in use throughout the state.

C. L. Veatch, project manager of the Soil Conservation Service, United States Department of Agriculture, located at LaGrange, declares Mr. Hardy's balk system to be the best and most practical method of its kind ever to come to his attention. He recently used it as the subject of a radio broadcast in an interview wiht J. B. Fordham, project agronimist, on his farm features program which he presents weekly.

B. H. Hendrickson, superintendent of the Southern Piedment Experiment Station at Athens, and his associates were so impressed with the plan that it is being given a trial at the Piedmont station this year.

It is the concensus of those who understand the workings of the plan and have been its results year after year at Bellevue, that it means the dawn of a new era in southern agriculture.

THEATER NEWS

Ginger Rogers, Astaire Star at Fox; 'Mother Carey' Is at the Paramount

'King of Alcatraz' Is Capitol Feature; 'Too Hot To Handle' Stays at Loew's; Rialto Plays 'Merrily We Live.'

By LEE ROGERS,
Motion Picture Editor.

Maybe the title is a little misleading—the principal characters are anything but "Carefree" when in their right minds—but the Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire dance-comedy at the Fox is one of the most spontaneous laugh numbers seen on an Atlanta screen in a long time.

It brightens a motion picture week in which the very worthwhile "Mother Carey's Chickens" at the Paramount, "King of Alcatraz" at the Capitol, a holdover and two bring backs are the attractions.

Ginger Rogers definitely establishes herself as the No. 1 screen comedienne on this man's list and she dances divinely, to use the favorite word of the feminine audience. She and Astaire are as close to perfection as a movie team can get. If you remember the Ginger of "Vivacious Lady," you have an introduction to the feminine star of "Carefree."

Fay Bainter in "Mother Carey's Chickens," has another of the roles which she so ably portrayed in "White Banners." The Paramount feature is one with good clean comedy, a down to earth picture of American family life. Ruby Keeler and Ann Shirley are in the cast.

Constance Bennett and Brian Aherne are co-starred in the comedy, "Merrily We Live," which has been brought back by the Rialto. The screen's queen, Norma Shearer, is playing "Marie Antoinette" at the Rhodes and "Too Hot to Handle," is the holdover featuring Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in a story of the life of newsreel cameramen at the Grand.

"King of Alcatraz," at the Capitol, is a story of a bad man who escapes the island prison, commandeers a boat and seeks to escape. Gail Patrick is the featured star.

Ginger Rogers Again Proves She's Tops as Comedienne.

For ultra-modern sophisticated comedy, "Carefree," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers together again, is near the top. It plays at the Fox.

"Carefree" is Astaire and Rogers' first picture as a team in two years and it compares favorably with their past triumphs, the comedy making up for other deficiencies.

The direction is excellent, as are the lines. The plot is new—a very unusual characteristic for a movie. Ralph Bellamy has another of the roles similar to those in "The Awful Truth," and "Joy of Living."

The songs are by Irving Berlin and the dance numbers are interwoven into the picture with finesse. Astaire does a novel solo number and they team to do "The Yam" and "Dream Dance."

Bellamy has girl-trouble. Ginger will not give her consent to marriage and Bellamy sends her to his friend Astaire, a psychiatrist. She immediately falls in love with her doctor. Astaire naturally has to be near his patient so he can "understand" her. It looks for a while as though the treatment will be successful and Bellamy will win the fair Ginger but at the wedding she, with a black and swollen eye, is on the arm of Astaire.

One of the best scenes is when Ginger, under the effects of anesthesia, is carried from Astaire's office by Bellamy to the broadcasting station where it is time for her to go on. En route she flees from Bellamy. Her solo flight takes its place as one of the funniest incidents ever screened.

Throughout the picture the pace is rapid. It is a clever and amusing show and may be a bit of a take-off on modern methods and cures of mental ills.

'Mother Carey's Chickens' Stars Fay Bainter at Paramount.

Good clean entertainment of the variety which makes the better films committees sit up and praise the motion picture industry is provided in the Paramount attraction, "Mother Carey's Chickens." The story is of the same moral significance as was "White Banners," a picture which also featured Fay Bainter in a leading role.

There is nothing flashy about "Mother Carey's Chickens," but the solid moviegoer will find in it entertainment that will make him forget the lack of artificial glamour.

The story concerns an American family during the last of the 19th century and the first of the 20th. The father is killed in action during the Spanish-American war and the picture is devoted to chronicling the means employed by the children to make their mother happy. It also tells the love life of the girls.

In the romantic roles are Ann Shirley, Ruby Keeler and James Ellison.

As an added attraction there is a new "March of Time" in which the war crisis in Britain and the European continent is treated.

Alcatraz and Pacific Ocean Form Background for Capitol Thriller

Sea piracy in modern technique is found in "King of Alcatraz," the action-filled film opening today at the Capitol and which tells the story of "the toughest-man-in-the-world's escape from the United States allegedly escape-proof island prison.

In the cast are J. Carrol Naish, top-notch screen villain; Gail Patrick, Lloyd Nolan, Harry Carey and Porter Hall. On the stage is "Jitterbugs' Jamboree," featuring eight acts of vaudeville.

In the "King of Alcatraz," Naish escapes and with his gang seizes control of a coastal steamer, but the loyal crew, led by Radio Operators Nolan and Preston and Ship's Nurse Gail Patrick, regain control. Naish is killed and Nolan seriously wounded. His condition so dangerous, Miss Patrick is forced to operate, performing the surgery under the direction of a doctor aboard another ship who is giving instructions via a two-way radio set.

Featured in the stage show are Loretta Grey, the personality girl; Mayo and Carr, musical comedy team; A. Ruskin and Ruth Norman, comedy surprises; the Mallinoffs, adagio stars; Theresa Maciola, accordionist; the Lockwheels, skaters, and music by Enrico Leide's Capitolians.

Kilbourne Family Returns, Still Living Merrily

The daffy Kilbourne family has returned to Atlanta this week via "Merrily We Live," the Hal Roach comedy which was brought back by the Rialto for another run.

If you remember, this is the show in which Billie Burke plays one of her best scatter-brain roles as she scurries about shouting loudly and offering jobs to tramps she hopes to reform, but who usually enter through the front door and steal out the back with their portion of the family fortune.

In one of her moments of benevolence, she offers a job to a handsome young man dressed in tramp's clothing and hires him before he can explain his attire is that of a highbrow fisherman. Brian Aherne thus becomes the new schauffeur and decides to stick around and watch the fun. Interest in the Kilbourne's eldest daughter, played by Constance Bennett, had something to do with the decision.

Aherne is inducted into service as a second butler for a state dinner party and finds himself being inadvertently introduced as a guest by the absent-minded Mrs. Kilbourne. He plays the farce, is an immediate success and ends up with dates with the senator's daughter, which burns Miss Bennett up. Next he's reported dead and the slap-stick comedy of the dead returning to life is employed.

Others playing comedy roles to perfection are Alan Mowbray, as the butler; Patsy Kelly, as the maid; Bonita Granville, as the younger sister; Tom Brown, as the brother, and others.

'Blockade' Plays At Center Thursday

The Center theater presents "You and Me," starring Sylvia Sidney and George Raft, today and tomorrow. The stars play the roles of young ex-convicts, working for a philanthropic department store owner whose hobby is to give men and women a chance to go straight.

Raft after making a confession to Miss Sidney about his shady past marries, but she conceals her past from him because she knows by probation regulations, she may not marry. But learning of her past, he becomes embittered, gives up his struggle to go straight, returns to the mob, and is saved from another criminal career by the daring action of Miss Sidney.

"Goodby Broadway," featuring Charles Winninger, Alice Brady, Tom Brown and Dorothea Kent, will play Tuesday. It is a comedy which has many situations of touching sentiment and suspenseful drama. Presenting also Tommy Riggs, who brings his Betty Lou act to the screen direct from a record run on Rudy Vallee radio program.

Wednesday, "Presciption for Romance," with Kent Taylor, Wendy Barrie and Mischa Auer, will be featured. A romantic comedy, which tells of the mad and amusing chase that goes on in Hungary, where an American embezzler seeks refuge.

"Blockade," starring Madeline Carroll and Henry Fonda, is booked Thursday and Friday. The stirring events of the Civil War which is now raging in Spain form the background. A beautiful, sophisticated girl and a handsome, simple young farmer, who meet in sunny, peaceful Spain and fall in love, then go to war.

"Battle of Broadway," featuring Victor McLaglen, Louise Hovick and Brian Donlevy, plays Saturday.

EMORY THEATER TO OPEN FRIDAY

Film House at Oxford and North Decatur Roads.

Residents of the Emory and Druid Hills sections will have their own community motion picture house when the Emory theater, on Oxford road at North Decatur road, opens at 6:30 o'clock Friday.

The theater will be of semi-modernistic design, and will embody all the latest features in seating, heating and cooling. Seating capacity is to be approximately 600, according to Tom Miller, who will be in charge of the operation. Miller announces that pictures from all the producing companies will be used at the Emory, and a policy of selecting only proven attractions for showing will be followed.

The inaugural program for opening day will be announced later this week.

THEATER GUILD PLANS NEW ACTING COURSES

A 10-week course in acting technique under the direction of Leigh Seymour is being planned by the Atlanta Theater Guild, Mrs. Paula Causey, director, announced yesterday.

Date of the lessons will be announced later, and persons interested are requested to call Hemlock 9539 or Dearborn 0461.

Two one-act plays, "Modesty" and "Vignette," will be presented by the guild members at the Castle Playhouse Friday and Saturday. These plays are called "workshop" plays and are given twice a month.

Tyrone Power is the queen's lover in "Marie Antoinette," the picture in which Norma Shearer portrays the life of the last Queen of France. The film has been brought back to the Rhodes that those who missed it when it showed here in August might see it.

Stablemates. That's Mickey Rooney and Wallace Beery. You'll see these two top-notch actors in a picture by that name which is scheduled to follow "Too Hot to Handle" at the Grand. The opening is set for Friday.

Teen-Age Girls Like Deanna Durbin But Boys Say Gary Cooper Is Best

Miss Teen Age America will scratch, and pull her 14-year-old boy friend's hair in arguments over the respectful merits of Deanna Durbin and Gary Cooper as box-office attractions, but if the price of admission to a movie is at stake the fighters will compromise and both go see Errol Flynn.

The movie star likes and dislikes of 14-year-old boys and girls was obtained in a nation-wide survey conducted by the youth magazine, Young America.

The girls rated Deanna Durbin tops, while the boys picked Gary Cooper.

On the girls' list in order named were Deanna, Shirley Temple, Sonja Henie, Jane Withers, Robert Taylor, Nelson Eddy, Errol Flynn, Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, and Loretta Young.

On the boys' list in this order were Cooper, Errol Flynn, Paul Muni, Don Ameche, Shirley Temple, Spencer Tracy, Joe E. Brown, Gene Autry, Deanna Durbin, and Clark Gable.

Name of a male actor appeared no higher than fifth on the girls' list. He was Robert Taylor.

But when the boys and girls agree to compromise, for the sake of seeing a movie, they would rank the Hollywood big shots in this order:

Errol Flynn, Gary Cooper, Shirley Temple, Deanna Durbin, Paul Muni, Jane Withers, Robert Taylor, Sonja Henie, Nelson Eddy, and Don Ameche.

Norma Shearer Plays 'Marie' At Rhodes

"Marie Antoinette" has been brought back by the Rhodes theater for another week's run, that those who failed to see it the first time might have another opportunity.

Norma Shearer, who portrays Antoinette, is cast in one of the best roles of her career. As her screen lover, Tyrone Power appears. Raymond Morley is cast as Louis XVI.

The story tells the tragic life of the little Austrian who came to a poverty-stricken France expecting to find happiness with a husband she had never seen. He had no time or use for her, and she was forced to find happiness with other people. That is where Power steps in.

History of France is told in the film with remarkable truth, the historians say, and lavish settings make it a truly remarkable picture.

Gable, Loy Play Second Week At Loew's

"Too Hot To Handle," the Clark Gable-Myrna Loy feature reviewed last week, has been held over for another week's run at the Grand.

The story concerns two rival newscameramen, Gable and Walter Pidgeon, who battle over two or three continents and as many oceans in efforts to obtain scoops for their respective newsreel companies. Once, however, the rivals join forces long enough to finance an expedition to South America that takes Myrna Loy in quest of her lost brother.

Miss Loy, an aviatrix who cracks up during a round-the-world flight, is the heart throb of both cameramen. She is signed to a contract by Walter Connolly, manager of Gable's company, and with the screen he-man obtains some remarkable pictures of a burning ship at sea.

As said last week, "Too Hot to Handle" is entertaining but hardly a picture to be classed as exceptional. The newsreel cameraman's life is reproduced by Hollywood with no more authenticy than that of a news reporter. However, the photography is very good and the acting of Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo and Walter Connolly is something to write about.

As pretty a trio that ever blessed one family and what's more there is another beautiful sister appearing in "Four Daughters," which opens Friday at the Fox theater. Above are the Lane sisters, Rosemary, Priscilla and Lola.

"Merrily We Live" is the motto of the daffy Kilbourne family whose antics give entertainment at the Rialto theater this week. Brian Ahern, left, finds the family most amusing but Constance Bennett, the eldest daughter, is the one that attracts his heart. "Merrily We Live" is playing currently at the Rialto.

Villain J. Carrol Naish is bragging because his seven-year-old daughter, Carol Elaine, won a swimming cup at Lake Arrowhead for showing the greatest improvement during the summer.

Louise Campbell is planning a farewell party for William Wellman and his wife before the producer-director of "Men With Wings" sails for Bermuda.

Pons Sings Here Tomorrow; Iturbi Plays Thursday

Bad man J. Carrol Naish is not impressed by the pleas of Nurse Gail Patrick as she begs him to put into shore so medical attention can be obtained for Lloyd Nolan, radio operator severely wounded in a gun fight aboard the ship. It is a scene from "King of Alcatraz," which opens at the Capitol today.

Hollywood Plans More Elaborate Shorts To Meet Audience Demand

Hollywood predicts 1939 will be a short year.

They mean the short subjects will find a more important place on the movie program at your favorite motion picture theater.

Last year the major producers speculatively began to put a few intelligence vitamins into the diet of the long undernourished and undeveloped specimen, the short subject.

Lavished with this attention, the short—once a program orphan—stepped out to become the industry's fair-haired child, the producers declare. Last year the newspapers and magazines gave more space to the short subject in one year than in the preceeding 10 years combined. Bookings have increased.

Scheduled to make 92 subjects next season—at the rate of one every four days—Producer Jack Chertok's shorts department is already a beehive of activity on the M.-G.-M. lot. On the new schedule are six more "Crime Does Not Pay" two-reelers. Besides winning Academy Award honors two seasons in succession, these informative dramatizations have received the commendation and support of many civic welfare groups, newspapers and public officials such as Chief G-Man Edgar Hoover and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Production facilities of the studios will be placed at the disposal of the two-reelers. They are to be staged and mounted as elaborately as features in order to provide talent development opportunities for the studio's various contract players. Also they will serve to test musical talent, using composers such as Forrest and Wright, who contributed the popular "Donkey Serenade" to "The Firefly."

Covering a wide range of subjects but adhering mainly to the humorous treatment for which he is noted, Pete Smith will contribute 13 one-reel specialties to the new schedule. A happy combination of enlightenment as well as entertainment is the formula for the Smith subjects which next year will follow the same pattern set by his "Anaesthesia," "The Story of Doctor Carver," "Modeling for Money," etc. Incidentally, Smith's "Penny Wisdom," featuring Prudence Penny, won an Academy award last year and more cook's tours of the kitchen, led by the noted home economist, will be forthcoming.

Continuing his excursions into mental phenomena and the psychic unknown which have created such a stir of interest, Commentator Carey Wilson will contribute 10 miniatures to the new season's lineup. He will also launch a "Soldiers of Peace" series, which will dramatize the heroic struggles of scientists who have devoted their lives to the cause of humanity.

Radio Commentator John Nesbitt, whose "Passing Parade" program is currently to be heard on a CBS nation-wide network, will contribute a series of 10 "Passing Parade" shorts.

Robert Benchley, of course, will remain very much in the short picture during the coming year, continuing his screen lectures on the customs and habits of Mr. and Mrs. Everyday America. His dissertations on the art of appreciating the trivia in life, such as last year's "How To Start the Day" and "How to Spend an Evening Alone," will encompass eight new and varied topics during the coming season.

And those perennial favorites over a period of almost two decades, the Our Gang youngsters, will present 12 more comedies based upon the everyday life of typical American children. "Alfalfa" Switzer, Darla Hood, "Porky" Lee and "Buckwheat" Thomas head the roster of talented youngsters which will include several new personalities to be developed during the coming year.

Parolee in Love

Sylvia Sidney plays the role of a girl out on parole who falls in love but is forbidden to marry by the stipulations of her release. She'll be seen in "You and Me" at the Center theater today and tomorrow.

Lily Will Open '38 All Star Concerts

By MOZELLE HORTON YOUNG.

Lily Pons will sing here tomorrow night! The long anticipated concert time is almost here. Her concert will formally open the all-star concert series for the season, and it is fitting that such a brilliant star should open such a brilliant season as the all-star series offers. Her concert will be at the new city auditorium at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Miss Pons' Atlanta appearance is her first in America this season, though she has just recently returned from a South American concert and opera tour that met with tremendous success.

Miss Pons spent two and a half months in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro, making concert, opera, and radio appearances, in music auditoriums that were sold out eight weeks in advance of her rarival. When the curtain fell on her first performance of "Lucia di Lammermoor," Miss Pons was recalled to the stage for more than 25 bows.

Tears Are Shed.

At her last performance there more than 5,000 members of the audience bade Miss Pons farewell by waving handkerchiefs. The effect, according to newspaper reports, was that of a white sheet spread across the vast Teatro Colon. Many tears were shed on the departure of the diminutive diva, who is the musical toast of the entire South American continent.

Miss Pons' appearance here will be one of many which she will make throughout the United States on her eighth annual American concert tour.

The little coloratura, who, as report goes, weighs only 101 pounds, was totally unknown to fame when she arrived in this country to sing leading roles at the Metropolitan Opera House. True, she was singing in opera abroad, but only in the provincial opera houses. Between engagements she was studying seriously her operatic repertoire with her teacher, Alberti, in Paris.

While filling an engagement at Montpelier, a university town of southern France, she was heard by a former Metropolitan opera tenor who advised her to try for the "Met" and cabled Gatti-Casazzai about her.

Came to America.

Miss Pons set sail for America. On her arrival, she sang for a triumvirate of the opera, composed of Gatti-Casazza, Otto H. Kahn and Maestro Serafin. The result was a five-year contract with the "Met." Today Lily Pons is considered the most famous coloratura in the music world.

Her program for Atlanta lists in the first group "Dites que faut il faire?" annonymous, 18th century, and three songs by Rossini, "La Promessa," "Tirolese" and "Una voce poco fa," from the "Barber of Seville." Her second group includes "Comment disaient-ils" and "Oh! quad je dors," both by Liszt; "Pastorale," La Forge; and "Pretty Mocking Bird," Bishop-La Forge.

Lily Pons, leading coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company and favorite of concert stage, screen and radio, who will open the 1938-39 season of the All-Star Concert Series at the new city auditorium at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Jose Iturbi, world-famous Spanish pianist, who will open the season for the Atlanta Music Club with a concert in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club Thursday night.

Pianist Plays At Woman's Club

Jose Iturbi, Spanish pianist and conductor who is called the "complete artist," will give a piano concert at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium as the opening concert of the season for the Atlanta Music Club. Mrs. Harold Cooledge is president of the club.

Membership cards to the club give admission to the concert, though single tickets will be sold to nonmembers. There are also a few music club memberships left, and may be obtained the first of the week from Mrs. E. Raymond Johnson, membership chairman, 106 Brighton road, S. W.

Iturbi was born in Valencia, Spain. After studying in his native city and in Barcelona, the people of Valencia made up a purse to send the wonder youth to Paris.

Attended Conservatory.

There he attended the Conservatory by day and played in cafes at night to earn his food and board. But at 17 he was graduated with first honors. He was head of the faculty of the Conservatory of Geneva for four years, which post he gave up to devote his entire time to concert work.

The Spanish pianist arrived for the first time in the United States in October, 1929. In a little more than three months he had become a sensation in America. Since that time he has returned each season, and has become an outstanding favorite.

Iturbi's phenomenal development as a conductor has also been significant. Always a student of orchestral literature and baton technique, his chance came in the spring of 1933.

Mexico Conquered.

He was in Mexico City, playing 20 recitals in six weeks. The public was in the palm of his hand. It was then that he seized the opportunity to step from keyboard to podium, a step so successful that since that time his years have been divided between playing and conducting.

Iturbi's program for Thursday night opens with the Air With Variations, "The Harmonious Blacksmith," by Handel, followed by Bach's "Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue," and then the masterful and brilliant "Etudes Symphoniques," by Robert Schumann.

The second half of the program will open with two Chopin works, "Fantasie-Impromptu" and "Scherzo in B Flat Minor." These will be followed by "Poissons d'or (Goldfish) and "Feus d artifice" (fireworks), both by Debussy. The program will close with the "Ritual Fire Dance," by DeFalla, Spanish composer.

Following the program the club will honor Iturbi with a reception in the ballroom of the clubhouse, with the entire audience invited.

Danger is their business and Myrna Loy and Clark Gable brave overwhelming odds to get newsreel shots in the current feature, "Too Hot to Handle," held over by the Grand.

Atlanta Music Notes + + + By MOZELLE HORTON YOUNG

This week brings the gala formal opening of the 1938-39 concert season for Atlanta, and concert goers are eagerly awaiting tomorrow night. Lily Pons, tiny prima donna with the glorious coloratura voice that has brought her fame in opera, in concert, on the radio and on the screen, will give the first concert of the all-star series at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the new city auditorium. She will sing to a "sold-out" house.

Then at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night, at the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club, Jose Iturbi, Spanish pianist who is high on the list of the living great pianists, will open the season for the Atlanta Music Club.

The matinee concert will be sponsored by the public school system, with Anne Grace O'Callaghan, director of music in the city high schools, and Ruth Weegand, director of music in the elementary schools, in charge of organization plans for the city schools.

This is the centennial tour of the band, marking the 100th year of music in the navy.

Officers of the Alumnae Club are Frances Collins Hutcheson, president; Bonita Crowe, vice president; Dorothy Hyatt, secretary; Margie Griffith, historian; Carolyn Hall, warden and chaplain, and Lucile Scarborough, treasurer.

Mme. Ringo on Brenau Faculty.

Mme. Marguerite Ringo, dramatic soprano of New York city, comes to Brenau College as a recent addition to the music faculty. Mme. Ringo possesses a broad range of professional experience in opera, concert and oratorio, acquired both in this country and abroad.

She attended Mills College, Cal., and the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. Later she studied voice in New York city, where she coached for opera and concert with Maestro Guilio Setti, of the Metropolitan Company, and others. She also coached in Milan with numerous teachers, including Maestro Farinelli, son-in-law of the composer, Mascagni.

For several seasons she toured Italy singing in such dramatic operas as "Aida," "Il Trovatore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana." For two winters she appeared at the San Carlo theater at Naples, where she was acclaimed in "La Tosca."

She has sung with leading orchestras and organizations in America under the direction of Nicaolai Sokoloff, Leopold Stokowski and others. For a number of years she was soloist at Mount Morris Baptist church and the Episcopal Church of St. Mary the Virgin, in New York.

Mme. Ringo is a prominent Mu Phi Epsilon, and is nationally known as the founder of the New York city chapter.

Brenau will present Mme. Ringo in recital at an early date.

Phenomenal Lily Pons.

Many have asked, "What is the range of the voice of Lily Pons?"

It is said that the voice of the prima donna soars up and beyond the highest note of any of our most famous prima donnas of this or other days. She can sing with ease from middle C in the lower register to A above high C.

All the famous singers of other days—Patti, Melba, Sembrich, Etelka Gerster—never went beyond a high F in public, though Gerster could take a high G, so reports say.

In "Lucia di Lammermoor," the much discussed high note of the Mad Scene as Miss Pons sings it, is F, a whole tone higher than it is usually sung. Donizetti, it seems, wrote this scene in E flat. When he came to Paris for the presentation of his opera in 1938, he changed the key to F, because he found a singer who could take this note. Her name was Mlle. Nau, and she created a sensation in Paris at the time. Since that time, until Lily Pons appeared, no other singer has atttempted this key.

About Iturbi's Program.

When Jose Iturbi plays in concert Thursday night at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium the piece de resistance for most musicians and music lovers will be the "Etudes Symphoniques," by Robert Schumann. It is a work of the grandest caliber, which alone would be sufficient to secure Schumann a place in the first rank of composers for piano, so overpowering is the display of his own individual treatment of the instrument. It is profuse with ideas and he boldly turns the variation-form to an individual treatment. This work seems to be all-encompassing both in piano technique and piano tonal expression.

The whole work is dedicated to William Sterndale Bennett. The beginning of the chief subject is a fragment of the celebrated romance in Marschner's "Templer und Judin." It is an ingenious way of paying a compliment to his beloved English composer.

Young Artists' Gala Program.

The Young Artists' Club, division of the Atlanta Music Club, will present a brilliant program, formally opening this season's programs for the club on Tuesday night, October 18, at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium. The program will be under the sponsorship of the Atlanta Music Club. The public is invited, no admission being charged.

A program of real artistic merit and brilliant content will be presented by Paul Overbay, tenor, and Mozelle Horton Young, accompanist; Elizabeth Jackson, violinist, and Alice Gray Harrison, pianinst; Patricia Makinson, soprano, with Eleanor McDonald Elsas, accompanist, and J. T. Pittman, playing a piano concerto, with Harriette Hirsch at the second piano.

Officers of the club are Elizabeth Jackson, president; Nona Early Randall, vice president; William King, treasurer; Julian Barfield, secretary; Mozelle Horton Young, program chairman, and Alice Gray Harrison, co-chairman, and Ruth Dabney Smith, publicity chairman.

Counselors' Association Luncheon.

Mrs. Armand Carroll, chairman of the Counselors' Association of the Georga Federation of Music Clubs, announces a luncheon meeting of this organization to be held at the Atlanta Athletic Club next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

There will be no special speaker, but each counselor will be asked to tell some interesting experience or theory which she has found helpful in dealing with child psychology.

The Counselors' Association is composed of counselors of junior music clubs throughout the state, and this meeting will assemble teachers and counselors from all sections of the state.

Student Guild Meets.

The Student Concert guild, division of the Atlanta Music Club, will hold its first meeting of the season at the home of the president, Eugenia Snow, on Palisades road, at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. New members will be introduced and a social hour will follow.

Thursday Morning Music Club.

The Thursday Morning Music Club will give its October program on October 13 at the home of Bonita Crowe, 965 Myrtle street, N. E., with Mrs. Crowe and Mrs. M. E. Patterson as hostesses.

The subject will be "Early Days in American Music," adapted from John Tasker Howard's "Our American Music." Lenus Daniell will be the program leader. Those presenting the musical program will be Frances Stukes, Mary Martin, Emilie Parmalee, Agnes Adams Stokes, Margie Griffith and Louisa Allensworth.

First Orchestra Rehearsal.

Anne Grace O'Callaghan, director of music in the high schools, reports a most successful meeting of the In-and-About Atlanta High School Orchestra at the organization meeting last Wednesday night, held at O'Keefe auditorium. About 50 high school students registered for the orchestra. A large number of parents and teachers were also present to give encouragement to this worth-while orchestra, which is just beginning its second year.

At this first rehearsal, work will be begun on the numbers to be played at the gala concert in January. Among the selections they will start rehearsing immediately are "The Dagger Dance," from Victor Herbert's "Natoma;" the first movement of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," "Valse Triste," Sibelius, and the slow movement of a new symphony called "The Southland Symphony," by an American composer, Harry Grant. The themes of this symphony are based on melodies by Stephen Foster.

A feature of the work of the orchestra will be a violin choir, consisting of violins playing in four-part harmony, with piano accompaniment. Each violin teacher of the city is asked to train a complete quartet of violins. They will play "Largo," from Dvorak's "New World Symphony;" "Amaryllis," by Ghys, and "The Swiss Song," by Ethel Barns.

Little Known Facts About Well Known People

Louisa May Alcott—A Great Author Who Was Bored by Her Own Masterpiece

By DALE CARNEGIE.

When the movie version of "Little Women" made its record run of three weeks at Radio City, the demand for seats was so great that people stood in a long line that extended for several blocks. Shoppers, bent on their Christmas errands, looked on in astonishment. Such a sight had never been witnessed before in the history of New York.

The story of how this sentimental masterpikece was written is an astonishing tale in itself.

In her youth, Louisa M. Alcott, had been a whistling tomboy. Even when she grew up, she had no interest whatever in girls and she didn't want to write about girls. But her publisher insisted that she write a girl's story. She consented, but inwardly she rebelled.

Now, it is almost an axiom among writers that unless the author himself feels joy in writing his tale, no one will find joy in reading it.

Yet, Louisa Alcott found no happiness whatever in writing "Little Women." In fact, it bored her, bored her until she could hardly stand it. She repeatedly threw down her pencil and paper, whistled for her dog, and went bouncing off through the woods. On other days, she tossed her manuscript aside and hurried across the town to argue with her friend, Ralph Waldo Emerson.

When she had finished "Little Women," she thought she had written a failure. But it immediately became a "best seller," and has remained a "best seller," year after year, for almost three-score years and ten. Twenty million people have read "Little Women" in America alone, and at a recent convention of American librarians, "Little Women" was voted the most popular girl's book in all the world.

When she was a young, exuberant girl, people up in Concord, Mass., thought that Louisa Alcott was "queer." She whistled—and nice girls didn't whistle. She ran races with the boys and held her skirts up above her ankles—and nice girls didn't do that. She even climbed up an apple tree and sat on a limb and read a book. The best people in Concord prophesied that she would come to no good end.

Louisa Alcott was driven to writing in order to help support her sick mother and younger sisters. Her father was an aimable impractical visionary. He gave a lecture now and then, which nobody really wanted to hear, and got five or ten dollars for it; but, most of the time, he sat at home scratching his elbow and praising the simple life, while his family literally didn't know where its next meal was coming from.

He was a very generous man and he once gave away his last bit of firewood to a needy family. When his wife and daughters complained that their own home was cold, he said: "Now, don't worry. The Lord will send us firewood." So the family went to bed to keep warm.

A driving snow storm swept over New England that night; and when the Alcott family awoke the next morning, they discovered that some farmer had got stuck in the snow with a load of wood, and had abandoned it in front of their house. Louisa's father believed God had sent the wood to him; so he went out and helped himself to it.

When Louisa Alcott first began sending her stories to the publishers, they returned like bouncing balls. Finally, one editor told her that she would never be able to write anything with a popular appeal—and he warned her that she ought to renounce her literary ambitions and stick to her sewing.

LOUISA MAY ALCOTT.

The best people said she'd come to no good end.

The old, white, frame house in which Louisa Alcott lived is still standing in Concord, Mass. Twenty-three thousand people make pilgrimages to that house every year. To many of them, it is all but holy ground, and when I visited that house, I saw a woman literally weeping as she wandered through the rooms where Meg and Jo and Beth and Amy had lived and loved and cried.

An ambitious young man, eager to be a novelist, once asked Louisa Alcott if she would advise him to become an author. "No," she replied. "Not if you can do anything else—even dig ditches."

Introducing New Friends

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

For a couple of months in the fall, October and November, all of our minds dwell at some length on the fall planted bulbs and visions pass before our mind of beauty that we will enjoy next spring. Seldom it is that we forget our friends, the tulips, or the hyacinths or the daffodils. These enormous old families have so many sons and daughters, grandchildren, uncles and aunts that parade their virtues that it almost is impossible for them to be forgotten.

There are a number of spring flowering bulbs that fill very definite uses in our gardens that are so often forgotten. It is about these little orphans that we want to talk about today.

Ranunculus.

What a pity it is that there is a bulb named ranunculus. If that name means no more to you than it does to us—it means not one thing. Such an ugly name—yet the flower is one of the brightest, cheeriest, daintiest little flowers that we have. It is an ideal rock garden plant since it grows seldom more than 12 inches high and has right attractive foliage. Called ranunculus when it is a little dainty pompon dahlia-like flower, called ranunculus when in the spring we will be reminded of enormous double popplies that for some reason never grow up. The colors that are found in the ranunculus are many, including white, yellow, rose, crimson, scarlet and orange.

The bulb from which this flower is grown is most unusual in appearance. It seems that it is a tiny clump of dahlia tubers, and they are as hard, dry and brittle as if every bit of life is gone. In planting place the prongs down and cover very firmly with from two to three inches of soil. For the most effective use they may be planted in groups of about six to twelve bulbs in a clump. Plant them fairly close together—about six inches, as the plants are not very large.

Anemones.

The best companion for ranunculus in the garden, either in the rock garden or in the bulb border, is the dainty little anemone. Anemone is very fortunate in that it has acquired a common name, windflower. This common name has not been approved by the American joint committee on horticulture nomenclature, but they have our permission to go ahead and call the poor little fellow anemone while we are calling it windflower.

Windflower or anemone is a beautiful little dwarf spring flower seldom growing as high as a foot. It makes an ideal plant for the rock garden and the St. Brigid anemone likes a moist, cool situation. A good plan to follow is that of placing considerable peat moss about the bulbs when they are planted.

The French anemones, very similar to the St. Brigid in appearance prefer a well-drained situation, and for this reason should be planted with a handful of sand. Care should be taken that there is plenty of natural drainage.

By the way, these two companion flowers may both be used as pot flowers and grown in the house. For best results follow the old-fashioned plan of planting them in shallow pots, plunging them into the ground and leaving them there until early in December when they may be brought into the house. Do not bring them directly to the hottest room in the house, but first leave them in the sun parlor for a few days or a week and then bring them in to a warmer room. Because of their dwarf growth and habit of blooming prolifically they make a most pleasing house plant.

Grape Hyacinths.

In the very earliest spring we have our crocus with us warning us that winter is over and the hot days will soon be back. The crocus reminds us of the yellows and whites that seem to characterize our earliest spring flowers. And two beautiful colors they are after spending a winter that is all too full of browns and grays. The one color that needs to be added to this couple is blue and nowhere can be found a better blue than in heavenly blue grape hyacinths. This dainty little flower will add as much to your garden colors as will the blue-birds that are at that time heading north again.

These grape hyacinths have a wonderful virtue in that they will grow well under almost any conditions no matter how adverse they may be. For best results they prefer a rather light sandy soil, fairly well open in character. Our old friend, drainage, that has to be thought of so often when considering any of the bulbous plants, must be considered. Almost all of the bulbs lie in the ground almost dormant throughout the winter. If the yare allowed to stand in the cold winter water they are almost certain to rot before they start active growth in the spring.

Grape hyacinths are probably most effective when used as a border for the perrennial border, as a border for the bulb beds or borders, or as a border for the shrubbery planting. They should be planted in drifts, or naturalized for best results and most startling, attractive effects.

Snowdrops.

For a real early warning of the coming of spring, be sure and plant a few snowdrops. These too, have a funny name that is sometimes used, galanthus. Given a rather light soil, in sun or shade, and left to themselves, they usually become well established and will need no further attention for years except a light mulch in the fall. It is one of the best of all bulbs for tucking away in corners, close to the base of larger evergreens, between clumps of larger growing bulbous plants. Plant the bulbs as soon as they may be secured and plant them fairly shallow, about three inches.

Snowdrops are seldom planted in the house, and yet they make a very attractive plant there. They should be planted in a rather shallow container, such as those bowls generally used for planting paper white narcissus.

Crocus.

One of our old friends that each spring we recognize as a new one, is the crocus, probably the best known of the late winter flowering bulbs. There are three distinct ways of planting crocus for very charming and attractive effects.

The first is to plant the bulbs in a border irregularly grouped well toward the front of a mixed perennial or bulb border. In this case at least 25 should be in each group.

The second is to naturalize them in patches, or drifts, along the front edge of the shrubbery border with a few stray bulbs running into the grass.

The third and most common method of planting is to naturalize them on the lawn, either on terraces or banks or underneath the small trees. They make a most charming effect.

Crocus should not be planted too deep—about three inches. If they are to be planted in the lawn a dibble should be used in order that the grass will not be harmed in any way.

While growing satisfactorily in a wide range of soil, they like hyacinths, prefer a well-drained, gritty soil.

The Planets---Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON.

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

OCTOBER 2 — SUNDAY: Some bitter facts may have to be faced today, and a feeling of depression is apt to abound, unless you resolve to keep your spirits above pessimism. All you do today should be thought out carefully ,and a great deal of care should be used in health. People born in the early days of January, April, July and October are more likely to find their endeavors meeting disfavor, or heavier burdens placed upon them.

OCTOBER 3—MONDAY: During the entire day until 4:51 p. m. favors relaxation. You are apt to run into friction, lack of co-operation, and people are likely to be nervous, in a hurry, and a bundle of nerves. It will be better to try to find some point on which you can agree with people, and guard against accidents. Conditions change surprisingly after 4:51 p. m. It is a good time to seek favors, deal with people in high positions, legal affairs, finances and professional activities.

OCTOBER 4—TUESDAY: If your words and acts are calmly considered, this can be a favorable period for dealings with older people, real estate, affairs of long standing, and affairs of a well organized nature. However, there is apt to be a feeling of strain and nervousness and this is a most inauspicious time for dealings in liquids and chemicals, or for making sudden changes.

OCTOBER 5 — WEDNESDAY: Good and adverse aspects alternate through the day, making this a favorable day for routine affairs, and for the continuation of work already started. However, this is not a good time for buying and selling, sturying and traveling, for asking favors of those in authority, nor for anything concerning artistic matters.

OCTOBER 6—THURSDAY: Strong influences of an adverse nature predominate throughout the day. Care should be used in all contacts as confusion and depression seem to creep around all affairs. This is not a favorable day for beginning important matters or for matters of a risky nature.

OCTOBER 7—FRIDAY: The best portion of the day is previous to 11:45 a. m. During this time travels, dealings with friends, and out of the ordinary affairs will result favorably. Aggressiveness should be curbed during the entire day, but those things which require energy and enthusiasm may meet with splendid and quick results.

OCTOBER 8—SATURDAY: Previous to 11:36 a. m. is a good time for study, literary affairs, correspondence, communications and dealings with close kin, but is inauspicious for dealings with older people, matters pertaining to land, or for getting things done quickly. Between 11:36 a. m. and 6:39 p. m. deliberate action should be given to all matters. Avoid nervous haste, strain and overwork. The entire afternoon and evening suggest that you guard against worry, or a fear of the future, and be on guard to detect misrepresentations.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE.

Should you receive an important telephone call, giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By MRS. FLETCHER PEARSON CROWN

Question: I have some English ivy on the west side of my house. The leaves have turned black and appear scalded. Can you suggest a cause for this?

Answer: I have had the same trouble since the terrifically hot weather in August. Also my acuba have many leaves scalded. I feel that it has been caused by the dry heat.

Question: How long before I should plant narcissus to be in bloom for Christmas?

Answer: I think that you can count on blooms in about eight weeks from the time that you plant them. I know that it takes three weeks to force lily-of-the-valley pips to bloom from the time that they are planted.

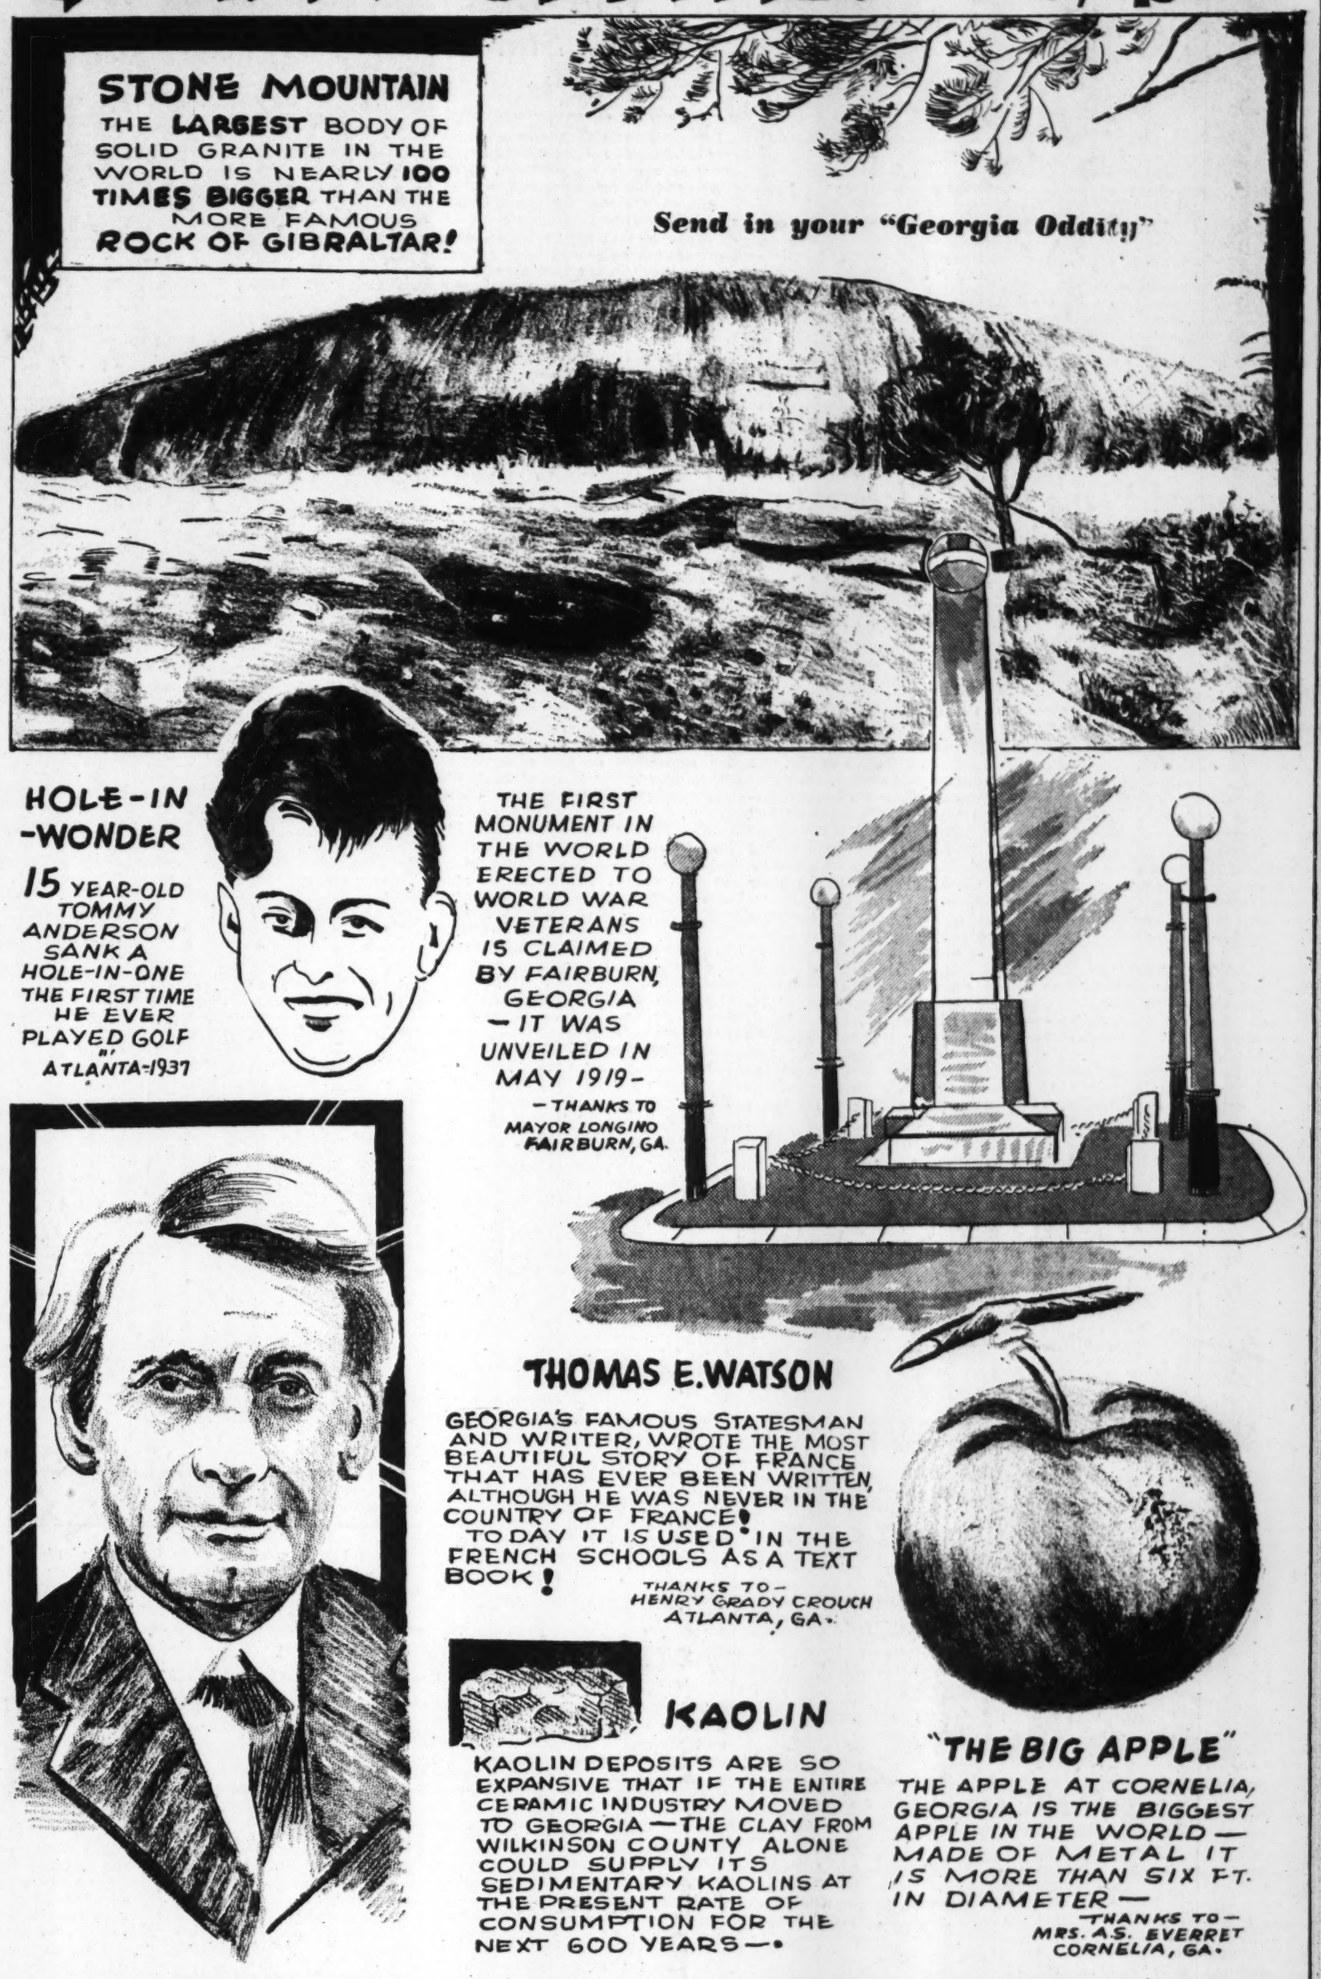

Question: How early would you transplant pansies?

Answer: I find it hard to say, for so much depends on the weather. If October is cool and moist I should transplant early. If the weather remains hot and dry I should wait for cooler weather. Pansies like moisture and cool temperatures, and much food. It would be well to make the bed in which you will later place them. Use plenty of humus—well decayed manure will provide this.

Do not forget that October is the month when we give lime to our lilacs. Use a teacup full for a plant about four feet high. Or a pint for one six or seven feet tall. Remember that soil treated with lime gives up it's plant food readily and it is necessary to replace it oftener. So late in February or early in March be sure to feed lilacs generously. Well decayed manure is splendid, but you can use super-phosphate. Fertilize again in July.

If you wish to have Oriental poppies next spring you should plant them at once. Fall is the best time of all the year to move these plants.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO JUSTICE?

client is the woman supposed to have been seen skulking behind an automobile in the neighborhood where this man was shot. The man who supposedly saw her is known to the district attorney and is known to me. His name is Mesa and he lives at 4 South Portland avenue.

"He was in court on Thursday when Miss O'Keefe was arraigned and he told detectives at the time that she was not the woman he had seen skulking behind the automobile. This woman is a respectable, high-class, cultured lady—kept in prison without bail by the district attorney, who hopes to build up a case against her."

However, he consented to a postponement until the following Monday.

The next morning state troopers visited Mrs. Mae McCann, vacationing near Port Jefferson, L. I., and took her to Brooklyn for questioning, along with a guest, Charles McEwan, a former reporter she had known for years.

Mrs. McCann said that, at the time Frank was murdered, she was at Port Jefferson with McEwan and another man, James Conlon, a Brooklyn taxi driver. She said that from 6 o'clock until midnight the night of the 20th she had been drinking with the two men at a cabaret known as Captain Romaine's place. They went directly to the cabin after leaving the cabaret, she said.

The former wife related that, after she learned Frank had fallen for another woman, she hired private detectives to get evidence of adultery upon which to base a New York divorce. The sleuths had gotten nowhere. Then, she said, she had moved to South Oxford street, near Miss O'Keefe's home, so that she could watch the pair herself.

Finally she had taken a room in the very same house in which her rival lived. She had spent two weeks there, watching Frank and Gertrude as they spent hours at a time in the vestibule.

But she never got the evidence she was seeking, and so went to Reno.

Assistant District Attorney Digiovanna outlined his case against the accused woman in a hearing before Magistrate Charles Solomon on the 28th. One new detail brought out in this proceeding was the fact that the autopsy had indicated that Frank was mildly intoxicated at the time of his death.

Also brought out was that Miss O'Keefe had told Lieutenant John Meenahan: "I don't know of any one in the world who had more justification or provocation to kill him—but I didn't do it."

The case was adjourned until the next day at the request of the prosecutor. He said that a mysterious witness, who had called his office on the telephone, might have important evidence. However, this turned out to be another false alarm.

In his closing argument on the 29th, Digiovanna said:

"I think the people have made out a prima facie case. This case rests on circumstantial evidence against this defendant. I believe that we have established the two elements that are required for a magistrate to hold a defendant—first, that a crime has been committed; and second, that there is sufficient reason to believe that the accused committed that crime.

"She had a motive. She evaded, she concealed, she lied, she falsified. When you look at the case in its entirety there is sufficient evidence to hold this woman for the grand jury. There is sufficient motive. She had the opportunity, and I'm convinced from all the evidence of evasion and concealment that this defendant committed this crime."

He added that it was "certainly an important coincidence that this man was murdered on the block on which this woman lived a short time after they had a violent quarrel."

Leibowitz asserted that if there was anything in the evidence that pointed to the innocence of his client "it was the fact that when the cops came to her apartment she still harbored a fear that gorillas, hired by Frank, had been sent to get her letters."

He admitted the state had established that she had a motive, then added:

"A million people had an opportunity to kill him. If the district attorney went before a judge and jury with the evidence he has submitted here the judge would direct a verdict of acquittal."

Magistrate Solomon commented, "I think so, too."

The court then dismissed the homicide charge and ruled that Miss O'Keefe be released in $1,000 bail on the gun charge.

Leibowitz brought her to Solomon and she said in a clear, almost vibrant voice: "I want to thank you, Judge, for what you have done." She smiled for the first time.

"Don't thank me," he responded. "It is the law."

Later at the lawyer's office she told reporters: "I had nothing to worry about. My conscience was clear. No one could prove that I killed him. God Almighty Himself could'n't do it."

In the course of the interview she never referred to the dead man by name, but used the pronoun "him" or "he." She said she wanted to thank the public for having confidence in her, as well as all the friends who wrote to her while she was in jail.

"Now I hope the police and the district attorney will solve this case," she continued. "I will continue to do all I can to help them. I knew just about everything about him until 14 months ago. Since then I have not known much of his personal life, only what he told me."

Subsequently she pleaded guilty to possessing a gun without a permit and on November 1 three justices of the court of special sessions suspended sentence, remarking that she had been "punished enough."

And now a year has passed since the bank teller died. Who killed him and why?

CHATTAHOOCHEE NATIONAL FOREST IN NORTH GEORGIA A SCENIC WONDERLAND

Prominent citizens of Rome, Gainesville and Atlanta recently spent two days touring newly developed recreational areas in the Chattahoochee National Forest over a motorcade sponsored by the various Chambers of Commerce in cooperation with the U. S. Forest Service.

CHATSWORTH, GEORGIA, nestling at the foothills of the Blue Ridge, was the starting point of the Chattahoochee National Forest motorcade. This progressive north Georgia town has taken a leading part in extolling the recreational possibilities of Georgia's forest-covered hills.

THE MOTORCADE PAUSES for a photograph on the Winding Tray Mountain road, north of Helen, in the heart of the Chattahoochee National Forest.

MILLS CREEK Trout Rearing Station located in the heart of the Chattahoochee National Forest provided one of the most interesting stops for members of the entourage. Here 16 large circular rearing pools were filled to capacity with young rainbow trout, being reared for restocking Georgia's mountain streams.

ENCIRCLED by forest-clad mountains, Lake Winfield Scott was one of the outstanding beauty spots visited by the motorcade in the tour of the Chattahoochee National Forest.

(Right)
LAKE BURTON as seen from Glassy Mountain by members of the motorcade. This spectacular scenic view of the Blue Ridge was voted as being the most impressive of the entire trip.

Picturesque Albania

Typical scenes of romantic and modest little empire bordering Adriatic in southeast Europe where King Ahmed Zog I and his American-descended queen rule

SMOKER—A typical grizzle-visaged peasant subject to King Ahmed Zog I, of Albania. This old fellow is striking flint preparatory to lighting his pipe.

SMELTRY—At Tirana, capital of Albania, Europe and Asia meet in language, in religion and in architecture. The queen of King Zog I is co-ruler from this seat of the government.

CELEBRANTS—King Ahmed Zog I, of Albania, and his queen, the former Countess Apponyi, of Austria, granddaughter of Virginia Harding, a Virginian, are shown as they celebrated the tenth anniversary of Zog's rule.

(Left)
BELLE—Noted for their good nature and beauty, Albanian girls began celebration of the wedding of King Zog and the former Princess Geraldine Apponyi two weeks before the ceremony took place. This young lady is in costume with headdress of coins.

VIGILANTS — Although business appears to be scarce, this group of peasant merchants keep a sharp vigil at this Albanian market. The scene is typical.

(Right)
RUSTICS — Sturdy Albanian peasants are essentially nomadic and town life holds little attraction for them. They prefer to tend their flocks or care for the olive groves, principal activities.

(Right)

FALL FASHIONS ON PARADE

ONE OF SONJA HENIE'S favorite colors is blue and here she wears an all-blue ensemble. Blue fox collar is used to top a fitted coat of medium blue with wide belt. A halo hat of navy uses hyacinth blue as a head band to offset her curls.

THE VERSATILE CAPE of this red crepe evening ensemble turns into a hood at the merest suggestion. It hangs in sun-pleated folds around the shoulders and a godet in front of the skirt repeats the pleating.

(Right)
A STUDY IN PURPLE FOR AFTERNOON—A frock with low neck and big sleeves fashioned of purple silk crepe and fan pleated on bodice and skirt, is designed by Gaston for afternoon wear.

"THE LEGIONNAIRE" worn by Patricia Ellis, actresss, is a small crowned felt, encircled by a pair of waist-length chiffon scarfs, in contrasting colors, which sits most becomingly on Miss Ellis' fair tresses.

LITTLE GIRL BOWS around the hemline and topping the shoulders give youthful effect to this chiffon wool frock of royal blue from the wardrobe of Nancy Kelly, actress.

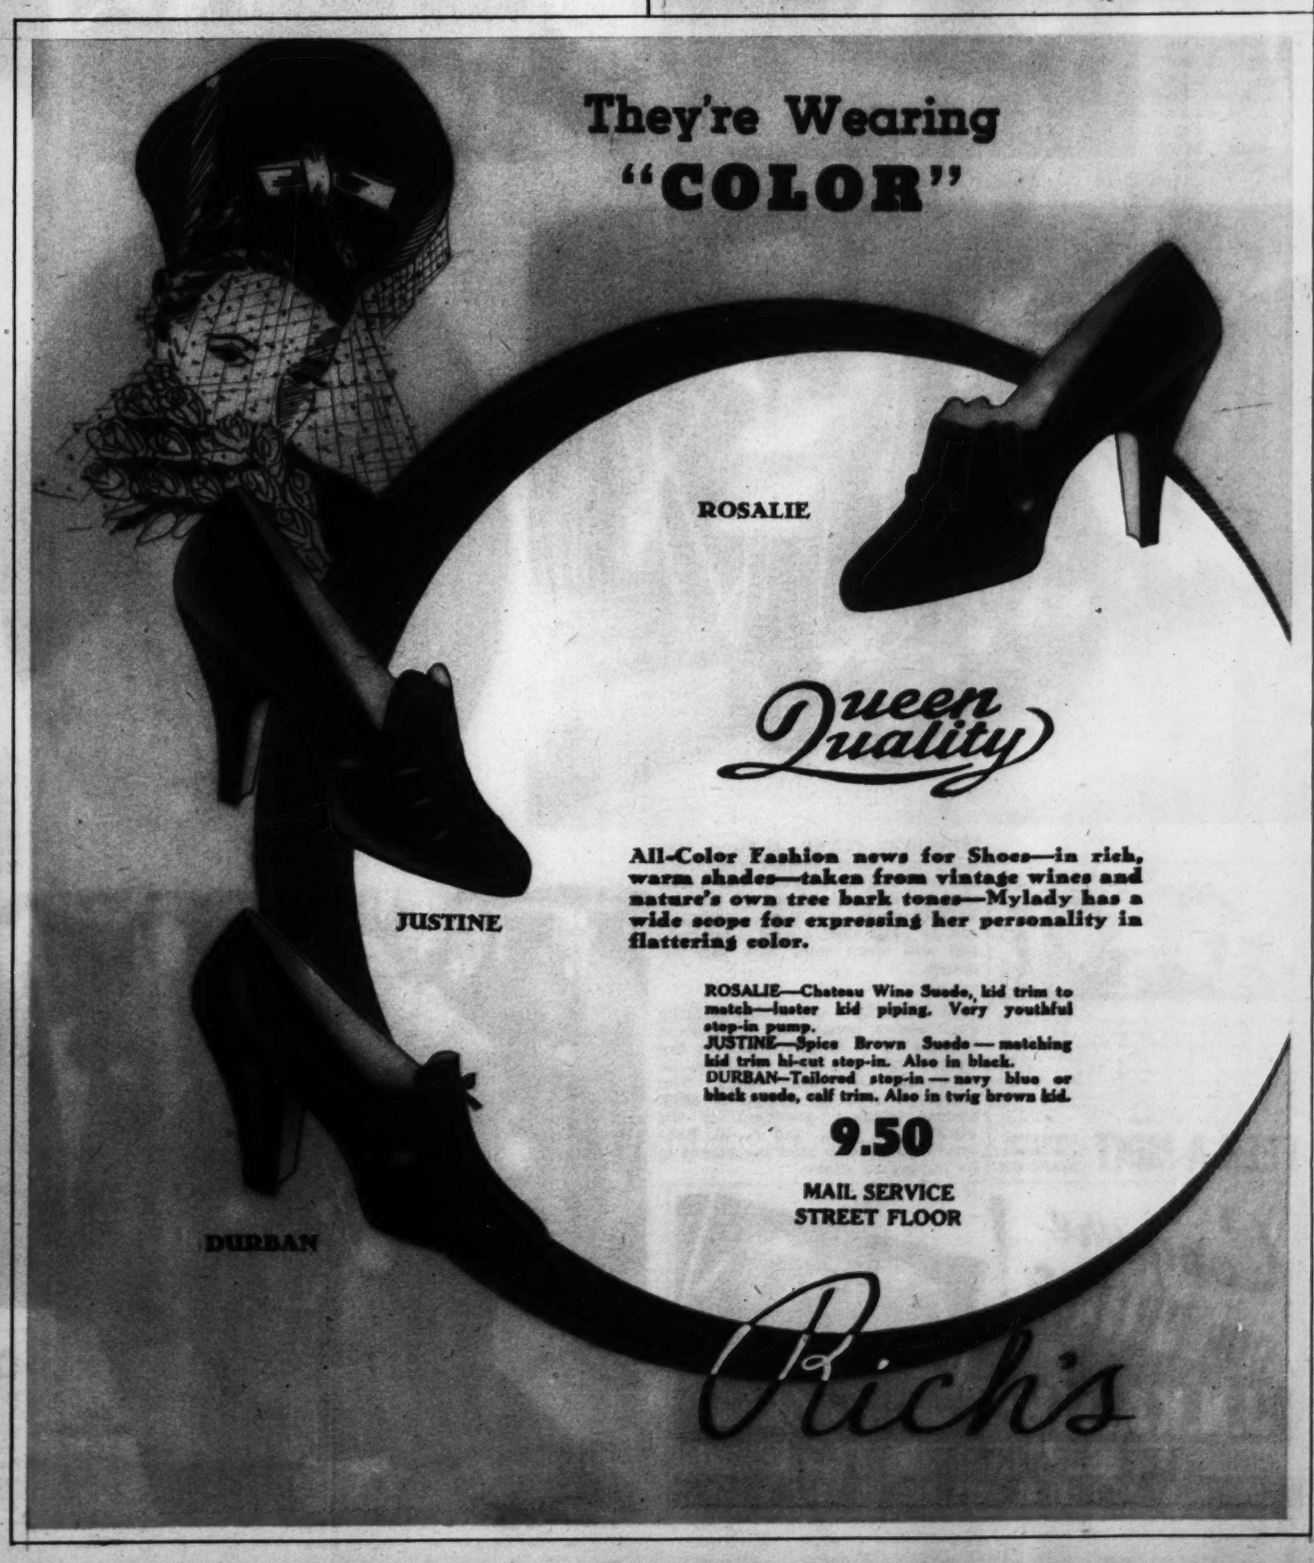

DIGNITY AND CHARM—This dignified evening gown has a skirt of taffeta backed velvet and a bloused bodice of white silk chiffon embroidered with sequins and beads. The wide shallow neckline and diminutive sleeves are flattering details.

MRS. LOUIE HAYGOOD HEARN, of Valdosta, who before her recent marriage was Miss Dorothy Mims Fudge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Fudge, of Colquitt.

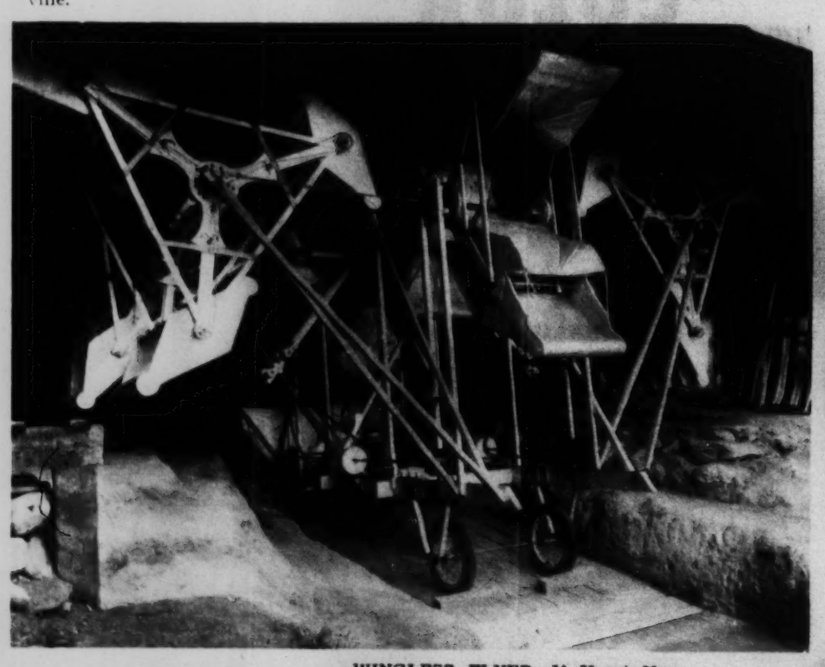

DRY DOCKED—When hurricane driven waves tore these boats from their moorings at City Point, South Boston, this scene of wild confusion resulted. Damage to small craft was estimated in the millions.

FREAK OF STORM—The steeple of the First Unitarian church, East Bridgewater, Mass., was snapped off at the base when the hurricane struck, hurled point-downward through the roof of the structure and into the pews. Police Chief E. F. Russell and Irving Humble, sexton, survey the damage.

(Right)

WINGLESS FLYER—If Henri Van Zandt and Louis Chequet, French inventors, are successful, the plane shown will be a marvel of the air. Without wings, it will rise vertically, can be suspended almost motionless and will mean many new uses for planes.

MISS CATHERINE STRAUB, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Straub, who was recently installed as worthy advisor of the Grant Park Rainbow Assembly No. 4. (Slayton)

SET ATTENDANCE RECORDS—Sunday school pupils at the Lakewood Christian church who were awarded medals for regular attendance. They are left to right, Martha Dunlap, age 17, regular attendance about 15 years; Joan Atkinson, age 7, regular attendance for 4 years; Gordon Atkinson, age 13, regular attendance for 5 years; Rev. C. L. Durham, pastor of the church, who awarded the medals; Buddy Davis and Mrs. Durham, a teacher. (Slayton)
